Belief in God as creator of all has practical consequences, pope says

BY CINDY WOODEN

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Professing faith in God as the creator of all human beings, or even simply recognizing that all people possess an inherent dignity, has concrete consequences for how people should treat one another and make decisions in politics, economics and social life, Pope Francis wrote.

“Human beings have the same inviolable dignity in every age of history and no one can consider himself or herself authorized by particular situations to deny this conviction or to act against it,” the pope wrote in his encyclical, “Fratelli Tutti, on Fraternity and Social Friendship.”

Pope Francis signed the encyclical Oct. 3 after celebrating Mass at the tomb of St. Francis of Assisi, and the Vatican released the more than 40,000-word text the next day.

The pope had been rumored to be writing an encyclical on nonviolence; and, once the COVID-19 pandemic struck, many expected a document exploring in depth his repeated pleas for the world to recognize the inequalities and injustices laid bare by the pandemic and adopt corrective economic, political and social policies.

“Fratelli Tutti” combines those two elements but does so in the framework set by the document on human fraternity and interreligious dialogue that he and Sheikh Ahmad el-Tayeb, grand imam of al-Azhar Mosque in Cairo, Egypt, signed in 2019.

In fact, in the new document Pope Francis wrote that he was “encouraged” by his dialogue with the Muslim leader and by their joint statement that “God has created all human beings equal in rights, duties and dignity, and has called them to live together as brothers and sisters.”

The encyclical takes its title from St. Francis of Assisi and is inspired by his “fraternal openness,” which, the pope said, calls on people “to acknowledge, appreciate and love each person, regardless of physical proximity, regardless of where he or she was born or lives.”

This is the cover of the English edition of Pope Francis’ new encyclical, “Fratelli Tutti, on Fraternity and Social Friendship.”
Death penalty denounced for ignoring inmates’ capability to be ‘redeemed’

By Natalie Hoefer

TERRE HAUTE (CNS) — On Sept. 24, Providence Sister Barbara Battista stood across the street from where her spiritual directee died just two days before.

She had been with him when he was pronounced dead at 9:06 p.m. Sept. 22.

“I can tell you that my experience was of a man who was at peace, eyes clear, face relaxed,” she said.

That fact might seem surprising, since her spiritual directee was federal death-row inmate William LeCroy, convicted for the 2001 rape and murder of Joann Lee Tiesler. He had been under the influence of witchcraft and mistook her for a babysitter he claimed had sexually abused him when he was a child, according to The Washington Post.

At a news conference the morning of Sept. 24, Sister Barbara read aloud the letter she had received from LeCroy, who gave her permission to share it after his death.

Also speaking at the news conference was Lisa Brown, the mother of federal death-row inmate Christopher Vialva. He would be pronounced dead less than eight hours later at 6:46 p.m., executed for his involvement in the 1999 murder of Todd and Stacie Bagley.

“This is hard, very hard,” she said, her voice breaking as tears welled in her eyes.

LeCroy and Vialva were the sixth and seventh federal prisoners to be executed by lethal injection since July 14 after a 17-year hiatus on federal executions ended.

In a statement read aloud at a Catholic Mobilizing Network virtual prayer vigil prior to LeCroy’s execution, Atlanta Archbishop Gregory J. Hartmayer noted that “we placed the door open for redemption and rehabilitation” of convicted killers.

Brown and Sister Barbara said at the news conference they had witnessed such changes in LeCroy and Vialva.

“This is a complex story,” said Sister Barbara before reading the letter aloud. “There are lessons in here for all of us.”

In the two-page letter handwritten on notebook paper, LeCroy addressed his remorse, but also the “unchangeable” label placed on convicts.

“It is a fact that some (child) abuse — physical, emotional and/or sexual — can stunt emotional growth so that such children are relatively unchanged as adults,” he wrote. “We feel that we are what happened to us. ... We lash out in anger, in frustration ... in revenge for the wrongs we have suffered.”

He admitted that, no matter how deep his remorse, there was nothing he could do to reverse the horrific murder he committed. But people can change. LeCroy noted in the letter, “continually learning, continually becoming someone better or worse. ... We come into spiritual teachers along the way who provide us with truth and force us to contemplate our lives.”

Through the help of such spiritual guides and contemplation, he said, he strived “to attain a level of personal development by which morality ... is natural.”

Yet society seems to believe no convicted murderer is capable of change, he observed, instead passing judgment that “he’s a murderer, nothing more.” He quoted 19th-century philosopher Soren Kierkegaard, who wrote, “Once you label me, you negate me.”

After reading the letter, Sister Barbara acknowledged the violence of LeCroy’s actions affected Tiesler, who was “so viciously murdered,” and her family and her friends.

But she said she felt LeCroy “can teach us something about forgiveness and growth, and what it means to be reconciled to one’s fate.”

After pausing to hold back her tears, Brown spoke. She began by apologizing to the family of Vialva’s victims.

“Your son was executed less than eight hours later that day. Jesus,” Brown shared. “And I’m here to say that her prayer was answered.”

While living out his death sentence, she said, Vialva, who was Black, had a conversion of heart. He embraced his mother’s faith, Messianic Judaism, which combines Jewish traditions with belief in the Trinity and Christ as the Messiah.

She said he led the Passover Seder in the prison the last seven years, and that “my biggest blessing is to know that he passed on his faith to others.”

Convicted 21 years ago at age 19, her son had become “a new man,” she said. “I can’t stress that enough.” He said in his own words he is changed and redeemed.

Not all convicted murderers are capable of such change, Brown acknowledged. But, she said, “these men are not all the same. ... There are different circumstances to every case. What they fail to calculate into the process is that there is an ability to be redeemed and rehabilitated.”

Hoefer is a staff writer at The Criterion, newspaper of the Archdiocese of Indianapolis.
The title, which literally means “all brothers and sisters” or “all brothers,” are the words with which St. Francis “addressed his brothers and sisters and proposed a way of life marked by the flavor of the Gospel,” the pope wrote. That flavor, explained throughout the document, involves welcoming the stranger, feeding the hungry, listening to and giving a hand up to the poor, defending the rights of all and ensuring that “when we are born, at every stage of life, is valued and invited to contribute to the community,” he said. It also means supporting policies that do so on a larger scale.

Archbishop Jose H. Gomez of Los Angeles, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, welcomed the encyclical as “an important contribution to the Church’s rich tradition of social doctrine.”

“Pope Francis’ teaching here is profound and beautiful: God our father has created every human being with the dignity of humanity and equality, qualities that do not apply only to the rich, but to all people,” the archbishop said in a statement. “God’s plan for humanity, the pope reminds us, has implications for every aspect of our lives — how we treat one another in our personal relationships, how we organize and operate our societies and economies.”

Building on the social teachings of his predecessors, Pope Francis’ document once again strongly condemns the death penalty and makes an initial approach to declaring that the conditions once used to accept a “just war” no longer exist because of the indiscriminately lethal power of modern weapons.

“The right of some to freedom of conscience and religion, to freedom of association, to personal liberty, to private property, to freedom of thought, discussion and expression, to freedom of the press and of communication, and to freedom in the pursuit of economic activity is not only a matter of speculation, it is a matter of necessity for all men and women who wish to have the conditions for personal freedom in this age of total dehumanization to which our world is tending,” the pope said. “This is the real meaning of social justice.”

The pope called for a “new economic order” that supports the rights of all to be able to have a voice in the decisions that affect their lives.

“There can be no lack of any kind of contributions to the fight against terrorism and against every form of abuse and violence. But any approach to declaring that the conditions once used to accept a “just war” no longer exist because of the indiscriminately lethal power of modern weapons.”

The pope called for a “new economic order” that supports the rights of all to be able to have a voice in the decisions that affect their lives.

There can be no lack of any kind of contributions to the fight against terrorism and against every form of abuse and violence. But any approach to declaring that the conditions once used to accept a “just war” no longer exist because of the indiscriminately lethal power of modern weapons.”

The pope called for a “new economic order” that supports the rights of all to be able to have a voice in the decisions that affect their lives.

There can be no lack of any kind of contributions to the fight against terrorism and against every form of abuse and violence. But any approach to declaring that the conditions once used to accept a “just war” no longer exist because of the indiscriminately lethal power of modern weapons.”

The pope called for a “new economic order” that supports the rights of all to be able to have a voice in the decisions that affect their lives.
‘Bringing Christ into the public sphere’ —
Passion for Church teachings, public policy guide new ICC associate director

BY VICTORIA ARTHUR

Alexander Mingus has joined the Indiana Catholic Conference as associate director. The organization has been the public policy voice of the Catholic Church in Indiana for more than 50 years.

In this role, the 24-year-old will help in representing the five Catholic bishops across the state and promoting the Church’s position on important issues at the Indiana Statehouse and through various other channels, including traditional and social media.

Mingus comes to the ICC from the Society of St. Vincent de Paul of Dayton, Ohio, where he served two years as manager of ministry formation.

The Alabama native is a 2018 graduate of the University of Dayton, where he pursued a double major of political science and human rights studies. While at Dayton, Mingus had the opportunity to serve an internship with the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. The Washington, D.C.-based USCCB provided him the opportunity to meet with legislators on Capitol Hill and witness how matters of faith can influence public debate and decision-making at all levels of government.

“It’s there that I learned about the work of the Catholic Church in public policy, and where I was first exposed to the idea of Catholic conferences like the ICC in general,” Mingus said. “I always had a great interest in my faith, as well as in public policy and government, and this internship helped solidify that bringing these areas together could be a future career path for me.”

At age 18, Mingus was named by then-Bishop Robert Baker of Birmingham, Alabama, as one of the first “Catholic Agents of the New Evangelization.” The prelate had noted the young man’s dedicated service to his parish and zeal for his faith in a state where Catholics represent only 4% of the population.

“This was something totally unexpected but something that I embraced wholeheartedly,” Mingus said. “And perhaps it put a mark on me to someday be working with Catholic bishops in some capacity.”

Mingus now works under the leadership of Angela Espada, who has served as executive director of the ICC since January. “I am the parent of a millennial, and I know that this group includes many who are thoughtful, caring and compassionate people who want to do good.”

Espada said. “Alexander is one of these people who also brings a passion for service to the Church that is both reaffirming and refreshing to see. His desire to combine service with upholding the Church’s social teachings in the public square will benefit not just Catholics but countless others in Indiana.

“As a younger person who is comfortable with and adept at utilizing social media, Alexander has already transformed our social media presence,” Espada said. “I encourage everyone to go to our website and social media pages to see the exciting changes.”

Espada and Mingus also used technology in an entirely new way for the ICC. In a series of live webinars scheduled to take place this week, the two will discuss important considerations for Catholics in this election year.

One webinar has already taken place. Two more are scheduled for: 5:30-6:30 p.m. EDT Wednesday, Oct. 7 and 10-11 a.m. EDT Saturday, Oct. 10.

Mingus knows that the polarized and highly charged political atmosphere in the country is likely to last long beyond the November presidential election.

He says that now more than ever, the Church’s timeless teachings on social justice and the common good are critical. And he is eager to do his part to convey those teachings to the faithful as well as those who shape public policy.

“I feel so called to this type of work,” Mingus said. “This is what the Church is asking for. This is her way of bringing Christ into the public sphere.”

To register for the webinars, please visit indianaccc.org/events. There is no cost to participate.
Visitors are pictured in a file photo looking at a Caravaggio painting titled “St. Jerome Writing” during an exhibition at the Galleria Borghese in Rome. Pope Francis released “Scripturae Sacrae affectus” (“Devotion to Sacred Scripture”) a new apostolic letter on the Bible, Sept. 30, coinciding with the 1,600th anniversary of St. Jerome’s death.

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In an apostolic letter dedicated to sacred Scripture, Pope Francis said that even today, Christians can learn new things from the countless translations of the Bible that exist.

The variety of translations of the Bible in the world today “teaches us that the values and positive forms of every culture represent an enrichment for the whole church,” the pope said in his apostolic letter, “Scripturae Sacrae affectus” (“Devotion to Sacred Scripture.”)

“The different ways by which the word of God is proclaimed, understood and experienced in each new translation enrich Scripture itself since, according to the well-known expression of Gregory the Great, Scripture grows with the reader, taking on new accents and new resonance throughout the centuries,” he wrote in the letter released by the Vatican Sept. 30.

Earlier in the day, before concluding his weekly general audience, the pope told pilgrims he had signed the document to coincide with the 16th centenary of St. Jerome’s death.

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The letter itself said that marking the 16th centenary of St. Jerome’s death is “a summons to love what Jerome loved, to rediscover his writings and to let ourselves be touched by his robust spirituality, which can be described in essence as a restless and impassioned desire for a greater knowledge of the God who chose to reveal himself.”

Catholics today, he said, must heed “the advice that Jerome unceasingly gave to his contemporaries: ‘Read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.’”

In his apostolic letter, the pope delved into the history of St. Jerome’s life and his love of Scripture. His “monumental work” of translating the Old Testament from Hebrew, as well as his commentary on the Psalms and St. Paul’s letters, are an example for Catholics today, he said.

“As an enterprise carried out within the community and at the service of the community, Jerome’s scholarly activity can serve as an example of synodal-ity for us and for our own time,” the pope said.

“It can also serve as a model for the Church’s various cultural institutions, called to be ‘places where knowledge becomes service, for no genuine and integral human development can occur without a body of knowledge that is the fruit of cooperation and leads to greater cooperation,’” he said, quoting a speech he gave in 2019 to the pontifical academies.

St. Jerome’s life and work also highlight the need for true witnesses of Christ who can faithfully interpret Scripture which often seems as if it is “sealed, hermetically closed to interpretation.”

“Many, even among practicing Christians, say openly that they are not able to read it, not because of illiteracy, but because they are unprepared for the biblical language, its modes of expression and its ancient cultural traditions,” he said. “As a result, the biblical text becomes indecipherable, as if it were written in an unknown alphabet and an esoteric tongue.”

The pope said that “the richness of Scripture is neglected or minimized by many because they were not afforded a solid grounding in this area,” not even from their families, who often seem unable “to introduce their children to the word of the Lord in all its beauty and spiritual power.”

Nevertheless, the celebration of the 16th centenary of St. Jerome’s death, is a reminder of “the extraordinary missionary vitality” throughout the centuries “that has led to the Bible’s translation in more than 3,000 languages, he said.

“To how many missionaries do we owe the invaluable publication of grammars, dictionaries and other linguistic tools that enable greater communication and become vehicles for the missionary aspiration of reaching everyone,” Pope Francis said.

“We need to support this work and invest in it, helping to overcome limits in communication and lost opportunities for encounter. Much remains to be done. It has been said that without translation there can be no understanding: we would understand neither ourselves nor others,” he said.

In his letter, the pope also highlighted that the celebration of the 16th centenary of St. Jerome’s death is “a summons to love what Jerome loved, to rediscover his writings and to let ourselves be touched by his robust spirituality.”

The pope said that even today, Christians can learn new things from the countless translations of the Bible that exist.

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The pope called on Catholics today to “read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.”

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The pope called on Catholics today to “read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.”

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The pope called on Catholics today to “read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.”

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The pope called on Catholics today to “read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.”

“May the example of this great doctor and father of the Church, who placed the Bible at the center of his life, awaken in us a renewed love for the sacred Scripture and the desire to live in a personal dialogue with the word of God,” he said.

The pope called on Catholics today to “read the divine Scriptures constantly; never let the sacred volume fall from your hand.”
Summit speakers discuss ongoing efforts to combat religious persecution

WASHINGTON (CNS) — A digital summit sponsored by In Defense of Christians, “Combating Global Christian Persecution,” showed that the fight against all forms of religious persecution continues with a renewed cast of political leaders. Rep. French Hill, R-Arkansas, last year’s winner of the group’s Congressional Champion award for his support of Coptic Christians in Egypt, pointed out in his remarks that while “religious freedom is part of American foreign policy,” attacks on Coptic Christians continue. A House resolution introduced by Hill last year called for the Egyptian government to abolish its “culture of impunity” and to hold local officials responsible. This year’s Congressional Champion, Rep. Dan Crenshaw, R-Texas, a former Navy SEAL, was recognized for advocating for the preservation of Christians in the Middle East. The event took place Sept. 23. “I saw this lack of freedom in my first three deployments” in Iraq and Afghanistan, he said, seeing “firsthand the history of a country run by extremists.”

Notre Dame president tests positive for coronavirus

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Holy Cross Father John Jenkins, president of the University of Notre Dame, has tested positive for the coronavirus. Notre Dame’s student newspaper, The Observer, said the school’s vice president for public affairs and communications announced that Father Jenkins was tested for COVID-19 when he learned that a colleague had tested positive. He is now “entering an extended period of isolation as indicated by university medical personnel and county health officials. My symptoms are mild, and I will continue work from home,” Father Jenkins said in the emailed message. “The positive test is a good reminder for me, and perhaps for all, of how vigilant we need to be,” he added.

City’s new indoor worship limit a ‘victory,’ but effort not over

SAN FRANCISCO (CNS) — As of Sept. 30, the city of San Francisco is allowing attendance for indoor worship to be 25% of the capacity of a house of worship, or up to 100 people, which follows the limit set by the state of California. In a message issued late Sept. 29, after the city announced the change, Archbishop Salvatore J. Cordileone of San Francisco called it “an important victory to savour and celebrate.” However, he told the press, “this movement is not over. Our work and victories have just begun.” He thanked people of faith in San Francisco and “the thousands of others across the nation who are joining us at FreeTheMass.com,” a site where people can sign a petition posted to the website. The site said that “people can sign a petition posted to the website.” In a video message to Catholics on CNN, Pope Francis said, “The normality we are called to is that of the kingdom of God, where ‘the blind receive sight, the lame walk, those who have leprosy are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, and the good news is proclaimed to the poor,’” the pope said Sept. 30 during his weekly general audience.

Legislature for creating the first state holiday honoring a woman, and for choosing an incredible Catholic saint,” the archdiocese said. Popularly known as Mother Cabrini, the saint is revered for her devotion to children, immigrants and the destitute.

Tomb of young Italian tech whiz opened for veneration

People venerate the tomb of Carlo Acutis, who died in 2006, at the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore in Assisi, Italy, Oct. 3. The Italian teen, who had a great love for the Eucharist, will be beatified Oct. 10 in Assisi. The tomb of the 15-year-old Italian teenager who used his computer programming skills to spread devotion to the Eucharist was opened for veneration before his beatification in Assisi.

Post-pandemic world must not return to selfish ‘normality,’ pope says

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In the aftermath of the coronavirus pandemic, the world must aspire to be better and not return to its previous “sickened” normality of injustice, inequality and environmental degradation, Pope Francis said.

COLORADO observes its first Cabrini Day, named for patron saint of immigrants

DENVER (CNS) — St. Frances Xavier Cabrini’s “Christ-like love for others is an inspiring example for all of us to this day,” said a statement from the Archdiocese of Denver issued in advance of Colorado’s new Cabrini Day honoring the patron immigrants Oct. 5. In February, the Colorado House approved a measure to do away with the state’s observance of Columbus Day, a federal holiday on the second Monday of October, and instead create the Cabrini observance. The Colorado Senate followed suit in early March, and Gov. Jared Polis signed the bill into law. “We commend the state

Sister Ardeth Platte resisted war through prayer, action for four decades

CLEVELAND (CNS) — Dominican Sister Ardeth Platte long considered herself a peacemaker and devoted nearly 40 years of her life to praying and witnessing to end war and rid the world of nuclear weapons. Her actions led to imprisonment multiple times, including for the 2002 defacement of a missile site in Colorado in collaboration with her best friend, Dominican Sister Carol Gilbert, and fellow Dominican Sister Jane Goren. Sister Ardeth, 84, died in her sleep at the Dorothy Day Catholic Worker House in Washington early Sept. 30. Funeral arrangements were pending Oct. 5 because of the coronavirus pandemic. Sister Carol told Catholic News Service she discovered her friend in bed, still wearing headphones after apparently listening to the radio. The death shocked Sister Carol. “She was fine. Ardeth listened to the (presidential) debate Tuesday night. She usually listened to them laying down in bed,” Sister Carol said.

Al Smith dinner draws presidential nominees for 75th year

NEW YORK (CNS) — The Catholic vote and the coronavirus sub-duly headlined the annual fundraiser of the 75th annual Alfred E. Smith Memorial Foundation Dinner Oct. 1, livestreamed from the Manhattan residence of New York Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan due to COVID-19. Remarks via recorded videos were delivered by President Donald Trump and former Vice President Joe Biden, the Republican and Democratic nominees, respectively, in the Nov. 3 presidential election.

Student’s death from COVID-19 prompts investigation

SAN ANTONIO (CNS) — The University of Texas at San Antonio said Sept. 30 that the death of a student from COVID-19 is under investigation.

“While our hearts are hurting, particularly for the students and faculty members in our residence halls, we want to reassure everyone that our residence halls are performing well and are prepared to manage any concerns related to COVID-19,” said Dr. Debra scour upon receiving the call from the student’s family that the student had died from COVID-19, said. “We have a dedicated team of professionals who are here to monitor and support our students.”

SMU student surveyed on„…change for the better,” the student said. “I think it’s important for us to learn from mistakes and not repeat them.”
In anticipation of the Year of Service, the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend launched a campaign in conjunction with the USCCB to address the need for increased parental support in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic. The campaign, called “Walking with Moms in Need,” is aimed at providing resources and support for expectant and parenting mothers across the diocese.

The timing of the campaign corresponds with the 25th anniversary of Pope St. John Paul II’s encyclical “Evangelium Vitae,” which reaffirms the dignity of all human life. This year marks the anniversary of the saint’s deaths, and the campaign is intended to encourage Catholics to live out the Gospel message in a practical way, offering loving support to those in need.

The campaign has faced some challenges due to the pandemic, including delays in starting the initiative and difficulties in accessing resources. However, the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend is committed to continuing the campaign and is seeking the cooperation of parishes to ensure that the initiative can be sustained.

The website www.walkingwithmomsfwsb.com provides resources and information for parishes and individuals interested in participating in the campaign. The website includes a variety of resources, such as tips for parishes on how to identify and connect with families in need, as well as information on how to access financial assistance.

The campaign’s supporters believe that the initiative is essential for the health and well-being of expectant and parenting mothers. They believe that the campaign is a way to promote the sanctity of human life and to encourage Catholics to live out the Gospel message in a practical way.

The campaign has already received support from the Catholic community, and the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend is committed to continuing the initiative in the future. The campaign’s supporters hope that the initiative will continue to grow and that more parishes will participate in the initiative in the future.

The campaign is a testament to the dedication of Catholics to promote the sanctity of human life, and it is a reminder of the importance of loving support for expectant and parenting mothers. The campaign is a call to action for all Catholics to live out the Gospel message in a practical way and to promote the sanctity of human life in their communities.
Queen of Angels pastoral visit celebrates earthly and heavenly hosts

By Jennifer Simerman

 Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades celebrated a Mass on the feast day of the great Archangels, Michael, Gabriel and Raphael, on Tuesday, Sept. 29, at Queen of Angels School, Fort Wayne. This was the bishop’s first pastoral school visit of the academic year, and he stated he couldn’t think of a better place to be on their feast day, with the school and parish being under “the patroness of Mary, Queen of the Angels.”

The homily started a little differently than that of past pastoral visits. “When I celebrate school Masses, I usually come down and ask questions, but I won’t do that because we have to stay physically distanced,” Bishop Rhoades said as he joked with the students that they could relax. But surely they would have answered all the questions correctly had they been given the chance, he said.

In the first reading from the prophet Daniel, Daniel had a vision of heaven in which he saw thousands upon thousands ministering to God, praising Him. Those ministers praising God, the bishop said, were the angels. Then in the Gospel, Jesus told Nathaniel that he would see heaven and the angels of God ascending and descending on the son of man.

There are many other passages in the Bible where we hear about the Angels of God,” he continued, “and we know the names of three of the archangels from Scripture: Sts. Michael, Gabriel and Raphael. Every one of the archangels had a mission from God. They were sent by God down here to earth with a mission.” Raphael’s mission was to guide Tobias and to bring healing to Tobit, his father.

The bishop then spoke of the mission of St. Gabriel, sent by God to be His messenger. Gabriel announced various messages, including the ‘greatest news ever broadcast in the history of the world, when he appeared to Mary and announced to her that she would conceive by the power of the Holy Spirit, the Son of God, in her womb Jesus.”

The third archangel, St. Michael, had a mission to defeat Satan and overcome evil. “He still has that mission today. We pray to St. Michael, to defend us from the power of the evil one. We call him the prince of the heavenly hosts,” said the bishop.

Bishop Rhoades concluded his homily by encouraging the school community to consider that, just as each archangel was given a mission by God, so too each one of us has the same missions: to accompany and guide others like St. Raphael, to bring God’s good news to the world like Gabriel and to battle and overcome evil and temptation like St. Michael.

“The three archangels help us to fulfill our mission as disciples of Jesus. So, as we celebrate today’s feast of Sts. Michael, Gabriel and Raphael, we ask them to help us in our Christian lives. And now as we celebrate the Liturgy of the Eucharist, it’s good to remember the angels of God see us and they’re praising God in heaven, and when we offer Mass, we are praising God, together with all the saints and angels.”

Queen of Angels community

Queen of Angels Parish was established in 1951 at the direction of Bishop John F. Noll to serve the overflow crowd at Most Precious Blood. Today, people “come from far and wide in the city because they have roots here. Even though the parish is only 70-some years old, there’s a lot of identity here,” said pastor Father Zachary Barry. “There’s great love for the parish and they’re eager to grow and to learn about the faith.”

There’s a dedication and a hunger here.”

As the shepherd of this parish, Father Barry works to lead, teach and feed that hunger. The parish community has started the Family of Faith formation program, from the Sophia Institute, which aims to have the family studying together. This year, the school community has also started praying the Angelus at noon every day. Students and teachers are learning the prayer and the tradition behind it, bringing the school community together and helping to build them up, Father Barry continued.

Guiding students as children of Mary and disciples of Christ

Queen of Angels School serves 166 children in grades pre-K through eighth. With a new pastor and principal in the past two years, the primary focus for the school has been to build Catholic identity.

The school’s mission is “Guiding students, as children of Mary, to be Disciples of Christ through Faith, Knowledge, and Service.”

“Our No. 1 goal is to build saints,” said principal Dennis Wiegmann, “to help them be better disciples as they move along in the Catholic school experience. Our education is important but bringing students to the faith is just as important if not greater.”

One way the school is doing this is through the Virtue = Strength program, from a company called Sports Leader. Queen of Angels is one of 15 schools using the program that provides a weekly curriculum about the virtues and includes prayers, videos and activities. The school uses the program to provide a weekly special in Catholic Identity. Father Barry also hopes to supplement the program with praise and worship, adoration, confessions and more.

Additionally, principal Wiegmann ends his daily school announcements with the words, “Let us remember what Pope Benedict the XVI tells us: ‘The world offers you comfort, but you were not made for comfort, you were made for greatness.’ Take today and every day to strive for greatness. Have a blessed day.”

Students learn what it is to strive for greatness, every day, through the example of their teachers. “I think every teacher in the diocese works extremely hard,” Weigmann said. “Teaching is not the same as it has been, the vocation has changed due to the pandemic. It makes you have to ask the Lord for more guidance and help.” He expressed that the hard work of the teachers, support from the Catholic Schools Office and the support of diocesan principals for one another help guide the students on that journey for greatness.
Queen of Angels pastoral visit celebrates heavenly hosts

School tour

As Bishop Rhoades joined principal Wiegmann and Father Barry for a tour and classroom visits, he took a moment to bless the crucifix at the school entrance. “May all who gaze upon this crucifix be moved by the Love of Christ,” he prayed. The tour highlighted several upgrades and renovations including new wall paint, adding to the stair railing and tearing out an old stage for safety, and building new columns, to name a few. “The worst part about the pandemic was, we had to shut down school,” said Wiegmann. Thanks to parent and church volunteers, however, shutting down “allowed us to get a lot of projects done that we normally wouldn’t have. Ultimately, we all need to be together as one, celebrating the Lord, witnessing and experiencing Him, and one way is through service.”

Classroom visits

Bishop Rhoades’ classroom visits included much talk of the feast of the Archangels. They also discussed Bishop’s job in shepherding the diocese and the people who help him as shepherds of the individual parishes, like Father Barry. Likewise, first grade students listened and asked questions about his job as a bishop. They joined him in praying the Angel of God prayer, and like the other classes, they received a blessing.

The second graders greeted Bishop Rhoades with cards and drawings. Second grade student Andy asked about the bishop’s “hat.” Minutes later, Andy was wearing the zucchetto and, while giggling, the class concurred that Andy would indeed make a good priest someday. The third grade students, having just received the sacraments of reconciliation and first holy Communion last year, came to the bishop with many questions about angels and the souls in heaven. “A very inquisitive class,” Bishop Rhoades admired. He spoke to an eighth grade student, who said that she had chosen St. Gregory the Great as her confirmation name in anticipation for the upcoming sacrament. Bishop Rhoades shared with the class the story of his time in Rome when he would often visit the San Gregorio al Celio Church. This church, which once used to belong to the family of St. Gregory the Great, is home to the Missionaries of Charity, the religious sisters of St. Mother Teresa of Kolkata. In his visits he would sometimes get to see St. Mother Teresa, he said. When asked how he knew that he wanted to be a bishop, Bishop Rhoades answered, “I never really thought about becoming a bishop. You discern becoming a priest, so I discerned that God was calling me to be a priest.

“It’s something that the pope decides. So, the only decision on my part was to say yes or no; Now, you really don’t say no to the pope. I got a phone call from the pope’s ambassador to the United States saying that he had appointed me. That was St. John Paul II. I was one of the last bishops he appointed before he died. I had great love and admiration for Pope John Paul II, so that was special.”

Principal Wiegmann concluded the day by saying, “Today was not only about the feast of the archangels, but it was an opportunity for Bishop to see the students and the teachers. I can tell them every day how much the work they are doing is appreciated, but to have the shepherd of our diocese come and tell that to them, it just reaffirms the work that they are doing.”

Kindergarteners engage in a question and answer session with Bishop Rhoades and, at right, Father Barry.

Angels, from page 8

www.queenofangelsfw.org

Women support women at first Kingdom Builders conference

BY JENNIFER BARTON

Around 250 women were encouraged to “Claim your peace and joy” at the Kingdom Builders conference Oct. 3 in Fort Wayne. Featuring three female Catholic speakers as well as adoration and Mass with Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades, the conference was the first of its kind to take place in the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend. Because of its success, Kingdom Builders founder Mary Jo Parrish plans to make it an annual event.

The talks focused on the uniqueness of every woman and the gift of God the Father’s love for each one of them. Parrish, who begins each monthly Kingdom Builders gathering with humorous stories of her life, put participants at ease with a story that demonstrated her own imperfections. She then launched into three basic requirements for women to reclaim their inheritance as daughters of the King: relationship, identity and mission. “When we embrace the beauty of our design and identity, then we are fully alive,” Parrish said.

Giving examples of saints who, while imperfect, still fulfilled the missions that God set before them, she continued, “God will use anyone. … Stay small; let God be big.”

She called them to seek out what God has planned for each of them, and to rely on God rather than their own power. “The Father will never lead you anywhere except to that which brings you the most peace and joy,” she reassured.

During her talk, Catholic author and dynamic speaker Amber DeMatte repudiated the idea of a model one-size-fits-all Christian woman. “There is no mold,” she boldly declared. “The Father needs you. The Father is breaking molds today.” She empowered the women present to reject the lies and negative thoughts others have placed on them and instead look to the Good Shepherd for the truth of who they are in Christ. “It’s not about what we do, but who we

At left, Kingdom Builders founder Mary Jo Parrish leads the group in praying a rosary and visualizing the events of Jesus’ life through Mary’s eyes. Above, attendees pray during Mass.
Because of current travel restrictions she was unable to attend in person; instead, she recorded her talk, which was shown on two large screens.

Sister Bethany imparted touching stories of her order’s work with post-abortive women and how they minister to moms in crisis. She emphasized that women need to “rest in His love” and “find your peace in His mercy.”

Only a short time after the first parish-based Kingdom Builders meetings were launched, Parrish came up with the idea for a women’s conference but did not know how to make it happen. She stated, “The men have a conference and they have for over a decade. Our women, they need to be fed; they’re hungry, they’re thirsty for the Lord.”

Parrish mentioned her idea to Allison Rowe, a member of the team, who jumped on board to bring it to fruition. With the aid of the diocese, along with a group of women with different talents, they were able to plan the conference within a year. Rowe said, “I feel like I was in the right place at the right time, or the Holy Spirit brought it together.”

An immense amount of work went into pulling the plans together and beautifying the space to make women who constantly sacrifice their own time “feel cherished and loved,” said Parrish.

The reaction of the participants was Rowe’s reward for the team’s efforts. “I feel like the evil one tells me that I’m unworthy a lot, so throughout the process many times I felt like I shouldn’t be doing this, but I was unworthy.” Leading up to this week, it was like, “I can, and it’s worth every sacrifice to see us come together.”

The entire event was centered in prayer. Members of the Kingdom Builder prayer team prayed over each seat the night before the conference, asking God’s blessings on the woman who would occupy it. An adoration tent was set up outside the conference hall, staffed throughout the day by members of a new men’s group called Armor of God, who wrapped the women in a constant blanket of prayer. Many of the participants said this was incredibly meaningful.

Though the conference had originally been planned for 1,500 women, COVID-19 restrictions limited the number to 250. Sara Hammon was one of the attendees from outside the diocese. A stay-at-home mother of three, Hammon traveled from Ohio at the suggestion of her parish deacon’s wife to see what Kingdom Builders had to offer. She longed to start a women’s prayer group in her own parish.

“I’ve never been to anything like this, it’s amazing,” Hammon said. “My husband goes every year; he comes to Fort Wayne South Bend to the men’s conference. He’s loved it, and I’m like, ‘I don’t know what that is,’ I’ve never felt that; I’ve never felt on fire. So to come here, I just feel this is for me.

Like many of the women, Hammon was grateful for the opportunity to connect with other women on a spiritual level. “These women are just like me in that we love Jesus Christ and we love the Eucharist and we just want to get closer to heaven; we want to be those saints someday.”

In attendance were moms with babies, older women, college students, single women and grandmothers. More than 50 parishes throughout Indiana, Ohio and Michigan were represented, including at least four Protestant churches.

“Kingdom Builders is absolutely life-changing,” said Jodi Ueber, who attends monthly meetings at St. Charles. “It just fills all the voids, all the gaps in terms of faith life and explodes it. The opportunity for adoration, the fellowship with the women; it’s just full of prayer, praise and worship.”

Tasha Williams has been a member of the apostolate for several months and eagerly awaited the conference. “I look forward to Kingdom Builders every month, so I was excited to have that feeling for the entire day.” She loved the experience and the similar messages of the speakers. But most important of all was spending time with God. “Part of it for me is just taking a day to just be focused on the love of the Father and the faith. Sometimes it’s hard to carve out time, so it’s just exciting to have that time.”
Two kinds of feminism

"T"oday, our nation mourns the loss of a trailblazer, not only in the field of law, but in the history of our country."

So begins President Donald Trump’s proclamation on the death of Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, ordering the American flag to be flown at half-staff around the world in her honor.

The proclamation notes that Ginsburg was a devoted wife and mother when she entered law school. She had a distinguished career as a law professor, litigator and judge, and became the second female Supreme Court justice. She worked tirelessly against barriers to women’s equality that many women today do not realize once existed.

Sometimes legal stereotypes about men as providers and women as homemakers were unjust to men. In 1975, she published The Right to Privacy, an important redefinition of marriage and family law. Ginsburg observed that the height of chivalry is not to enjoy equal citizenship status.

The 24-hour news cycle and an endless engagement with social media only make matters worse. Add a male-dominated viewpoint under the grip of COVID-19 and the responses it has evoked, and it only magnifies our weaknesses and exacerbates what is already wrong with us.

Don’t get me wrong. Many very important questions and issues are at stake. I do not suggest for a minute that they should not invoke strong, at times passionate, responses. Nor do I mean that we should not speak clearly about our convictions and beliefs. We must stand with and in the Truth. But I also am deeply convinced that the Evil One has in mind the ultimate advantage of our current situation to drive wedges in our lives; in our nation, in our communities, perhaps in our parishes or even our families.

My invitation — and I speak as much to myself as to anyone else — is to resist the urge to buy into and to feed that division. Again, my point is not to say, “can’t we all just get along?” Clearly, regardless of where one is on any spectrum, there are real differences of view and opinion. It’s not a matter of surrendering conviction, but of being able to speak the truth in love. To be honest with one another, but without demonizing one another. To differ, but to assume, in charity and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the best motivations in others, rather than assuming what those motives or intentions are, since none of us can see the heart of another.

I believe we have witnessed a significant cultural shift even within our own lifetime. I am honored to be a graduate of Marian High School. One of my classmates and closer friends was (and still is) something of a trailblazer, not only in the career as a law professor, litigator and judge, and became the second female Supreme Court justice. She worked tirelessly against barriers to women’s equality that many women today do not realize once existed.

Sometimes legal stereotypes about men as providers and women as homemakers were unjust to men. In 1975, she published The Right to Privacy, an important redefinition of marriage and family law. Ginsburg observed that the height of chivalry is not to enjoy equal citizenship status.

The 24-hour news cycle and an endless engagement with social media only make matters worse. Add a male-dominated viewpoint under the grip of COVID-19 and the responses it has evoked, and it only magnifies our weaknesses and exacerbates what is already wrong with us.

Don’t get me wrong. Many very important questions and issues are at stake. I do not suggest for a minute that they should not invoke strong, at times passionate, responses. Nor do I mean that we should not speak clearly about our convictions and beliefs. We must stand with and in the Truth. But I also am deeply convinced that the Evil One has in mind the ultimate advantage of our current situation to drive wedges in our lives; in our nation, in our communities, perhaps in our parishes or even our families.

My invitation — and I speak as much to myself as to anyone else — is to resist the urge to buy into and to feed that division. Again, my point is not to say, “can’t we all just get along?” Clearly, regardless of where one is on any spectrum, there are real differences of view and opinion. It’s not a matter of surrendering conviction, but of being able to speak the truth in love. To be honest with one another, but without demonizing one another. To differ, but to assume, in charity and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the best motivations in others, rather than assuming what those motives or intentions are, since none of us can see the heart of another.

I believe we have witnessed a significant cultural shift even within our own lifetime. I am honored to be a graduate of Marian High School. One of my classmates and closer friends was (and still is) something of a trailblazer, not only in drive wedges in our lives; in our nation, in our communities, perhaps in our parishes or even our families.

THE HUMAN CONDITION

MGSR. MICHAEL HEINTZ

My invitation — and I speak as much to myself as to anyone else — is to resist the urge to buy into and to feed that division. Again, my point is not to say, “can’t we all just get along?” Clearly, regardless of where one is on any spectrum, there are real differences of view and opinion. It’s not a matter of surrendering conviction, but of being able to speak the truth in love. To be honest with one another, but without demonizing one another. To differ, but to assume, in charity and in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the best motivations in others, rather than assuming what those motives or intentions are, since none of us can see the heart of another.

I believe we have witnessed a significant cultural shift even within our own lifetime. I am honored to be a graduate of Marian High School. One of my classmates and closer friends was (and still is) something of a trailblazer, not only in

Let us accept the Lord’s invitation to share in His riches

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

Twenty-Eighth Sunday in Ordinary Time
Matthew 22:1-14

The first part of the Book of Isaiah provides the conclusion to today’s readings. The end’s first reading at Mass. Understanding the cultural, social, political and economic context surrounding the composition of biblical texts always helps to capture their meaning. As a general rule, times were not easy for the chosen people. Aside from bursts of prosperity and peace under David and Solomon, they usually had to cope with war, invasion, want or worse. Also, usually, the prophets saw little that they could truly applaud. Invariably the prophets wrote that human sin, not divine revenge, not divine indifference to human distress, was the cause of trouble in the world. So frequently the prophets thundered that God has no need for God. The outcasts and strangers represent gentiles and the sinful. God’s mercy extends to everyone. Even so, God draggs no one into the kingdom of heaven. Sinners must reform to be worthy of God’s invitation.

Reflection

These readings call us to several basic facts. First, God’s invitation to faith is for all. He does not disown the promise of salvation given through the prophets, and then emphatically by Christ, to guide people to everlasting life by revealing to them the way of righteousness and by strengthening their resolve to be holy. The second fact is simple and constant throughout history. Humans reject God’s goodness. They sin. Original sin always weakens them, and not just them. Their priorities are twisted. They are confused. They exaggerate their own powers and insights. They discount their need for God. They may wish to be at the banquet, but they do not prepare themselves. They arrive without truly giving themselves to God. Humans always can come to the conviction that drove St. Paul to proclaim the Lord in spite of everything. Nothing matters other than to be with God. Nothing genuinely good is apart from God. Everything other than life with God is fickle and impermanent, empty and a mirage.

READINGS

Sunday:
- Is 5:26-30a Ps 23:1-6
- Phil 4:12-14, 19-20 Mt 22:1-14
- Gal 4:22-24, 26-27, 31—3:1 Ps 113:1b-5a, 6-7 Lk 11:29-32
- Tuesday:
  - Wednesday:
    - Gal 5:18-25 Ps 1:1-4, 6 Lk 11:42-46
    - Thursday:
      - Eph 1:10 Ps 98:1-6
      - Lk 11:47-54
    - Friday:
      - Eph 1:14-18 Ps 33:2-4, 5-6, 12-13 Lk 12:1-7
      - Saturday:
        - Eph 1:15-23 Ps 82:3b-4, 7 Lk 12:8-17

October 11, 2020
For which imperfect candidate should I vote?

Elections invite us to cast our vote as citizens and choose the best possible public leaders to meet the exigencies of our present time and circumstances. Whether voting for president of the country or for school board members in our cities and towns, citizens want public leaders who are decent, hard workers, committed to the common good, respectful of human life and dignity at all times, devoted to truth and justice, knowledgeable and able to work with others. As a father of two youngsters learning life’s ways, I want public leaders who inspire and give good example.

The order is tall but not impossible. Anyone with some discipline can eliminate these traits. We teach them in our homes and schools. We bear about them in our churches. We assure our children and grandchildren that they are attainable. We cultivate these traits to ensure civility. We honor those who live them exemplary. When people cultivate these virtues, they bring others to Christ, explicitly proclaiming the Gospel and relying on God’s grace, we speak of holiness. Holiness, however, is not a requirement to run for public office. Neither is perfection. Candidates for public office excel at extolling their accomplishments and strengths. We also learn about their imperfections. After all, they are human like anyone else.

Acknowledging the human side of political leaders is important. Treating them as mes-sianic characters is idolatrous. Expecting flawlessness is naive. It is common to frame political campaigns in “god vs. evil” language. Not surprising. This motif permeates much of our literary, religious, and pop culture imagination. However, such dualism becomes toxic, even dangerous, when it reduces people to one or the other.

The Catholic tradition affirms that every person is intrinsically good, and yet as finite beings we must contend with our imperfections and limitations. For which imperfect candidate should I vote?

No candidate for public office will match the noblest expectations of religious groups, and that is fine. No one has ever done so. At the very least, we trust that candidates who subscribe to any religious tradition would draw from its wisdom for the good of all.

The U.S. political system is not a theocracy but a democracy. Not perfect, yet still a system that in principle guarantees that anyone may elect or be elected without religious litmus tests or coercive forces, secular or religious.

U.S. Catholics understand this. About 150 years ago, many in this nation doubted that Catholics could participate actively in public life. Well, we have, and have done it well. For which imperfect candidate should I vote? The answer to this question lies ultimately in each individual’s conscience, “the most secret core and sanctuary” of a human person, according to the Second Vatican Council.

Hoffman Osipno is professor of theology and religious education at Boston College.

Eulalie Durocher was the youngest of 10 children in a pious Quebec family; three brothers became priests and two sisters also became nuns. Because of Ill health, Eulalie attended school sporadically and was rejected by several religious orders. For 12 years she helped one of her priest-brothers in his parish, organizing charitable works and the first Confraternity of Mary in Canada. In 1843, with two friends and episcopal permission, she founded the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary to educate poor youths, especially in the countryside. As Mother Marie-Rose, she led the congregation until her early death; she was beatified in 1982. Holy Names’ sisters serve today in Canada, the United States, Lesotho, Peru and Brazil.

Saint of the Week

Blessed Marie-Rose Durocher

Feast October 6

Eulalie Durocher was the youngest of 10 children in a pious Quebec family; three brothers became priests and two sisters also became nuns. Because of Ill health, Eulalie attended school sporadically and was rejected by several religious orders. For 12 years she helped one of her priest-brothers in his parish, organizing charitable works and the first Confraternity of Mary in Canada. In 1843, with two friends and episcopal permission, she founded the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary to educate poor youths, especially in the countryside. As Mother Marie-Rose, she led the congregation until her early death; she was beatified in 1982. Holy Names’ sisters serve today in Canada, the United States, Lesotho, Peru and Brazil.
NEW YORK (CNS) — “The family that prays together stays together.” Although he popularized rather than originated that pithy saying, the sentence aptly sums up the message of Holy Cross Father Patrick Peyton (1909-92), who advocated it both tirelessly and with great success.

The moving documentary “Pray: The Story of Patrick Peyton” (ArtAffects) lucidly chronicles its subject’s life and feels imbued with his warm and fervent spirit.

Filmmaker Jonathan Cipiti uses archival recordings and footage as well as interviews with collaborators, friends and those influenced by Father Peyton’s legacy — former major league baseball player Mike Sweeney and his wife, Shara, among them — to trace his remarkable biography.

As Matthew Donlan and Megan Harrington’s script explains, Father Peyton’s attachment to the rosary began early. Living in impoverished circumstances in Attymass, a small village in Ireland’s County Mayo, his family would gather to recite the devotion daily throughout his childhood.

Strongly influenced by his father’s piety, the future clergyman wavered between a sense of priestly vocation and the desire to be a husband and dad. Following his emigration to the United States, however, he entered the seminary and, despite the inadequacy of his earlier education, proved an outstanding student.

As he progressed toward ordination, though, he was struck down by a near-fatal case of tuberculosis.Attributing his seemingly miraculous recovery to Mary, Father Peyton was motivated to spread love of the rosary and to promote the idea that marital and familial ties can be strengthened through prayer of all kinds.

A naturally shy man, Father Peyton nonetheless managed to corral the elite of Hollywood to support his cause. Informed that Bing Crosby was the biggest name in Tinseltown, he simply cold-called him and invited him to appear on his new radio show. And, remarkably, Der Bingle said yes.

In the decades that followed, the Family Rosary movement that Father Peyton had founded used film, television and even billboards as well as radio to reach the public. Massive rallies also were organized. A contemporary newsreel account of one held in San Francisco’s Golden Gate Park describes its audience as the largest crowd ever assembled in the city.

Changes in society during the 1960s and ’70s led to a decline in Father Peyton’s influence. Yet many credit a successful rally he held in Manila in 1985 with contributing to the peaceful overthrow of Philippine dictator Ferdinand Marcos in February of the following year.

This fine account of Father Peyton’s many achievements — he was declared venerable in December 2017 — can be recommended for all but the smallest viewers. It can also serve as a valuable catechetical tool in parish or school settings.

The film contains mature themes. The Catholic News Service classification is A-II — adults and adolescents. The Motion Picture Association rating is PG — parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

Mulderig is on the staff of Catholic News Service.

BY JOHN MULDERIG

Battle of the Bishops

Bishop Dwenger and Bishop Luers high schools in Fort Wayne played each other in football Oct. 2 at Bishop Luers. Pictured at the game, from left, are Bishop Luers principal Jim Huth, Superintendent Dr. Joseph Brettnacher, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades and Bishop Dwenger principal Jason Schiffli.

Provided by Dr. Joseph Brettnacher
What’s happening?

What’s happening carries announcements about upcoming events in the diocese. View more Catholic events and submit new ones at www.todayscatholic.org/event. For additional listings of that event, please call the advertising sales staff at 260-399-1449 to purchase space.

Harvest meal at Blessed Sacrament
Church planned

ALBION — Knights of Columbus and the Blessed Sacrament Rosary Sodality will offer a harvest meal on Saturday, Oct. 10, at Blessed Sacrament Parish, 2290 IN-9, from 4-7 p.m. Cost is $7 with proceeds going to Women’s Care Center NEI. Cash or check only. Contact Kevin Vangessel at 260-318-5735 or kdvangessel@gmail.com for information.

Our Lady of Fatima rosary

AUBURN — An Our Lady of Fatima 15 decade public rosary will be prayed Saturday, Oct. 10, on the north side of the Auburn courthouse starting at noon. The intention is for our country. Bring a lawn chair. Masks and social distancing required. For questions call Alice at 260-925-9252.

Friday Night Praise

NEW HAVEN — Friday Night Praise, will move indoors Friday, Oct. 9, to The Orchid event and catering facility on 11508 Lincoln Hwy. E. The Orchid will have food and drinks, including beer and wine, available for purchase beginning at 5:30 p.m. Praise and worship is from 6:30-8 p.m.

White Mass

FORT WAYNE — Bishop Rhoades will celebrate a White Mass for healthcare workers with the Fort Wayne Catholic Medical Guild at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception at 7 p.m. Tuesday. Oct. 27. Anyone is invited, especially healthcare workers. There will be no meeting afterwards. Visit www.fortwayne.catholic.org or contact Julie Bryan at 260-222-6978 or fortwayne.catholic@gmail.com for information.

Memorial Mass for those who have lost a child

FORT WAYNE — Those who have lost a child before or after birth — whether recently or long ago — are invited to a special Memorial Mass on Friday, Oct. 23, at St. John the Baptist Fort Wayne, celebrated by Father Andrew Budzinski. Contact Caty Burke 260-422-4611 or cburke@diocesefwsb.org for details.

Fish and tenderloin fry hosted by Knights

BLUFFTON — A fish and tenderloin fry, drive-thru only, will be from 4-30-7:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 16 at St. Joseph Parish, 1300 N Main St. Adult meals $10; child meals $6.

The Marriage Course Online

MISHAWAKA — The Marriage Course Online is based on a beautiful, brand-new film series featuring couples and relationship experts from around the world, this free, seven-week program will take place online over Zoom on Thursday evenings from 8-10 p.m. from Oct. 8 through Nov. 19. There is no group discussion, but rather, time built into each session for spouses to discuss the topic in the comfort and privacy of their own home using prompts from The Marriage Course journal. The program is hosted by Deacon Frederick and Lisa Everett, and registration is open. For more information or to register, please go to www.diocesefwsb.org/marriage-course.

White Mass

FORT WAYNE — Bishop Rhoades will celebrate a White Mass for healthcare workers with the Fort Wayne Catholic Medical Guild at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 27. Anyone is invited, especially healthcare workers. There will be no meeting afterwards. Visit www.fortwayne.catholic.org or contact Julie Bryan at 260-222-6978 or fortwayne.catholic@gmail.com for information.

Memorial Mass for those who have lost a child

FORT WAYNE — Those who have lost a child before or after birth — whether recently or long ago — are invited to a special Memorial Mass on Friday, Oct. 23, at St. John the Baptist Fort Wayne, celebrated by Father Andrew Budzinski. Contact Caty Burke 260-422-4611 or cburke@diocesefwsb.org for details.

Fish and tenderloin fry hosted by Knights

BLUFFTON — A fish and tenderloin fry, drive-thru only, will be from 4-30-7:30 p.m., Friday, Oct. 16 at St. Joseph Parish, 1300 N Main St. Adult meals $10; child meals $6.

The Marriage Course Online

MISHAWAKA — The Marriage Course Online is based on a beautiful, brand-new film series featuring couples and relationship experts from around the world, this free, seven-week program will take place online over Zoom on Thursday evenings from 8-10 p.m. from Oct. 8 through Nov. 19. There is no group discussion, but rather, time built into each session for spouses to discuss the topic in the comfort and privacy of their own home using prompts from The Marriage Course journal. The program is hosted by Deacon Frederick and Lisa Everett, and registration is open. For more information or to register, please go to www.diocesefwsb.org/marriage-course.

McElhaney-Hart

FUNERAL HOME

715 North Jefferson
Huntington

(260) 356-3320

www.mcelhaneyhartfuneralhome.com

Wygant Floral co.

327 Lincolnway West - South Bend
574-232-3354  800-994-2687
Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday 8 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Flowers and Gifts for all occasions!

Mary Green, Owner

AREA-WIDE DELIVERY

wygantfloral.com
WASHINGTON (CNS) — The steep slope, appearing almost as a vertical line, is a stunning mark by the Trump administration on what was once a refugee program recognized around the world as a model to welcome the tyrannized and persecuted masses.

Late Sept. 30, the administration announced it would bring the refugee cap — the maximum number of displaced people the country decides to resettle in a federal fiscal year — to a historic low: 15,000.

The average during presidencies of both Republicans and Democrats had been around 95,000. But the announcement on the new cap doesn’t mean the bad news for refugees, or organizations that help them, ended there.

“It’s not official, the president still has to sign it,” so no refugees can enter the country, said Ashley Feasley, director of policy for Migration and Refugee Services at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

“From Jesus onward, we see these decisions have a tangible impact on those fleeing religious persecution and other vulnerable families in need of refuge.”

— Joint statement released Oct. 2 by Archbishop José H. Gomez of Los Angeles, president of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops, and Auxiliary Bishop Mario E. Dorsonville of Washington

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The steep slope, appearing almost as a vertical line, is a stunning mark by the Trump administration on what was once a refugee program recognized around the world as a model to welcome the tyrannized and persecuted masses.

Late Sept. 30, the administration announced it would bring the refugee cap — the maximum number of displaced people the country decides to resettle in a federal fiscal year — to a historic low: 15,000.

The average during presidencies of both Republicans and Democrats had been around 95,000. But the announcement on the new cap doesn’t mean the bad news for refugees, or organizations that help them, ended there.

“It’s not official, the president still has to sign it,” so no refugees can enter the country, said Ashley Feasley, director of policy for Migration and Refugee Services at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

“The number is terrible,” said Feasley, director of policy for Migration and Refugee Services at the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. “There’s a mention but no action to help,” Feasley said.

The announcement is a continuation of a downward trend, one starkly visible in a graph by the Migration Policy Institute that shows the ebbs and flows of the 40-year-old program, with a steep drop starting in fiscal 2017, when President Donald Trump took office.

The cut was a further blow to agencies, such as Catholic Charities, which along with secular and other faith organizations, including the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society and Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service, have for decades helped populations under siege resettle in the U.S.

“This is just a further death by a thousand paper cuts in terms of the capacity of a great network,” Feasley said. “Not just Catholic but interfaith and secular groups in partnership with the federal government that was recognized as model around the world.”

Feasley also said it cuts programs that had allowed the church to practice its long tradition of helping the stranger.

“It means a lot for Catholics as our faith tradition has a long history, a noted history, of being forced to be on the move, being refugees but also of a people who are welcoming, of accompanying others who are forced to leave,” she said.

“From Jesus onward, we see stories of this in the Bible,” she continued. “Additionally, Pope Francis has mentioned this as one of his issues of great focus and understanding ... recognizing those who have been forced out of their homes, fleeing persecution or circumstances beyond their control.”

The announcement came after the Catholic Church celebrated Sept. 27 as the 2020 World Day of Migrants and Refugees.

Washington said they “continue to be disappointed by the Trump administration’s diminishment of the U.S. refugee resettlement program.”

“These decisions have a tangible impact on those fleeing religious persecution and other vulnerable families in need of refuge,” they said. “While refugees will thankfully be allowed to seek refuge here in the United States in 2021, the low number of admissions, given the global need and the capacity and wealth of the United States, is heartbreaking.”

They called on Congress to “seriously examine the administration’s proposal and strongly encourage the president to increase the eventual presidential determination significantly.”

“Welcoming refugees is an act of love and hope. By helping to resettle the most vulnerable, we are living out our Christian faith as Jesus has challenged us to do,” Archbishop Gomez and Bishop Dorsonville added, pointing to Pope Francis’ words to Congress during his U.S. visit 5 years ago: “Let us remember the Golden Rule: ‘Do unto others as you would have them do unto you.’”

“The yardstick we use for others will be the yardstick which time will use for us.”

“In the same spirit,” the USCCB leaders said, “we urge the administration to continue to offer welcome to refugees to our country. We can and must lead by example in the defense of all human life, including those fleeing persecution.”

The low refugee number was a gut-punch to those who already were bracing for bad news, but now they worry the administration’s stalling action could put even more lives in danger as people who need refuge will be left out.

“The number is terrible,” said Feasley, in an Oct. 1 interview with Catholic News Service. “It’s a continued cutting of refugees allowed to come to the U.S. in a moment of global need. We’re seeing increase refugee flows from a number of places including places that the administration is very much taking an active policy role in, like Venezuela.”

Though a media note released around midnight late Sept. 30 mentions Venezuela, and “our support for the legitimate government of Venezuela in the face of the illegitimate Maduro regime’s tyranny,” it says nothing about how the U.S. will help the 4 million who have been displaced from the South American country, which finds itself in conflict.

“There’s a mention but no action to help,” Feasley said.

The announcement is a continuation of a downward trend, one starkly visible in a graph by the Migration Policy Institute that shows the ebbs and flows of the 40-year-old program, with a steep drop starting in fiscal 2017, when President Donald Trump took office.

The cut was a further blow to agencies, such as Catholic Charities, which along with secular and other faith organizations, including the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society and Lutheran Immigration and Refugee Service, have for decades helped populations under siege resettle in the U.S.

“This is just a further death by a thousand paper cuts in terms of the capacity of a great network,” Feasley said. “Not just Catholic but interfaith and secular groups in partnership with the federal government that was recognized as model around the world.”

Feasley also said it cuts programs that had allowed the church to practice its long tradition of helping the stranger.

“It means a lot for Catholics as our faith tradition has a long history, a noted history, of being forced to be on the move, being refugees but also of a people who are welcoming, of accompanying others who are forced to leave,” she said.

“From Jesus onward, we see stories of this in the Bible,” she continued. “Additionally, Pope Francis has mentioned this as one of his issues of great focus and understanding ... recognizing those who have been forced out of their homes, fleeing persecution or circumstances beyond their control.”

The announcement came after the Catholic Church celebrated Sept. 27 as the 2020 World Day of Migrants and Refugees.