SOUTH BEND — They don’t just talk the talk, they walk the walk when it comes to fund-raising for the school ... literally.

Holy Cross Father John M. DeRiso, the pastor of St. Joseph Parish and assistant pastor Holy Cross Father Nathan Wills have created a special fund-raising project using their own time and talents called “On The Go For St. Joe! Run and Ride, 2009.”

On June 6, Father DeRiso will be running the Sunburst Marathon, a distance of 26.2 miles and on the same day in southeastern Wisconsin, Father Wills will be cycling 100 miles through America’s heartland in the Trek 100. The duo is asking for pledges from the community, church and school for this venture and will donate 10 percent of the proceeds from this year to the South Bend chapter of the Christ Child Society, with the rest going to the school.

“This is the third year in a row that we have done ‘On The Go For St. Joe.’ In 2007, we each ran the Sunburst Half-Marathon, for a total of 26.2 miles, and 10 percent of the funds raised were donated to Hope Rescue Mission, a downtown neighbor and a place where our parishioners and school children have done volunteer service work,” said Father DeRiso about this project. “In 2008, we each ran the Sunburst Marathon, for a total of 52.4 miles, and 10 percent of the funds raised were donated to the Women’s Care Center. This year, 2009, I am running the Sunburst Marathon and Father Nate is participating in the Trek 100 bike race for a total of 126.2 miles.”

As a fund-raiser, this was a great way to combine their individual hobbies with a new and creative way to raise money for

FORT WAYNE — In his first national television interview since the Notre Dame commencement weekend May 17, Bishop John M. D’Arcy made an appearance on Eternal Word Television Network (EWTN) on the May 22 airing of “The World Over,” hosted by Raymond Arroyo.

In the nearly 25-minute interview, Arroyo asked Bishop D’Arcy to comment on a series of questions including the U.S. President Barack Obama’s definition of faith and if University of Notre Dame President Holy Cross Father John I. Jenkins will be penalized in any way for defying Bishop D’Arcy and the U.S. bishops in inviting President Obama to the university as commencement speaker and to receive an honorary doctorate of law degree.

As far as a penalty, Bishop D’Arcy said, “That’s the question that keeps coming into us now,” alluding to the requests his office and other diocesan offices continue to receive from Catholics across the country.

“I don’t know about that situation,” Bishop D’Arcy told Arroyo. “I have written a note to Cardinal George in the hope (that when the U.S. bishops meet in June in San Antonio, Texas) that the matter will be discussed, and I’ve asked to speak there.

“We want to be careful, we want to be gentle, but we want to be firm,” Bishop D’Arcy said. “We start with conversations, but that’s the question that’s coming in

Pentecost

This is a feast filled with graces, Christ having won for us at great cost. The Father sent the gift of the Holy Spirit for light and strength to the church — and to each one. Come, Holy Spirit should be our prayer on this feast — and always.

Things to come

For many years now we have been hearing this word from politicians who oppose legal protection of the unborn child. They want to make the destruction of unborn life, “safe, legal and rare.” Of course, it is never safe for the child.

Another question is why would you want to make it rare, I presume you want to make it rare because it is a very bad thing.

At any rate, so in Fort Wayne we will honor an institution which has indeed made it rare. I refer to the Women’s Care Center. It is without question the finest pro-life pregnancy center in the country, and we are blessed that it was founded in this diocese and is spread now from west to east across the pastoral and ecumenical landscape. Founded by Janet Smith, Ph.D., a friend and a splendid warrior on behalf of life and on behalf of church teaching. The first women were served in a small blue house not far from the Notre Dame campus. That is where it existed in 1985 when I came here as bishop. When Janet, sadly in the opinion of many and in my opinion, left Notre Dame. Ann Murphy Manion became the director. I believe that Ann was in the first class of women graduates of Notre Dame. She is a CPA, and married to Judge Daniel Manion and has four children. Her father, Ed Murphy, was a brilliant teacher at Notre Dame and brought joy and inspiration to many. He showed that victory was possible, even in the most trying of circumstances; and he said there was no better place in the world to be as Saturday afternoon turned into evening — than in the Notre Dame stadium. I wrote to Lou and he agreed to come because of his belief in the cause.

It will be a great night for the unborn child, and it will be a great night for those who love Notre Dame football and know that Lou Holtz is a very special man.

We had a small fund-raiser to get the Fort Wayne center going, which raised $22,000. The Women’s Care Center exploded on the scene. Through the help of John Popp, a successful businessman in Fort Wayne, the first Women’s Care Center was established next to the abortion mill. Business was swift.

Before long, another center was established at the other end of town. The occasion for this was when the man who does the abortions changed his place of business. Through local real estate contacts, the Women’s Care Center was once again set up next to the new abortion mill.

Some time ago, Ann Manion wrote to me and said business was so strong (the Fort Wayne operation sees 75 young girls every day) that they needed some external fundraising. I thought of my good friend, Lou Holtz and his wife Beth, both of whom were associated with Women’s Care Center — during those long ago golden October days when Lou walked the sidelines at Notre Dame and brought joy and inspiration to many. He showed that victory was...
Bishops, others react to Obama, Father Jenkins talks at Notre Dame

BY NANCY FRAZIER O'BRIEN

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The commencement addresses by Holy Cross Father John J. Jenkins and U.S. President Barack Obama at the University of Notre Dame May 17 have drawn some strong comments from U.S. bishops.

Archbishop Charles J. Chaput of Denver said the introduction of Obama by Father Jenkins, who is a professor and University president, did “a real disservice to the church” and suggested in a May 18 statement that Catholics “insist — by their own words and financial support — that institutions claiming to be ‘Catholic’ actually live the faith with courage and consistency.”

Bishop Robert W. Finn of Kansas City-St. Joseph, Mo., said, in a May 18 interview with his diocesan newspaper, The Catholic Key, that although Father Jenkins warned against a tendency to “demonize each other,” he himself used “a whole series of very, very hard words” and spoke “in a very negative way about anyone who appears to be contrary to the decision” to invite Obama.

Archbishop Chaput said Catholics “have the duty to avoid prostituting our Catholic identity by appeals to phony dialogue that mask an dilapidation of our moral witness.”

He criticized the Indiana university’s decision to confer “an unprecedented and unnecessary honorary degree on a man committed to upholding one of the worst Supreme Court decisions in our nation’s history: Roe v. Wade.”

The 1973 ruling lifted most state restrictions on abortion.

“There was no excuse — none, except intellectual vanity — for the university to persist in its course,” the archbishop said. “And Father Jenkins compounded a bad original decision with this disingenuous explanations to subsequently justify it.”

Noting that Mario Cuomo, then governor of New York and a Catholic supporter of keeping abortion legal, spoke at Notre Dame 25 years ago “to outline the ‘Catholic’ case for ‘pro-choice’ public service,” Archbishop Chaput said, “Father Jenkins’ explanations, and President Obama’s honorary degree, are a fitting national bookend to a quar- ter-century of softening Catholic witness in Catholic higher education.”

“Together, they’ve given the next generation of Catholic leadership all the excuses they need to baptize their personal conveniences and ignore what it really demands to be ‘Catholic’ in the public square,” he added.

Bishop Finn said in the inter- view with Catholic Daughter that Jack Smith that the church can never dialogue about “the righteousness or wrongness of abortion — this is an intrinsic evil.”

Father Camillo Tirabassi, 50 years a priest, to retire

BY DIANE FREEBY

SOUTH BEND — “You shouldn’t have any more children. Just have an abortion!”

That’s what friends of Angelica Tirabassi told her when she learned she was pregnant with her sixth child. Only this was back in 1931, well before the unrest that followed Roe v. Wade, the U.S. Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion. It’s why Father Camillo Tirabassi, current pastor of South Bend’s Corpus Christi Parish, believes today’s battle over abor- tion is so critical.

“My mom told me that story so many times, with tears in her eyes,” recalls Father Tirabassi.

“Her eyes told me the pain and the suffering of the child and the family,” he said. “My mom told me that she never should have had a son that’s a priest. People think because there are other issues, abortion can’t be the most important, I can’t see those arguments.”

Never one to shy away from speaking the truth, to adults in the news, athletes on the field or children in Catholic school, Father Tirabassi reflects on his 50 years in the priesthood. His jubilee is May 30, a few weeks before he is scheduled to retire.

Thanks to his mother’s “yes,” Father Tirabassi grew up with older brothers Al, Nick and Lou, “a priest, a priest and a priest.”

When I came home, he would not let me go out of the house without my collar on. He wanted everyone to know that I was a priest. And he wanted everyone to know that he was the father of a priest.”

Ordained in 1959 at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne, Father Tirabassi has shared his gifts with at least six parishes and several schools. His first assignment was at St. Joseph Parish in Fort Wayne, where he served as assistant pastor for four different pastors, including Bishop Joseph Crowley. Father Tirabassi says he learned a lot during those 14 years, teaching reli- gion and being involved with the sports program at Central Catholic High School.

“As a final assignment as pastor of St. John Bosco in Churubusco and Immaculate Conception in Ege, Father Tirabassi landed at Mishawaka’s Queen of Peace in 1978. During that time, he brought a Catholic connection to the local public high school.

“‘The principal at Penn High School was Catholic,’ recalls Father Tirabassi. “I introduced myself to him and he said, ‘You know, Chris Geesman is a member of Queen of Peace. He’s head of the Penn football team. Maybe you can get involved with the football program.’ So I talked to Chris and he said, ‘Why don’t you be our chaplain?’”

This was before anyone had a problem with prayer in public school.

“I was always there for practices and games,” says Father Tirabassi. “I’d lead the prayer before the game. And the kids all responded, whether they were Catholic or not.”

After 10 years at Queen of Peace, Father Tirabassi was assigned to his current position as pastor of Corpus Christi Parish in South Bend. As he wraps up his 21st year, Father Tirabassi says one thing that really makes Corpus Christi stand out: The Holy Heart of Jesus Church.

When Bishop John D’Arcy sent him to Corpus Christi, he told Father Tirabassi to be sure to keep the young program going. That’s exactly what Father Tirabassi did, becoming a member himself. He says he’s never regretted it for a minute.

“Because of all I receive, that’s why,” explains Father Tirabassi.
Cardinal, congressmen urge action by Obama on conscience protection

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The president of the U.S. bishops’ conference and two members of Congress have called on President Barack Obama to make good on something he said in his May 17 speech to University of Notre Dame graduates, namely that he wished to “honor the conscience of those who disagree with abortion.”

In a May 22 statement, Cardinal Francis E. George of Chicago said he was grateful for Obama’s promise to support conscience clauses.

At a May 19 press conference in Washington and in a letter sent that day to the president, Reps. James Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., and Chris Smith, R-N.J., urged Obama to “com- mit to defending conscience protection clauses.

In his statement, Cardinal George said health care professionals and institutions “should know that their deeply held religious or moral convictions will be respected as they exercise their right to serve patients in need.” He noted that since 1973 federal laws have protected the conscience rights of health care providers.

Protecting conscience rights “will strengthen our health care system and enhance many patients’ access to necessary life-affirming care,” the cardinal said.

He said he welcomed working with the administration and other policymakers to advance goals Obama has set out for reducing abortions.

“A government that wants to reduce the tragic number of abortions in our society will also work to ensure that no one is forced to support or participate in abortion,” Cardinal George’s statement said, “whether through directly providing or referring for abortions or being forced to subsidize them with their tax dol-

Earlier this year, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services proposed rescinding the conscience clause that gives federal protection to the conscience rights of health care providers.

“The rule, which took effect two days before Obama took office, codifies three longtime federal statutes prohibiting discrimi-nation against health professionals who decline to participate in abortions or other medical procedures because of their religious or moral objections.”

The letter from Sensenbrenner and Smith to Obama stressed that the president should use all the tools at his disposal “to keep conscience protections in place and reduce the number of abortions in the United States.”

The religious and moral views of health care workers should be respected,”

Eighth graders gather for Mass with bishop at cathedral

FORT WAYNE — Students, faculty and parents filled the pews at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception joining Bishop John M. D’Arcy and parish priests from Fort Wayne and the surrounding area for the 2009 eighth-grade graduates’ liturgy.

Mass on May 21.

The Catholic Schools Office reports 538 students were on hand to celebrate the traditional event.

One representative from each eighth-grade class processed in with priests, Jim Fitzpatrick, master of ceremonies, and Bishop D’Arcy. Various students participated in the special Miss parts and music.

In his homily, Bishop D’Arcy reflected on the Gospel from Mark reminding students to be mindful of the presence of the risen Savior in their every day lives as they leave the eighth grade and go on to Catholic or public high school.

“It is very important you believe that Jesus Christ is alive. He loves you. He wants to help you and he wants to be near you,” Bishop D’Arcy stressed.

Bishop D’Arcy also recalled Pope John Paul II’s words from Jesus, “Do not be afraid. I am with you,” as he challenged students to be a witness for Jesus Christ during the rest of their lives.

Bishop D’Arcy closed his remarks instructing the graduates to recite in unison his favorite prayer for the young, “Lord, help me, teach me, to find my vocation in life.”

After Superintendent of Catholic Schools Holy Cross Father Stephen Kempinger’s congratulatory comments and thank yous and just before the recessional, principals from each of the schools gathered at the altar to offer a special prayer for their students asking God to “send his Spirit upon them to guide them through their high school years” as the group parted ways from this grade school chapter in their lives.

Parish schools took turns posing their class in front of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception before the eighth-grade graduates’ liturgy Mass on May 21.

and I don’t know the answer to that.”

Bishop D’Arcy also was asked to address a comment President Obama made at the commencement about faith: “Remember too that the ultimate irony of faith is that it necessarily admits doubt. It’s the belief in things not seen,” Obama said. “It’s beyond our capacity as human beings to know with certainty what God has planned for us or what he asks of us.”

Bishop D’Arcy replied, “It’s against Catholic teaching on faith. I gave a course in the seminary — I taught it for years — on faith. One of the characteristics of faith is its certain. And (President Obama) says there’s no certainty in it.

“Cardinal Ratzinger has written on this … in his great book, ‘Introduction to Christianity,’ (and refers to) the unbelief in the believer — the man in the Gospel, ‘Lord, I believe, help my unbelief,'” Bishop D’Arcy added. “But certitude is one of the characteristics of faith and it’s based on the Divine Giver, the one who gives life,” Bishop D’Arcy said, “Lord, I believe, help my unbelief.”

He has opposed consistently in his life and in those decisions he has made — the Mexico City policy on foreign affairs and so forth on those decisions. He changed laws, which protected the unborn child, and then Notre Dame gave him a doctorate of laws.

Arroyo asked Bishop D’Arcy if he felt Notre Dame had given up its Catholic identity through this act. Bishop D’Arcy responded: “There’s a lot of beautiful things at Notre Dame: the sacramental life of the children, the young people; the theology department so strengthened in recent years; you go into that basilica and so many (students) going to confession. But truth is truth, and I think something precious was lost.

“It’s under the protection of Our Lady on the dome,” Bishop D’Arcy said. “And I think we have to pray to her and pray to the Lord to take care of it. They lost something special.

When asked if Father Jenkins’ mention of President Obama’s ambitious goals across a sweeping agenda such as extending health care coverage to the millions who don’t have it, improving education — especially for those who most need it — and promoting renewable energy for the sake of the economy, security and climate outweigh the church teaching on the sanctity of life, Bishop D’Arcy said, “Those are goals. The Catholic Church and I certainly support many of them, but do they outweigh in just good Catholic ethics, in Catholic moral theology, do they outweigh (President Obama’s) opposition to something that is intrinsically evil — the taking of the life of the unborn child who has no constituency except people of good will, except sometimes the Catholic Church? And I think that is the error there. It does not outweigh it in my judgment.”

On a discussion of dialogue, Bishop D’Arcy said, “Dialogue is always a search for truth. Pope John Paul says in ‘Ex Corde Ecclesiae’ … that freedom is always subject to truth.

Dialogue is to find truth. Dialogue is never an end in itself.

One theologian, Father Robert Barron, the Francis Cardinal George Chair of Faith and Culture at University of St. Mary of the Lake/Mundelein Seminary in Mundelein, III., has pointed out, noted Bishop D’Arcy, that “dialogue became a fetish there.”

“There wasn’t a dialogue Sunday as far as I can see,” Bishop D’Arcy said.

“If some good comes from it, I’m all for it,” Bishop D’Arcy said. “I didn’t see it. The price paid is too great. … I love Notre Dame with the whole heart. It’s been a privilege to be associated with it, but they paid too great a price.”

Sensenbrenner said during the press conference. “Workers should have the right to refuse to participate in an abortion procedure without the fear of losing their job or being discriminated against.”

In his speech at the University of Notre Dame in Indiana, Obama called on people with differing views on abortion to find common ground.

“Let’s work together to reduce the number of women seeking abortions by reducing unintended pregnancies, and making adoption more available, and providing care and support for women who do carry their child to term,” he said.

“Let’s honor the conscience of those who disagree with abortion, and draft a sensible conscience clause, and make sure that all of our health care policies are grounded in clear ethics and sound science, as well as respect for the equality of women,” he added.

Smith noted that he and Sensenbrenner were simply asking the president to make sure “that his deeds match his words.”

He said the president could act on the words of his commencement speech by stopping the efforts of his administration to rescind current conscience regulations. “Protecting conscience is the truly pro-choice position and respects the diversity of opinion in our society as well as the sanctity of life,” he added.

Dr. David Stevens, president of the Christian Medical Association, said in a May 18 statement that if Obama is “truly concerned about finding common ground, he should meet with doctors and patients who would be affected” by the lack of a conscience-protection clause. He said the regulation was needed to protect doctors, nurses and other health care profession- als from discrimination based on their religious beliefs.

Sri Lankans take cover under umbrellas as they participate in a street parade in central Colombo May 22. The parade of more than 200,000 people was part of celebration of the end of the war.

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Pope Benedict XVI has named Philadelphia Auxiliary Bishop Joseph R. Cistone, 60, to head the Diocese of Saginaw, Mich. The appointment was announced in Washington May 20 by Archbishop Pietro Sambi, apostolic nuncio to the United States. Bishop Cistone succeeds now-Archbishop Robert J. Carlson, who was named April 21 to head the St. Louis Archdiocese. He will be installed the sixth bishop of the Diocese of Saginaw July 28, the fifth anniversary of his episcopal ordination.

Poll shows Americans, Catholics in particular, give pope high marks

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (CNS) — Americans overall and American Catholics in particular hold Pope Benedict XVI in high regard, according to a Marist College poll conducted in partnership with the Knights of Columbus. Sixty percent of Americans reported they have either a favorable or very favorable impression of the pontiff while 76 percent of Catholics hold the same view, the telephone poll of 2,078 people found. At the same time, 20 percent of Americans and 11 percent of Catholics told interviewers they have an unfavorable or very unfavorable view of Pope Benedict. The results of the poll were released May 19. It was conducted March 24-31 by the Marist College Institute of Public Opinion, which is in Poughkeepsie, N.Y. Results for Americans overall have a margin of error of plus or minus 2.5 percentage points. For Catholics, the margin of error is plus or minus 4.5 percentage points. By a margin of more than 4 to 1 — 73 percent to 17 percent — Catholics said the pope was good for the Catholic Church. Another 10 percent were unsure. A majority of Americans — 57 percent to 21 percent — held the same opinion while 22 percent were unsure.

Bishop urges focus on biblical roots of Catholic immigration position

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (CNS) — U.S. Catholics have a difficult task accepting church teaching about immigration laws, said Sacramento Bishop Jaime Soto, chairman of the board of Catholic Legal Immigration Network, known as CLINIC. He urged Catholics to look at the Bible to better understand the church’s teaching on immigration and its long-standing support for the rights of immigrants. In an interview with the Colorado Catholic Herald, newspaper of the Colorado Springs Diocese, Soto said that current immigration laws have unintended consequences that are detrimental to public safety and economic development. The money spent on immigrant enforcement on the border is that it compels many people to stay in the country when they might otherwise return home,” he said while he was in town for the annual convening of CLINIC May 20-22.

Baltimore Archdiocese investigates possible miracle in Seelos cause

BALTIMORE (CNS) — Go home and prepare to die. That’s what Mary Ellen Heibel’s doctors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington told her May 11, 2004, after they discovered that the cancer that had attacked Heibel’s esophagus in 2003 and then a lymph node later that year had spread throughout her body. Given about six months, the longtime parishioner of St. Mary in Baltimore underwent a course of chemotherapy at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore as a palliative treatment to extend her life. But doctors warned it would only postpone the inevitable. And the suggestion of a Pittsburgh priest, Heibel began praying a novena in 2002 to Blessed Francis X. Seelos, a 19th-century Redemptorist priest and missionary from France who was a native of Seelos, Wisconsin, and who, during the course of treatment, doctors had told her she was inoperable. However, while Heibel was in the hospital, priests from her parish told her she was in a coma. She woke up Wednesday and called the Baltimore Archdiocese. The archdiocese’s official is currently investigating whether Heibel might just be right.

WHUT has notified the Archdiocese of Washington and the Diocese of Arlington, Va., which co-sponsor the program, that — regardless of how the PBS board votes in June — it will drop the Mass for shut-ins after the July 26 telecast.

NII plan for embryonic stem cells called objectionable, obsolete

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The National Institutes of Health’s draft guidelines for embryonic stem-cell research support “a course of action that is both morally objectionable and, increasingly, scientifically obsolete,” the general secretary of the United States. Bishop Cistone succeeds now-Archbishop Robert J. Carlson, who was named April 21 to head the St. Louis Archdiocese. He will be installed the sixth bishop of the Diocese of Saginaw July 28, the fifth anniversary of his episcopal ordination.

TV stations airing religious shows at risk of losing PBS affiliation

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Public television stations may be confronted by a hard choice later this year: drop their religious programming or risk losing their affiliation with the Public Broadcasting Service. The PBS board of directors will meet June 16 to consider stricter enforcement of a 1985 policy directing PBS member stations to air “noncommercial, nonpolitical and nonsectarian” programs. PBS was accepting comment from its stations through the end of May on the issue. According to an e-mail from Jennifer Lawson, general manager of WHUT, one of three PBS stations in Washington, the board is considering a possible policy that would no longer allow a PBS affiliate to air religious programs under two conditions: it must either be accepted by the religious program or the PBS station must accept the risk of losing their affiliation with PBS.

Newspaper of
NEWHAVEN — Ranked No. 1 in his class of 139, Mitchell Robert Wyss has been declared valedictorian for the Heritage High School Class of 2009. A Flamberg student of St. Louis Besancon Parish, Wyss has resided in New Haven all his life.

The youngest child of Chris and Angie Wyss, he plans to major in chemical engineering at Trine University in the fall. Wyss hopes to continue on with graduate school at the University of Illinois. Wyss envisions that he will stay in state and start a family while pursuing his career as a chemical engineer after his schooling.

During his high school years, Wyss enjoyed courses like earth space science, physics and calculus.

He will most miss Friday night football games and will always remember how he pulled into first position his final trimester after ranking second in his class all four years.

“My advice to younger students would be to start strong, end strong and stay focused all four years. You never know what could happen,” explained Wyss.

With a new ministry program just starting, Wyss has attended the Sunday night monthly youth Masses at St. Louis. He was also involved in the dance marathon at Heritage this spring to raise money for Riley’s Children Hospital and enjoys recreational sports and “hanging out with his friends” in his free time.

Wyss’s faith has been an important part of his high school years and especially after being involved in a car accident his junior year.

“My faith has gotten me through the down times like when I broke my leg in the crash and had to regroup,” Wyss said.

“I would like to thank my family, my friends and my teachers for supporting me and encouraging me to keep going,” Wyss concluded.

Hessen Cassel Knights distribute Tootsie Rolls

FORT WAYNE — Each year members of the Knights of Columbus distribute Tootsie Rolls at various locations throughout Indiana for the benefit of the intellectually challenged. This year was no exception and members of Knight of Columbus Council 12379, at St. Joseph-Hessen Cassel collected more than $1,000 for the effort.

The numbers for this year are still being tallied but during the 2008 event, more than $240,000 was collected statewide. Some of the state recipients are ARC and Special Olympics.

St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth Ann Seton School students named state handwriting winners

FORT WAYNE — Three students from St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth Ann Seton School were named the 2009 State Handwriting Winners in the National Handwriting Contest sponsored by Zaner-Bloser Educational Publishers. Third grader, Payton Head, Evan Raymer, fourth grade, and Terese Schomogyi, fifth grade, were the recipients of this award.

These students will be recognized at the school’s award ceremony at the end of the year. Payton Head, this year’s third-grade winner, was the 2008 National Champion for her grade level.

Women invited to spend a week at Indiana monastery

FERNANDINAS — The Sisters of St. Benedict of Ferdinand are offering a free stay June 26-Jul 2 to single Catholic women, ages 18 to 40, who are interested in learning about religious life.

The theme for the week-long experience at Monastery Immaculate Conception will be “Sharing Our Stories.” Participants will join in the prayer and community life of the Ferdinand Benedictine sisters, take part in discussions and meet other women who are considering religious life.

There is no charge for the week, which begins at 7 p.m. EDT Friday, June 26, and runs to 1 p.m. Thursday, July 2. For information call Sister Agnes Marie Dauby or Sister Michelle Sinkhon at (800)-738-9999 or e-mail vocation@thedome.org.

Registration is also available online at www.thedome.org, where there is more information about the vocation program of the Ferdinand Benedictines.

School Sisters of St. Francis celebrate jubilee

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — Sixty-six U.S. School Sisters of St. Francis will celebrate milestone anniversaries of service as women religious on June 20. Three associates of the School Sisters of St. Francis will also celebrate 25 year jubilees. The following School Sister served in the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend:

St. Jude distinguished alumni award recipient announced

SOUTH BEND — The Board of St. Jude Catholic School has named Julie Flanagan as its second annual recipient of the National Catholic Educational Association Distinguished Graduate Award.

According to the NCEA’s Web site, this distinction honors “graduates of Catholic elementary or middle schools who have made a contribution to American life and/or the Catholic Church. The recipient must have graduated from the Catholic school at least 10 years prior to presenting the award.”

Nominations were solicited from parishioners and school families. The board was unanimous in its recommendation of Flanagan.

Flanagan attended St. Jude as a child, graduating to Riley High School in 1972. She received her initial degree in education from Indiana University in Bloomington, with graduate degrees and certifications from IUSB and Butler.

Flanagan taught at St. Jude from 1980 through 2002, initially under principal Gary Jaronik, and later, Judi Cole. She began in fifth-grade homeroom and middle school math, then later moved to eighth-grade homeroom.

Flanagan’s fondest memories of St. Jude as both a student and teacher included special activities such as assemblies, dances, special Masses, projects, science fairs, playground kickball games and retreats. She recalls, “It felt like being a part of a family, so you really wanted everyone to succeed.”

Flanagan will speak to the graduating eighth-grade students of St. Jude on June 1.

Hessen Cassel supports Women’s Care Center

FORT WAYNE — Members of Knights of Columbus Council 12379 at St. Joseph-Hessen Cassel Church hosted a pancake and sausage breakfast for the benefit of the Women’s Care Center of Fort Wayne on May 17 in the parish hall. Net proceeds from the event amounted to more than $800. In addition St. Joseph School conducted a rummage sale and many infant items were collected for the Woman’s Care Center as well. St. Joseph Knights thank all who participated and made the event a success.

St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth students receive Carson Scholarship

FORT WAYNE — Two students at St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth Ann Seton School and one alumna were awarded Carson Scholarships. Mark Hellinger, son of Mark and Karen Hellinger, is currently a seventh-grade student. Nancy McNamara, daughter of Dan and Julie McNamara, is in the eighth grade. Samantha Rhairg, an alumna of St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School, has also been given this honor.

Sister Mary Gertrude Ann retires from teaching

Sister of Notre Dame Sister Mary Gertrude Ann is retiring after 51 years of teaching at the end of this school year. For the last 18 years she has taught first grade at St. Jude School in Fort Wayne. To honor her all students in grades 1-8, currently attending St. Jude, who have been taught by Sister Mary Gertrude Ann, offered her a flower last week to make a gratitude bouquet, with the waiting students lining the hallway there. The 104 participating students are pictured with Sister Mary Gertrude Ann, who stands at right in second row, outside the school following morning Mass. A print of the photo, matted with signatures of all the grateful students, was presented to Sister Mary Gertrude Ann at a surprise cake and punch reception that was held in her honor on May 15.

Father Robert Traub, senior priest, celebrates 70 years

FORT WAYNE — At age 96, with 70 years of priesthood on the record, his vision is nearly gone and his hearing is on notice, but all the lights are on upstairs and Father Robert Traub has no trouble recalling that as a third grader in Muncie, Ind., he knew he would probably be a priest.

It was the influence of priests, sisters and serving at Mass that incubated this idea, and now, having been a priest for longer than many people live, Father Traub, without hesitation, states that he enjoyed every assignment, including 12 years at Hammond Noll High School, where he taught history, English, Latin and religion.

Father Traub was ordained with 11 others by Bishop John F. Noll on June 2, 1939 in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. One by one, his classmates have all passed on, with many of them returned to the cathedral for their final rites.

Father Traub’s first assignment was to go to the University of Notre Dame for one year to get an Indiana teacher’s license. He then went to St. Joan of Arc in Kokomo, then the Diocese of Fort Wayne.

Father replaced two priests who left Hammond Noll High School for military service in WWII.

After 12 years of teaching, he returned to pastoral work at Bluffton, Besancon, Huntington and finally at St. Jude, Fort Wayne, where he served as chaplain at Parkview Hospital and answered all emergency calls for 17 years.

Father Traub will celebrate an anniversary Mass at 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 28, at St. Jude Church in Fort Wayne. A reception will follow in the church hall.

Father Thomas Doriot celebrates 60th anniversary

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Now retired in the diocese of Sacramento and celebrating the 60th anniversary of his ordination, Father Thomas E. Doriot, enjoys California because he can visit with his sister Jean, who also resides in Sacramento as a retired Sister of Providence.

Father Doriot, who had the unique experience of becoming pastor of the church where he was baptized, St. Patrick in Fort Wayne, credits his vocation to the example set by his parents, Julius and Margaret (McCarthy) Doriot.

His first assignment, and his favorite, was at Holy Angels Church in Gary.

“Those were the days,” he recalls, “when Forty Hours was celebrated on a regular basis.”

Father Doriot later served as assistant pastor at St. John the Baptist in New Haven, St. John the Baptist, Fort Wayne, and Sacred Heart, Fort Wayne.

While pastors were ill, he filled in at Immaculate Conception Parish, Auburn and St. Stanislaus Church, New Carlisle. His final assignment as an assistant was at St. Vincent de Paul, Elkhart, and he later served as pastor St. Mary of the Assumption, South Bend, St. Michael, Plymouth and retired from St. Patrick in Fort Wayne.

Father Doriot still celebrates Mass on a daily basis and observed a special ceremony and social with other jubilarians and Sacramento Bishop Jaime Soto on Memorial Day.

Father William Peil celebrates 60th jubilee to the priesthood

FORT WAYNE — Over 50 years ago, when the Diocese of Fort Wayne split and the western portion was made the Diocese of Gary, Father William Peil, a native of Fort Wayne, was caught at the western split. He and his brother, Daniel, were one of the six sets of priest-brothers who were caught in the diocesan split, and Father Peil is the sole survivor of these priest-brother sets.

Father Peil grew up at St. Mary’s Parish in Fort Wayne. He was part of the charter class of Central Catholic and attended there from 1938-1942.

Father Peil was ordained to the priesthood on June 11, 1949 at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. His first Mass was celebrated at St. John the Baptist Parish in Fort Wayne, his family’s parish at the time.

Upon retirement, Father Peil returned to Fort Wayne and he currently resides at Saint Anne Home.

He still makes monthly trips to Gary to play bridge there with three priest friends. He is also a member of the St. Francis Bridge Club in Fort Wayne. His hobbies are table tennis and working his radio-controlled sailboat and airplane.

Writing has special appeal to Father Peil. He publishes “A Tract for our Times” on current issues. Occasionally, his works are featured in Today’s Catholic. He has also authored a series of seven booklets called the Rainbow Series that focuses on various facets of living a Christian life in the Catholic Church.

Father Peil celebrated his jubilee May 19 at the Gary cathedral where the jubilarian priests celebrated Mass and enjoyed a dinner afterwards.

Father Balzer celebrates 60th jubilee to the priesthood

FORT WAYNE — “Forty years a priest — how blessed can a person be? It hardly seems possible that so much time has slipped by since that great and glorious day, June 4, 1949, when I was ordained to the holy priesthood.”

This quote was penned 20 years ago by Father Raymond Balzer in a memoir entitled “Reflections,” in which he accounts the days leading up to his ordination into the priesthood.

Ordained by Apostolic Delegate Most Rev. A.G. Cicognani at Pontifical College Josephinum in 1949, Father Balzer has served the diocese as an assistant and pastor at many parishes. As pastor, he served at St. Patrick, Lagro; St. Mary Huntington; St. Jude, South Bend; St. Patrick, Fort Wayne; St. Michael, Plymouth; St. Rose, Monroeville and Immaculate Conception, Auburn.

Today, Father Balzer is preparing to celebrate 60 years in the priesthood. Although he officially retired 10 years ago, Father Balzer continues to serve God by assisting with Mass, on occasion, at Saint Anne Home and providing spiritual guidance to those who cross his path on a daily basis.

Father Balzer was asked what he has been doing since retirement in 1999. He says, “When I retired I volunteered to spend a year with the Precious Blood Fathers. I enjoyed the experience because my older brother became a missionary priest near Celina, Ohio. Since then, I enjoy watching sports, such as tennis and football (especially Notre Dame football).”
Father Paul Bueter celebrates 50 years in priesthood

FORT WAYNE — The first 50 years of priesthood have gone by quickly for Father Paul Bueter. Retiring from shepherding the parishioners of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church and Diocesan Shrine in Warsaw in January, this jubilarian has ministered to Hispanic Catholics both here and abroad.

A native of Fort Wayne, Father Bueter was born in 1933 to Raymond and Annette Bueter, the third of five children. His family was parishioners of St. Jude Parish, where he attended elementary school.

Father Bueter entered Our Lady of the Lake Minor Seminary in Syracuse following high school graduation in 1951, and continued his studies at St. Mary Major Seminary in Baltimore.

Ordained into the priesthood on May 30, 1959 at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception by Bishop Leo Pursley, Bueter served as associate and pastor of several area churches including St. John the Baptist in South Bend, St. Bavo Parish in Mishawaka, St. John the Evangelist in Goshen and Our Lady of Guadalupe Parish in Warsaw. Other assignments include consultor to the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend and vicar for the Elkhart area.

Father Bueter’s journey in priestly service took a unique turn in 1965 when he offered his service to the Hispanic population in Latin America, serving in peasant areas for 16 years in Panama. He was called back to the U.S. in 1981 to pastor at St. Bavo.

Of his assignments Father Bueter says, “They all had their good points.” His joy has always been to minister to the people in his charge “through the Eucharist.”

Father Sienkiewicz celebrates 50th jubilee

His interest in a religious vocation grew gradually “as I lived through the many personal and public situations, conditions and experiences during time spent as a layman. Reading the good news and trying to live it out in daily living prompted me to think of becoming a priest,” he said.

Father Sienkiewicz was ordained May 30, 1959 by Bishop Leo Pursley at Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne.

TIRABASSI

“You learn quickly that it’s your time not so much to pray to Jesus, but to listen to what Jesus has to say to you. And I really believe that. Many, perhaps all, my good thoughts of things that happen in the church ... homilies and this kind of thing ... come from the Holy Hour program.”

Corpus Christi is also a place where the rosary is prayed before each weekend Mass, and after Mass on weekdays, part of Father Cam’s effort to make Mary a part of parish life.

“The rosary’s been very important,” says Father Tirabassi. “Especially in lieu of the fact that we just celebrated Easter, and to get to Easter you have to go through Good Friday. On Good Friday, you know, Jesus gave his mother to John. In giving Mary to him, he also gave his mother to us.”

In retirement, Father Tirabassi says he will be in residence at South Bend’s Holy Family Church. He will also continue his work as chaplain at Saint Joseph’s High School and as a member of the School Board.

According to Father Tirabassi, things have changed a lot in 21 years. He remembers when students were too timid to say hello to a priest in the hallway, and smiles talking about how today’s kids don’t hesitate to walk up and ask if they can make their confession. Father Tirabassi attributes that to better Catholic education.

Father Tirabassi will say his golden jubilee Mass June 7 at 3 p.m., followed by a dinner with parishioners and friends later that evening. The weekend before, he plans to have a pizza party with the young people he holds so dear.

Msgr. James Wolf celebrates 40 years

WARSAW — Msgr. James J. Wolf will celebrate his 40th year of ordination to the priesthood this May 7, 1969 in his homeland of Sri Lanka.

He says his own faith was nurtured by the traditional Catholics in his home country and Catholics in America; but “the culture and way of life” between the two countries are the most different.

He says his own faith was nurtured by the traditional Catholics of Sri Lanka.

Ordained to the priesthood on May 7, 1969 in his homeland of Sri Lanka, “preaching and teaching the word of God” is what Father Perera says he likes most about being a priest.

On May 17, the parish held a dinner for Father Perera. A parishioner composed a song to the melody of “A Few of My Favorite Things” and the choir sang the song for their pastor. Parishioners and nearby Amish neighbors contributed food for the dinner. And Father Perera prepared a rice dish from his native Sri Lanka.

Religious education instructor Nancy Subler noted that her class made cards for Father Perera. Subler tells Today’s Catholic of one student’s note: “You are the only priest I have gotten to know so well. I am praying for you and thank you for telling us funny stories and telling us about Jesus. And thanks for the chocolate bars.”

Father Perera’s plans are to celebrate with the other diocesan jubilarians this year. A special Mass and dinner is usually scheduled in the fall.

Father Perera's native land and a world away from Father’s House. Parishioners who give of their time and talents so freely has been such a blessing,” says the jubilarian.

When time permits, Msgr. Wolf enjoys skiing, a hobby that he says he wishes he had taken up earlier in his life, only having taken up the sport when he was 35 years old. Sports and reading are other hobbies that interest Msgr. Wolf, as well.

Msgr. Wolf will celebrate his jubilee Mass with family and friends. He said the celebration would be simple but joyful. Our Father’s House will provide a luncheon following the Mass.

St. Bavo Parish in Mishawaka sends prayers and congratulations with best wishes to FATHER PAUL BUETER as he celebrates 50 years of priesthood.

St. Mary of the Assumption Parish and St. Joseph School, Decatur are pleased to honor a native son FATHER STEPHEN COLCHIN as he celebrates his silver jubilee as a priest of Jesus Christ!
KENDALLVILLE — The state of Goa in India is 40 percent Catholic and can trace its evangelization to St. Francis Xavier. This is the region where Father Lourdino Fernandes was born in 1943.

“My village was almost 95 percent Catholic,” he says. “So I was brought up in an entirely Catholic environment.”

Father Fernandes describes his childhood: “My parents and grandparents were strongly rooted in faith. They prayed for vocations every day when we prayed the family rosary and prayed that one of their children may join the priesthood. They were very religious and spoke highly of their priests and were very generous towards them.”

At the young age of seven, Father Fernandes became an altar boy, and at his ninth-grade retreat at the boarding school he happened to travel past Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College in Terre Haute, Indiana. It was there that he was introduced to the military academy at West Point.

He was ordained to the priesthood for the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, a young Stephen Colchin happened to travel past Saint Meinrad Archabbey every day while building Patoka Lake just southeast of Jasper as chief of the survey section for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It was at this same time in his life, that Decatur native Colchin began contemplating a career move in a different direction.

During a one-year leave of absence from his position and after taking a series of six different battery tests, he became one of 54 applicants vying for 48 spots in the School of Theology under Father Daniel Buechlein, now archbishop of Indianapolis.

“I remember secretly hoping they would not choose me,” admitted Father Colchin, who recalled searching for signs to support his decision. In 1979, his application was accepted at St. Meinrad.

Stephen Edward Colchin was ordained a priest on June 9, 1984, by Bishop William McManus at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne at the age of 27.

Born on Oct. 22, 1946, the second child of Hillis and the late Mark Colchin, Father Colchin has an older brother, Mark, younger siblings — Michael, Rose (Schnepp), Fredrick and Paul, and 10 nieces and nephews. He attended St. Joseph, Decatur and graduated in 1965 from Decatur Catholic. He holds an associate degree in civil engineering technology and a bachelor of science degree in land survey engineering from Purdue University. Hoping to be a pilot one day, Father Colchin also spent four years in the Air Force.

As a deacon, Father Colchin first went to St. Charles Borromeo, where he was assigned during the retirement of Father Hession and start of the Father Seulzer era. From 1988-1991, Father Colchin teamed up with Father Derrick Sneyd at St. Thomas the Apostle in Elkhart. It was during these years that Father Colchin was invited to join Mike Hintz’s seminary class on a study tour of Israel. St. Joseph, Bluffton, became Father Colchin’s new home in 1991 before being moved to St. Louis-Besancon Parish in 1997.

In honor of his silver anniversary, Father Colchin will offer a Mass of Thanksgiving on Sunday, June 7, at 9 a.m. at St. Rose Parish with a brunch immediately following, and a second Mass at St. Louis at 2 p.m. with a potluck afterwards.

Father Largent celebrates 25 years of priesthood

MISHAWAKA — Father Jeffery Largent can only characterize his 25-year ministry one way: “Great,” he said from the parlor.

Serving at St. Monica for five years now, Father Largent says people refer to him as the funeral priest and also the wedding priest.

He presides over several funerals each month for people he’s come in contact over his 25 years in ministry.

But, he admits, he’s also the wedding priest “because everyone wants to get married in the beautiful church,” referring to St. Monica.

Despite his busy funeral and wedding schedule, Father Largent said he continues to try to meet with students and teach at least once per week. He has spent much of his career teaching — a seven-year stint at Bishop Luers in Fort Wayne and 10 years at Culver Academies in Culver.

A graduate of North American College, a seminary in Rome, Father Largent says the first 25 years of his ministry has flown by and he’s looking forward to the next 25, though he doesn’t have any definitive plans of his own.

“Whatever the bishop assigns me to — we don’t have any plans,” he said with a laugh.

Father Largent first began to feel the call to ministry as a schoolboy while attending St. Anthony in South Bend. He was head altar boy and the parish priest at the time was involved with the students. Interestingly, his classmate was Mary Hesburgh. Father Ted Hesburgh’s niece. Father Hesburgh, led the University of Notre Dame for 35 years, and he encouraged Father Largent to become a Holy Cross brother. However, his parish priest at St. Anthony encouraged him to become a priest for the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend. He finally decided on the diocese.

“I didn’t know much about Holy Cross, so I chose the diocese,” said Father Largent, 51.

Since his ordination, Father Largent said ministry hasn’t changed much and the people he ministers to haven’t changed much either, though the family dynamic has altered the way he does ministry. Because more and more families are single-parent families, he has to deal with issues regarding kids earlier than he did 25 years ago.

“They have one set of rules at one home and another set of rules at the other home,” he said. “We try to bring consistency, but sometimes we don’t know all the stuff.”

Despite this, he said he’s changed too.

“You always get more wise when you get older,” he said.

“Every young person wants to go out and save the world, but then you realize that you just do the best you can. What’s that corny phrase — let go, let God.”

Celebrations for Father Largent’s jubilee are scheduled after Mass on Aug. 2 at St. Monica as well as on Aug. 9 at St. Mary’s in Fort Wayne, where he started his ministry.

Celebrating 25 years of priestly service

NEW CARLISLE — After 25 years in ministry, Father Paul McCarthy asks himself and others one question: “The main thing is did you do everything you could,” he said from the parlor of the rectory at St. Stanislaus Kostka Catholic Church in New Carlisle. “Did you come to God in holiness.”

Holiness and a family style of ministry perhaps the most important markers of Father McCarthy’s past 25 years in ministry.

“The greatest need in ministry is holiness and faithfulness because that is our first vocation — for everyone to be holy,” he said.

He believes that God places particular burdens on each priest’s heart, and the holiness of those in ministry and lay people lays heavily on his.
Father Bruce Piechocki is silver jubilarian

FORT WAYNE — “It doesn’t seem like 25 years,” says Father Bruce Piechocki of his life in the priesthood. “Time has flown by. And even knowing the difficulties, I’d do it all again!” he adds with conviction.

The South Bend native was born to Louis and Susan in 1956. His family attended St. Casimir Parish, where he began his Catholic education. Following graduation from Saint Joseph’s High School, Father Piechocki attended Holy Cross Junior College and continued his studies at the University of Notre Dame. He entered Saint Meinrad Seminary in St. Meinrad in 1979. Bishop William E. McManus conferred holy orders to Father Piechocki on June 9, 1984, at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne. His assignments have included serving as associate pastor of the cathedral and assistant to the chancellor, associate pastor at St. Mary Parish in Decatur, administrator of St. Mary Parish in Culver, associate pastor of St. Adalbert Parish in South Bend and administrator of St. Augustine Church in South Bend.

In 1989 Father Piechocki moved to Washington, D.C., to attend the Catholic University of America for two years. Although he enjoyed his stay and studies there, he reports, “I tend to like the parish assignments. In that setting you get to touch peoples lives and be with them in good times and times of struggle.”

Father Piechocki was appointed to the South Bend Marriage Tribunal part-time in 1991 as he served simultaneously as associate pastor at St. Adalbert Parish. And in 1994 he became the adjunct judicial vicar for the tribunal.

He has also served on the Presbyteral Council and in the College of Consultants.

Currently Father Piechocki serves as administrator of St. Francis Xavier Church in Pierceton as well as completing his 25th year on the marriage tribunal.

Father Piechocki attributes his love of the priesthood not only to his Catholic education but contact with a number of priests over the years. His most enduring efforts as priest, he says, are, “saying Mass and hearing confessions.” He also gathers with campers at Jellystone Park in the summers to celebrate Mass with them.

As for the future of this faithful and devoted man, he intends to serve in “whatever the bishop tells me.”

Celebration plans for the silver jubilarian include a special Mass on June 14, at St. Francis Xavier Church in Pierceton, with a 25th Mass following Mass in Columbia City.

He will celebrate again with an afternoon Mass on July 12 in South Bend at his native parish, St. Casimir. A dinner-reception will follow.

His assignments have been at St. Jude, South Bend; St. Vincent de Paul, Fort Wayne; St. Adalbert, South Bend; and St. Michael, Plymouth, all as an assistant pastor. He was appointed pastor at St. Hedwig, South Bend. In 1986, he was appointed to Catholic Charities in Fort Wayne. He also served as associate pastor of St. John, Fort Wayne; St. Mary, Decatur; and St. Anthony, South Bend.

Father Sienkiewicz told Today’s Catholic, “I always thank God that he made me a priest, before Vatican II, during Vatican II and after Vatican II — that I was able to see the vast changes in the church.” He said, with Vatican II, “the church was given back to the people.” His favorite assignment was working with social and interracial work in South Bend in the late 1960s and early 1970s. He enjoyed his work with ecumenical issues, the charismatic movement, the abortion issue and working with African-Americans in the community.

He lived at St. Hedwig Church during this time, was later appointed pastor of St. Hedwig.

Father Sienkiewicz plans to celebrate his anniversary with his family.

Possible mergers indicate need for priests

Some weeks ago, Bishop John M. D’Arcy released a report on the future of the parishes in our diocese. Advised by a committee of priests who studied our parish situation in depth, Bishop D’Arcy articulated possible mergers of parishes in the future. The purpose of this report is to articulate a plan by which the faithful in our diocese would be better served by a more equitable distribution of priests.

No doubt this announcement was hard for some to hear. It is painful to consider that one’s parish, where one was married or where one’s children were baptized, could be merged with another parish.

Certainly, the bishop takes no joy in considering such possibilities, but as he himself said in his statement, “It is incumbent upon me, especially given my knowledge of the diocese, to face what must be done, by at least initiating those changes which need to be made for the better pastoral care of our people.”

Some realizations

This report calls forth two realizations. First, it calls forth to all of us the precious gift which the priesthood is. By virtue of this gift, despite the weakness and the unworthiness of the priest himself, the Lord Jesus brings forth the Eucharist, preaches the word of God, gives pastoral leadership, and works as shepherd and healer through the other sacraments. In a word, no priest, no Eucharist. No priest, no public proclamation of the word of God in a parish community. No priest, no pastoral governance.

The preciousness of this gift puts responsibility on all of us to promote among our young people listening hearts, hearts ready to hear the Lord and to respond generously if he should call them to priesthood. In this issue of the diocesan newspaper, we celebrate those men who have faithfully given their lives to the Lord and to the Lord’s flock as priests for 25 years, for 50 years, and beyond. May they serve the Lord faithfully for years to come.

The second realization which this report calls forth is the understanding of the selflessness to which we are all called. Certainly the difficulty that one might have — and even the anger which might well up in one — at the possibility of such a major change to one’s parish is an authentic response. This is a response rooted in great love and devotion toward the place and the community through which the Lord has nourished the life of faith.

It is rooted in authentic attachment to the place and the community in which one entered into the major events of the life of faith — baptism, first holy Communion, confirmation, marriage, the burial of loved ones. And yet, we are reminded that we are a pilgrim people, that this world is not our true home, and that the attachments that we have in this life, even though beautiful, must serve this reality.

Greater selflessness

Concerning our own parish then, we may be asked for a greater selflessness, to an openness of heart so that more people may be brought the holy Eucharist, that God’s word might be more effectively preached, and that more may be faithfully shepherded by the priests that we have. This is the motivation behind this report, and in this consideration, even though painful, it is the primary thing that should be kept before the eyes of all of us — bishop, priests and people.

COMMENTARY

A thank you and an apology

First of all, as a member of St. Matthew’s Cathedral Parish, I want to thank Bishop John M. D’Arcy for the magnificent example of Christian witness he has given during the Obama management debacle. As he nears the end of his time as our bishop, he has, like the bridegroom at Cana, apparently saved the best for last.

Second, as a faculty member at Notre Dame, I want to apologize to Bishop D’Arcy for the breathtakingly shameful manner in which he has been treated by the administrators of my university. They think the bishop is out of touch. But the fact is that they themselves have lost touch with the faithful Catholics in the pews, the ordinary people who put faith in Jesus Christ at the very center of their lives — the families with lots of kids, including handi-capped kids; the people who have spent years helping women with problem pregnancies, both before and after the birth of their children; the people who take care of one another in emergencies; the younger idealistic “J2P” Catholics — in short, the very people who have been quietly building an impressive culture of life in our country right under the noses of those who have led Our Lady’s university astray.

These people do not have to reassure everyone that, despite appearances to the contrary, they are “unambiguously pro-life.” They just are pro-life. And they instinctively recognize a great bishop when they see one.

Obama and Notre Dame

BY FATHER ROBERT BARRON

I consider myself something of a Notre Dame fan. I attended the University of Notre Dame my freshman year, just before entering the seminary. This was the year that the Fighting Irish lost a football team, under the coaching of Dan Devine and the quarterbacking of Joe Montana, won the national championship and the basketball team, led by Digger Phelps, made it to the final four.

In the fall and winter of 2002-03, I spent a wonderful sabbatical at Notre Dame. There, I took a course in the Doctrine of God to under-graduates and commencing research on a book project while residing at Mount Carmel Seminary.

But more than that, I believe in the ideals of the university, first articulated by Father Sorin and his companions and reiterated down through the last century and three quarters by the great heroes of the place.

And that is why I was particularly chagrined to learn that Notre Dame invited Barack Obama to be its commencement speaker and resolved to grant him an honorary degree in law. President Obama is, obviously, a man of many virtues and accomplishments, and a decent human being, but he holds to a public position — legal protection for the unborn. I join a swelling chorus of those who say someone who holds to the pro-choice position as fully and enthusiastically as the president does should not be given a platform at a university that claims a Catholic heritage and identity.

One great counter-argument to my position is based upon the notion of academic freedom and runs as follows. At any university worthy of the name, the free exchange of ideas must be tolerated as the condition for the possi-bility of coming to authentic knowl-edge. Therefore, even those intellectual positions that one finds unappealing or objectionable must, in the context of the university, be allowed expression in the public forum. Thus, if Notre Dame — or any other Catholic university — aspires to be taken seriously in the secular academic community, it cannot allow ecclesiastical orthodoxy to compromise its identity as a seat of higher learning. The first prob-lem with this argument is that it is hypocritical. Anyone even vaguely associated with the secular acade-my knows that it is governed by a fairly strict ideological orthodoxy and marked by a malleable form of censorship, both explicit and implicit. If you think I’m exagger-ating, try arranging for a speaker on a secular campus who advo-cates colonialism, apartheid, the subordination of women to men, or the denial of basic rights to gays. Mind you, I’m in these things as well, but I think it’s duplicitous to find one kind of orthodoxy perfectly acceptable and another inherently objectionable.

The second and more funda-mental problem is that it assumes that, at a Catholic university, the values of the secular academy ought to be taken seriously by the church. As Pope John Paul II argued, Catholic institutions of higher learning come out of the heart of the church and exist to serve the church’s mission. Therefore, the values that belong properly to the university-free inquiry, open conversation, the exchange of ideas should be fostered, but they must be situated within the framework provided by the beliefs and practices of the church. Francis Cardinal George is right when he says that the church’s teaching does not position the ideals of the university, the ideals of the university will position the church’s teaching. There is no third option.

My fear is that, by honoring Barack Obama, Notre Dame demonstrates that it is a university first and a Catholic second. And if that is the case, Notre Dame will go the route of myriad other formerly religiously affiliated universi-ties which are now irretrievably secular: Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Northwestern, Duke, the University of Chicago, to name just a handful of the most promi-nent. And that would be a terrible loss to the church.

Thinking about moral absolutes

When Pope Benedict XVI visited the United States in April of 2008, I had the chance to attend the opening ceremony at the White House South Lawn. As I listened to President Bush’s welcoming remarks to the pope, I was caught off guard by one line in particular, a powerful statement that seemed almost too philosophical to be spoken by a United States president: “In a world where some no longer believe that we can distinguish between right and wrong, we need your message to reject this dictatorship of relativism and embrace a culture of justice and truth.”

The president was expressing how we live in a time of history marked by moral relativism. This is the belief that there really is no right and wrong, just your opinion and mine about right and wrong, and we should simply “agree to disagree” and learn to get along. That is to say: you believe that abortion, same-sex marriage disagree” and learn to get along. That is to say: you believe that abortion, same-sex marriage are fine, and I may not, but there’s really no point in arguing, since everything is relative anyway – morality is up to me and you to decide individually. In such a view, there are no moral absolutes or universals, and morality shifts freely with each person’s perspective.

Ultimately, however, this position is neither reasonable nor logical. If morality were merely about your and my moral opinions, the results would be disastrous. If I believe racism against blacks and the institution of slavery built upon it are wrong, you believe they’re okay, can we both go our merry ways and live according to our own morality? Clearly not, and the United States had to undergo a terrible civil war to address this very question. If I believe serial murder and rape are wrong, but you believe they’re okay, can we both go off and live according to our own positions? Clearly not, since both positions cannot be true.

These obvious examples illustrate what each of us already knows, namely, that in the real world “relative” truth doesn’t work. Suppose you and I each drive towards an intersection with a traffic light. If it were up to you and me to make up our own minds about what color the light is, without any reference to its real color, there would certainly be a lot of accidents at our intersections. What many fail to realize is that the moral world works similarly. Many people’s moral lives are crashing and burning because they fail to respect the non-arbitrary markers of the moral roadmap.

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

Pentecost
Jn 15:26-27

This weekend the church celebrates the great feast of Pentecost. It corresponds with, and builds on, the Jewish feast celebrated the previous weekend. In Jerusalem for the feast of Shavuot, was one such appearance of the wind, an image the Old Testament Testament symbol of transmitting the Lord’s message to the chosen people. The Jewish feast celebrated the Jewish people into one nation, God’s Chosen People. It corresponds with, and builds on, the Jewish feast celebrated the previous weekend. In Jerusalem for the feast of Shavuot, was one such appearance of the wind, an image the Old Testament symbol of transmitting the Lord’s message to the Chosen People. The Jewish feast celebrated the Chosen People.

The Jewish feast celebrated the gathering together of the Hebrew people into one nation, God’s Chosen People. Acts again is the source of the first reading. It is a passage abundant in meaning. First, the believers are assembled together. They hear a noise similar to a strong wind, an image the Old Testament used on occasion to indicate the presence of God. Then, tongues of fire appear. Fire was another image found in the Old Testament to describe God’s presence. (The burning bush, seen by Moses on Sinai, was one such appearance of God in fire.)

All received the Holy Spirit. The apostles then went into the public. In Jerusalem for the feast of Pentecost, we are to expect the apostles speaking about God. First Corinthians provides the next reading.

The church is not simply an organization. It is the body of people whose faith bonds them with Christ and therefore with each other. They share the one life of Christ, given them in grace. They share the Holy Spirit. Theologists call this great company “The Mystical Body of Christ.” As a body, the believers represent Christ on earth. In this body of believers, they live with Christ, hearing the Word, receiving the grace of the sacraments. Their holy lives bear witness to the Lord, obedient unto the death of the cross, risen to everlasting life.

We are the bearers of divine love. Indeed, as awesome as it is, we bear the Lord into our world. In this body, Jesus still speaks, through those whom the Lord commissioned to teach us, namely the apostles. First Corinthians calls us to be open to the Spirit. And, it calls us all to remember that we individually, and in the community of the church, must continue the redemption of Christ, with its mercy, justice and peace.

The bearers of divine love

Thoughts on the Mystical Body of Christ:

1. The Lord breathed on the disciples to forgive sins.

2. The Roman soldiers had no cause for fear.

3. The Lord told them that they were high on incense.

4. They were intoxicated by coca leaves.

5. The church order盗用 to teach us, namely the apostles.

6. The gathered Jews did not expect the apostles to speak to them so easily because they were high on incense.

7. The Roman soldiers had no cause for fear.

8. They were intoxicated by coca leaves.

9. The church order to teach us, namely the apostles.

10. St. Peter explained this could not be true because they were high on incense.

11. Peter preached a powerful sermon; what was the result?

12. Peter had told his listeners to do this: a. Give 10 percent of their money to him. b. Repent and be baptized. c. Read the Bible.

13. How many took him up on that?

14. Pentecost was traditionally also known as a. Whit Sunday b. Second Easter c. Whit Sunday d. Holy Sunday

15. What phenomenon shows that this linguistic ability was not merely natural?

a. The apostles’ voices were high pitched like an angel’s.

b. Rather than just a series of languages, everyone heard their own.

c. The Romans had banned a number of these languages as subversive.

A day in the life of a sister

BY SISTER MARGIE LAVONIS, CSC

O n most weekdays I set my alarm for 6 a.m. — hard for me because I am not a morning person. Rarely do I get up at the first beep. After I come to some semblance of consciousness, the first thing I do is thank the Lord for a new day. Then I make my bed, get a cup of coffee, which is usually made by Sister Theresa who is one of the early birds in our local community, and then join the rest of our sisters for Morning Prayer at 7 a.m.

After our prayer together, each sister goes her separate way because the five of us each has a different job, or what we call, our ministry.

I usually leave the house a little later because I do my private prayer before I head to Saint Mary’s. I find that morning is the best time for me because I tend to get very busy and never know what the day will bring.

After I pray, I eat breakfast, get dressed and then I get on my way to work.

Currently I work in the communications department of the Sisters of the Holy Cross where I primarily do writing and editing for internal and external communications. I also freelance for Today’s Catholic and write a regular column that appears in this newspaper and other Catholic newspapers around the country.

Like many other religious groups of sisters, most of us don’t get away with doing just one ministry. My extracurricular ministries include serving as the local coordinator for our Holy Cross Associates, sitting on several boards and committees, such as Saint Joseph Regional Medical Center Foundation Board. I am also chaplain for the Saint Mary’s College softball team, am involved in the Cursillo movement and belong to the Church of Our Lady of Loretto choir.

Getting back to my day, during the week I worship at the 11 a.m. Mass at Our Lady of Loretto at Saint Mary’s.

After Mass I normally eat dinner with the community, take a long walk and then get back to work in the communications department. After work, unless I have another commitment, I go home for supper. We take turns grocery shopping and cooking. In a typical evening at home I watch a little television, especially sporting events, do jigsaw puzzles, read, surf the Internet, etc. Usually save the weekends for cleaning and doing other things around our house.

When I am in the mood, I write poetry.

In my earlier life I struggled with the decision that we no longer had to wear a habit. I worried that people would not recognize us as religious women. Well, all my worrying was in vain. Somehow people just seem to know. I would like to think that it is our actions, not what we wear, that speak of who we are — people whose mission in life is to spread God’s love and live the Gospel.

That all-too-fallible Vatican newspaper

William George Ward was a mid-19th century English Catholic convert from Anglicanism and a controversialist of the take-no-prisoners variety. Having been intellectually convinced of the truth-claims of the Catholic Church, Ward’s approach to church authority might be characterized as “in for a dime, in for a dollar” — or, in his case, “in for a tuppence, in for a pound.” Thus, in his most famous location, he wished to have “a papal Bull to read every morning from May 16th and at breakfast” — a one-liner frequently cited by pro- and anti-Catholicists alike as an epitome of the mindless authoritarianism we were all supposed to have gotten over, after Vatican II.

How odd, then, to find the Catholic left citing the Vatican newspaper, L’Osservatore Romano, as if its op-ed pieces were the 21st century version of William Ward’s daily papal decree.

Thus E.J. Dionne Jr., in a recent Washington Post op-ed, cited an April 29 essay in the L’Osservatore by an Italian journalist, Giuseppe Fiorentino, as decisive evidence that the “Vatican” (presumably including the pope) was nowt but a rabble-rousing fool upset with Notre Dame’s award of an honorary doctorate of laws to President Barack Obama as the American bishops to “chill out.”

Mr. Dionne, Ms. Sullivan, may I introduce Mr. Ward? The notion that everything appearing in L’Osservatore Romano is a) vetted by the Secretariat of State and b) reflects the settled views of “the Vatican” (presumably including the pope) is so transcendently silly that it is barely worth refuting. Yet refuted it must be. L’Osservatore Romano has a time-honored way of signaling when an editorial reflects the view of “high authority,” placing three dots, or periods, at the end of the editorial opinion section — which happens only on the rarest of occasions.

Otherwise, the only “authority” in question is the argumentation of an article’s author, Mr. Dionne and Ms. Sullivan may or may not know this — although Dionne, who once did some good work for the New York Times in Rome, certainly ought to.

However, you see there are no set rules that I follow. My sources are what you will. You see of the commandant, the more you provoke him (to provoke him). The more you provoke him, the more you will shoot me. Schindler at first worried that the commandant is really quite fond of her. But she insists, “No, someday he will shoot me.” She then speaks of what she had witnessed the previous day. She had seen him walk out of his quarters, draw his gun and shoot a Jewish woman who was walking by with a bundle in her hand. She described the woman: “Just a woman on her way somewhere. No father, or thinner, or slower, or faster than another else; and I couldn’t guess what she had done (to provoke him). The more you see of the commandant, the more you see there are no set rules that you can live by. You can’t say to yourself, ‘If I follow these rules, I will be safe.’” continued to signal in the weeks following that the editorial in no way reflected John Paul’s own views about Solidarity, Walesa, or the appropriate role for the church in a post-martial law Poland. L’Osservatore Romano, in other words, completely misrepresented the pope’s convictions — and in an editorial, not in some commissioned essay like Fiorentino’s.

That notorious editorial did, however, reflect the views of some papal diplomats in the Secretariat of State, who thought Solidarity was destabilizing and dangerous — a fact that completes the rough analogy to the Fiorentino article on the Holy See that the default positions of “the Vatican” (presumably including the pope) was telling the American bishops to “chill out.”

The camp correspondent decides to take a young, Jewish girl to be his personal maidservant. At one point in the film, this girl has a private and very disturbing conversation with another man, Oskar Schindler, the protagonist of the film. With deep fear in her voice she says to him, “I know that someday my master will shoot me.” Schindler at first can’t believe what he is hearing, and he does his best to reassure her that the commandant is really quite fond of her. But she insists, “No, someday he will shoot me.”

That’s absolutely correct: In a world of moral confusion, in a world of moral relativism, there can be no safety, and, consequently, no peace. She understood that in the “world” of that Nazi labor camp, right and wrong had been blurred to such an extent, that she couldn’t determine what was “right” even in the mind of the commandant. With the threat of anonet of the commandant might not please him in the next. And if he happened to have power, or have a gun in his hand when he wasn’t pleased, she knew she could easily end up being his next victim.

There are certain important truths and universal moral absolutes, which speak powerfully to us as humans about how we must relate to ourselves, to others and to society. We can draw strength from the prophetic and protective voice of the church, which speaks tirelessly to us of these moral absolutes and points out the threat to our humanity posed by every agenda of relativism.
FORT WAYNE — Despite soggy conditions, track and field competition for the Catholic Youth League (CYO) teams culminated on Saturday morning, May 16, at Bishop Luers with the running of the much-anticipated city meet.

For the boys’ squads, St. John, New Haven performed an impressive “three-peat” winning in 2007, 2008 and once again in 2009. The Raiders also dominated in 1999, 2000 and 2005 winning three other coveted crowns over the past decade.

Taking first in just two events, it was the second and third place spots that really added up and were most crucial for the Raiders. “Our work ethic made the difference today,” explained Coach Greg Lawrence, whose team scored points in every event but two.

“This group was hardworking, fiercely competitive and a lot of fun,” summarized Lawrence.

Blue ribbons came for the Raiders when Jake Britton won the high jump and was the lead off runner on the winning 4x100-meter relay team along with fellow eighth graders — Robbie Lake, Weston Painter and Jeff Heaton. St. Jude took the runner-up spot in the meet courtesy of winning performances from Gus Schrader, Luke Palmer, Conner Werling and Ben Toenges.

On the girls’ side, it was all St. Charles Borromeo — 58.84: 1) Rachel Gibson; 2) Tori Houk; 3) Leah Stetzel; 4) Ali Tippmann.

The Cardinals were paced by fellow Cardinal, Ann Davis, from 1984.

For the girls’ squads, five members of the Bishop Luers High School track-and-field team have committed to continue their education and track and field at USF starting in the fall of the 2009-10 school year. The Bishop Luers students are Austin Carteaux who plans to major in business; Nichole Wellman who plans to major in education; Amy Swygart who plans to major in nursing; Jennifer Byrd who plans to major in nursing; and Heather Thelen, who is undecided on a major.

of course both priests would like to raise some money for the community, but also have their own personal goals for these races. “Our goal is to finish ... and to survive,” said Father DeRiso. “Last year, we completed the marathon in five hours. If I could complete this year’s marathon in 4:30, I’ll be pleased. That’s my secondary goal.”

The priests have received a great amount of support from the community in the last few months. “I have been training for the 10-mile ride with several parishioners who are going to do the ride as well,” said Father Wills. “Since January, I have been doing indoor training on spinning bikes with Tim and Trish Mahler. Tim is a cycling guru who has helped me plan my training and encouraged me to do this ride. We’ve had to do a lot of planning for the longer training rides ... I have many pastoral responsibilities to juggle, but they have six kids. Clearly, they have me beat in terms of busy-ness.”

According to Father DeRiso, “The people of the parish have been great. They have been our inspiration from the beginning. They encourage us and cheer us on. In fact, it was a St. Joseph parishioner who first introduced us to the running group of which we have been a part for the last two years. I could not be where I am today, running-wise, were it not for the support and camaraderie of the people in my running group.”

Each of the priests have found many wonderful things about this event besides just raising money. “In the past several years that we have done this, I’ve always been particularly touched by how willing people are to support their priests. Or maybe they’re just willing to pay to see us in pain,” jokes Father Wills. “This fund-raiser is both a literal commitment to fund-raising for St. Joseph Church and School, but it’s also a symbol-ic act of being willing to ‘go the distance’ and lay down our lives for Christ’s church as we seek to do with our priesthood. Whether it is running or riding or trying to live the Christian life well, we rely on the help of God and are strengthened and supported by the church.”

“The best part has been the friends we have made in the run-ning and cycling communities, and the satisfaction of knowing that we have helped to raise money for not only the St. Joseph Church and School community (which is first and dearest to our hearts), but for other worthy organizations that do so much good in our community,” said Father DeRiso. “The hardest part has been running four days a week beginning at 5:30 a.m., and doing long Saturday morning runs beginning at 4:30 or 5 a.m., in order to be back in time to preside at the Saturday morning 8 a.m. Mass, fol-lowed by holy hour and confessions beginning at 8:30 a.m. This was especially challenging in the middle of winter, when you’re running out-side at that hour and the tempera-ture is five degrees. You quickly learn to dress appropriately.”

Father DeRiso hopes to send multiple messages to the parish families with this unique fund-raising project. “Not only are we hoping that our church and school families will make a pledge to help us raise money in support of the mission of our St. Joseph community, but we have found that this annual event also helps to build up the spirit of our community. Furthermore, we hope to model, in a subtle way, healthy living for the children of our church, including the impor-tance of regular exercise and a healthy diet. Finally, in giving 10 percent of the funds raised to the Christ Child Society, we are hop-ing to convey to people the impor-tance of supporting charitable agencies that serve the poor and needy in our community,” said Father DeRiso.

Anyone interested in making a contribution to this cause can make a donation on the parish Web site at www.stjosep.com. St. Joseph School is a ministry of St. Joseph Parish and is the oldest school, public or private, in South Bend. The school is K-8 school with an enrollment of approxi-mately 440 students. They are asking for pledges from people who are members of St. Joseph Parish, and also from families (Catholic and non-Catholic) who send their children to the school, but who are not parishioners of St. Joseph. “Ultimately, we do this out of love; love for the Lord and his church, and for the people and mission of St. Joseph Church and School. In the final analysis, that’s the only thing that gets me out of bed and hitting the pavement at 4:30 in the morning,” said Father DeRiso.

Of the five priests participating this year, Father DeRiso is the farthest away from South Bend. He has lived in Saint George, Utah, for the past 20 years and is now stationed at a church in Fort Wayne, Indiana. He is one of the few priests from the Diocese of Fort Wayne to participate this year. The other priests participating this year are Father Nathan Wills, Father John Scott, Father John Wills, and Father Nathan P. Scott. All of the priests are members of St. Joseph Parish, and have been particularly touched by the support and camaraderie of the people in their running group.

Holy Cross Father John DeRiso, with running shoes and seated, and Holy Cross Father Nathan Wills, with his bike in the back, pose with students of St. Joseph School in South Bend, the oldest school in the city. The St. Joseph Parish priests will participate in the “On The Go for St. Joe! Run and Ride, 2009” to raise funds for the school and the Christ Child Society.
