Msgr. J. William Lester dies at 90

BY KAY COZAD AND TIM JOHNSON

FORT WAYNE — Always eager to serve the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend in any appointment, Msgr. J. William Lester’s ministry garnered him respect from bishops, priests and the faithful. In a sense, a chapter of diocesan history is closed with the passing of this honored vicar of retired priests, co-vicar general and co-chancellor of the diocese, rector, pastor, associate pastor, superintendent, principal and parish administrator throughout the diocese.

Bishop John M. D’Arcy, retired bishop of the diocese remembers his friend and fellow priest Msgr. Lester as being intelligent and generous hearted. “He was always positive. ... Joyful. ... He was the best we had,” says Bishop D’Arcy.

As one of the first priests he met following his appointment as eighth bishop of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend more than 24 years ago Bishop D’Arcy says Msgr. Lester was “a priest with a lot of love.” And he adds, “His clock was always set at high noon.”

No matter the assignment, says Bishop D’Arcy, the energetic and eager Msgr. Lester was always willing to take it on and do his best. From filling in as interim superintendent of Catholic Schools to the clergy abuse situation, to the White Sox was evidenced as he traveled to Chicago to attend a game or two each year. The monsignor was beloved by his fellow priests and laity alike and of course his devotion to the White Sox was evidenced as he traveled to Chicago to attend a game or two each year.

One personal memory that touched the bishop was when Msgr. Lester traveled to Boston to stand by him after his mother died and subsequently following his sister’s death as well. “Those moments are important,” says Bishop D’Arcy.

The monsignor was especially fond of Bishop Luers and would be seen cheering at any number of sporting events.

Msgr. Lester had a sister who was a member of the Holy Cross congregation in South Bend to whom he was devoted. He made the drive to South Bend to visit her up until a couple of months ago, reports Bishop D’Arcy.

One personal memory that touched the bishop was when Msgr. Lester traveled to Boston to stand by him after his mother died and subsequently following his sister’s death as well. “Those moments are important,” says Bishop D’Arcy.

Of the life of service the beloved monsignor led, Bishop D’Arcy concludes, “He was a priest for all seasons.”

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHOADES

Lent

We have begun our Lenten journey. On Ash Wednesday, I was happy to see the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception filled with people, a sign of the vitality of the faith of this local Church. I am sure that churches throughout our diocese were filled as people attended Mass and received the blessed ashes on their foreheads, a sign not only of our mortality, but a sign that also points to the resurrection of the body. I pray that all of us, through our practice of prayer and penance during these 40 days, will arrive at Easter with our hearts purified and renewed by God’s grace.

Msgr. J. William Lester

This past Saturday morning, one of the great and much beloved priests of our diocese, Msgr. J. William Lester, was called home to the house of our Father. That evening, while speaking with one of our priests, he called Msgr. Lester “a giant” in our diocese. Monsignor’s many accomplishments are well-known. I have only had the privilege of getting to know Msgr. Lester in the course of a few weeks, but I feel blessed to have met such a holy, humble and joyful priest. What struck me most about Msgr. was his joy in the priesthood, his joy in serving the Lord and His people. Of course, joy is one of the fruits of the Holy Spirit and a sign that Msgr. Lester lived his life according to the Spirit. We will certainly miss him. Please join me in praying this prayer for this wonderful servant of God:

O God, listen favorably to our prayers offered on behalf of your servant, and grant that Msgr. J. William Lester, who committed himself zealously to the service of your name, may rejoice forever in the company of your saints. We ask this through Christ our Lord. Amen.

Mass at St. Mary’s Church, Fort Wayne

As many of you know, I live in the former rectory of St. Mary’s Parish in Fort Wayne. This past Sunday, the first Sunday of Lent, I celebrated Holy Mass at Saint Mary’s Church. It was wonderful to meet so many good people and to learn about the wonderful works of mercy that go on at St. Mary’s, including the famous soup kitchen. I thank Father Philip Widmann, the pastor of St. Mary’s, and all the parishioners for their warm welcome. I joked with the parishioners about my being their “tenant.” I live next door to the parish’s Ave Maria House, which provides a place for the poor to visit during the day for various needs. St. Mary’s is a beacon of hope for many needy people in that area of Fort Wayne.

Rite of Election and Call to Continuing Conversion

On the first Sunday of Lent, after the Mass at St. Mary’s, I was back to our beautiful Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception for the Rite of Election of Catechumens and of the Call to Continuing Conversion of Candidates who are preparing for Reception into the Full Communion of the Catholic Church this Easter. It is exciting to see so many people, touched by God’s grace, who will soon receive the sacraments of initiation and join us at the table of the Lord. Allow me to share with you one paragraph from my homily at that beautiful ceremony:

My advice to you today is very simple: “Love Christ and love His Church.” When St. Andrew encountered Christ, the first thing he did was seek out his brother, Simon Peter, to tell him ‘We have found Christ.’ My brothers and sisters, you have found Christ! Finding Christ, following Him, and living in His love is the goal not only of the RCIA, it is the goal and quest of our life’s journey. It gives us a joy that is ever ancient and ever new, a joy nothing else in this world can give us. Loving Christ also means loving His Bride, the Church. To do so, we must always see the Church with the eyes of Jesus who “loved the Church”. St. Paul tells us, “and gave Himself up for her.” I look forward to celebrating this same liturgy next Sunday in St. Matthew Cathedral, South Bend, where there will be another large group of catechumens and candidates making this step towards initiation or full communion in the Catholic Church.

Welcome back, Bishop D’Arcy

I was so happy to see Bishop D’Arcy again after his well-deserved few weeks back home in Boston. As I get to know the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, I marvel at the many accomplishments of my esteemed and beloved predecessor. I am very glad that Bishop D’Arcy continues to be very active in priestly and episcopal ministry, a great help to me and a real blessing to all the faithful of our diocese.

Lent

I’d like to end this column as I began, with the theme of Lent. The Lord is calling us to penance and spiritual renewal. Let us hear and heed that call! I encourage all to participate in the various Lenten observances in your parishes. Attending Mass on weekdays, praying the Stations of the Cross, participating in Operation Rice Bowl, attending a Day of Recollection, etc., are all ways to enter more deeply into the spirit of Lent. And, of course, we together do our communal penance of abstinence from meat on Lenten Fridays. May the grace of this special season be with you all!

Blessed Brother André to become first saint of ND’s founding order

NOTRE DAME — Blessed Brother André Bessette will be canonized, or formally declared a saint, in a ceremony to be held Oct. 17.

Blessed Brother André was a brother of the Congregation of Holy Cross, the religious order which founded the University of Notre Dame, and the founder of St. Joseph’s Oratory of Mount Royal in Montreal.

Known popularly as the “miracle man of Montreal,” Holy Cross Brother André Bessette, an unassuming porter who became legendary for his ministrations to the sick and needy of Montreal, was formally recognized Feb. 19 by the Vatican as one of six candidates who will be canonized a saint later this year. Pope Benedict XVI announced the decision to canonize Brother André following a meeting of cardinals in Vatican City.

Born Alfred Bessette on Aug. 9, 1845, in Saint-Gregoire d’Iberville, Quebec, Brother André was one of 12 children. By the time he was 12 years old, his father, a lumberman, had been killed in a work accident and his mother had died of tuberculosis. Physically diminutive, chronically ill, uneducated and clumsy with his hands, the young Bessette nevertheless worked as a farmhand, shoemaker, baker and blacksmith in Quebec for six years before leaving for New England, where he spent four years working in textile factories and farms in Connecticut, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

From his earliest childhood, he was quietly but conspicuously prayerful, an inclination which seemed only to intensify during his hardscrabble years as an itinerant laborer, and when he returned to Canada in 1867, he confessed an interest in formal laborer, and when he returned to Canada in 1867, he confessed an interest in formal learning in religious life to his local parish priest, who sent him to a nearby community of Holy Cross brothers with a letter assuring its superior that “I am sending you a saint.”

The largely illiterate 25-year-old novice was put to work as a porter, or doorman, at Montreal’s College of Notre Dame, an assignment in which he continued for the next 40 years.

In addition to welcoming visitors, he served as janitor, laundron and Rhode Island.

“We are honored and moved beyond words at Brother André’s formal recognition as a saint,” said Holy Cross Father David Tyson, provincial superior of the Indiana Province of Holy Cross. “Not only because this immensely humble man is the congregation’s first recognized saint, but because in and of himself is such an extraordinary example for every Catholic of every age. Not for him the trappings of power and status, of money and prestige; he was famous first as a ferociously hard worker at the high school where he worked his whole life; he simply did everything and anything that war was needed, from cleaning the floors to fixing shoes, from doing students’ laundry to cutting hair. “What an example of prayer in action, of active service to others as the most eloquent and powerful prayer of all.”

Holy Cross Father Hugh Cleary, superior general of the Congregation of Holy Cross, added, “What a grace for our religious family, to count among its ranks such a model of the Christian life offered to the world, a true inspiration for a welcoming, compassionate presence. Such good news!”

Catechumens, candidates fill cathedral to capacity

BY BONNIE ELBERSON

FORT WAYNE — The Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne was filled to capacity on the first Sunday of Lent with catechumens, candidates, their spouses, families and friends. The event was the Rite of Election and Call of Candidates to Continuing Conversion, an important step in the catechumen’s and candidates’ journey on the path to full communion with the Catholic Church.

Catechumens are those unbaptized persons who are preparing to receive the sacraments of initiation — Baptism, Confirmation and Eucharist — at the Easter Vigil. Candidates are those persons who were baptized in another faith tradition and are preparing to receive Confirmation and/or Eucharist at the Easter Vigil.

Celebrant for the liturgy was the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend’s newly-installed Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades.

Bishop Rhoades greeted the assembly warmly. “It’s wonderful to be with you this afternoon,” he said, and noted it was his first opportunity to celebrate the Rite of Election in his new diocese. He will celebrate another such liturgy at St. Matthew Cathedral in South Bend on the second Sunday in Lent.

The bishop began with a brief explanation of the term “election” when used in the context of the catechumens’ faith journey. Most people are familiar with the political overtones of the word, he said, but in this case “election” means that God chooses his people to believe in Him and to live with Him in love. Today’s catechumens will be “elect” of God, that is, they will become God’s people consecrated to give Him honor and glory, the bishop pointed out.

Just as importantly, the candidates in continuing conversion will also be received into the full sacramental life of the Catholic Church. Both catechumens and candidates are on a journey of faith, he said, attracted to the truth of the Gospel of Christ.

Bishop Rhoades put the day’s events in a broader perspective for his listeners. Just as it is appropriate for them to continue their path to full communion with the Church at the Easter Vigil, Bishop Rhoades and his predecessor, Bishop John F. Joseph — who was named a bishop in 1974 — gave the liturgy their blessing.

A highlight of the ceremony was the formal introduction of catechumens and candidates to Bishop Rhoades by their parish representatives as each person stepped forward with his sponsor for a handshake and personal greeting from the bishop.

He assured them, “The person of Our Lord Jesus Christ has called you ... He will be with you,” and promised to keep them in his prayers as they continue on their path to full communion with the Church at the Easter Vigil.

In closing, Bishop Rhoades said, “It gives me great joy to be with you here in prayer.” He told them, “You have found Christ. Following him and living in his love is the goal of our life’s journey.” He left them with this advice, “Love Christ and love His Church.”

Conference explores dignity of women

BY ANN CAREY

NOTRE DAME — The dignity and vocation of women and men were once again the focus of the fifth annual Edith Stein Project conference at the University of Notre Dame Feb. 12-13. The student-run conference has grown in scope and attendance since its inception in 2006, with 271 people registered for the 2010 conference. The approximately 30 speakers included students, recent graduates and scholars of national reputation.

Edith Stein was an early 20th century philosopher who championed the dignity of women. She converted to Catholicism and entered the Carmelite order, but was killed by the Nazis in 1942 because of her Jewish heritage. Edith Stein was canonized in 1998 and is known as St. Teresa Benedicta of the Cross. Organizers of the Edith Stein Project wrote in conference materials that they adopted her as their patron saint because of her “inspiration as a model of turning one’s heart to God and as a woman who worked to live out her vocation through the genuine feminine spirit of self-gift.”

The conference initially focused on women, but in recent years, an effort has been made to include men because conference organizers recognized that men and women must cooperate if both are to fully realize their dignity in society. The conference theme of “No Man is an Island: Creature, Culture and Community,” provided a wide variety of topics, including the family, community, Christian economics, sexuality and vocation.

In a session on motherhood, Lisa Everett, co-director of the Office of Family Life for the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, spoke on married and virginal motherhood. She said that the female need for motherhood is like a mother rising at night to pray before the Blessed Sacrament and giving herself entirely over to prayer.

Sister Benedicta, a novice in the Sisters of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration in Mishawaka, is a Notre Dame graduate and was one of the coordinators of the Edith Stein Project in 2007 and 2008 when she was a student. Sister Benedicta, a novice in the Sisters of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration in Mishawaka, is a Notre Dame graduate and was one of the coordinators of the Edith Stein Project in 2007 and 2008 when she was a student.

Sisters give up the right to children of their own, Sister Benedicta said, but they are given “God’s family,” and virginity allows them to remain more free to bear fruit for that family.

Sister Benedicta said that motherhood is conferred on the sisters in her order through their charism of perpetual adoration. Taking a turn in the middle of the night to rise and pray for the needs of people before the Blessed Sacrament is like a mother rising at night to care for her children, she said.

“Mothering people spiritually means you take them into your heart and care for them spiritually,” she explained, noting that the Blessed Mother is the model for generous spiritual motherhood.

Sister Benedicta said that the older sisters in her order teach the younger sisters what it means to be spiritual mothers. She offered the example of Sister Arilda Kampa, who recently died at the age of 103. Sister Arilda had been a spiritual mother to countless students and friends who treasured that gift, she said. Spiritual motherhood gives value to little things, she continued, and in turn the sisters receive love back, which fulfills the female need for motherhood.

Speaking on married and virginal motherhood at the Edith Stein conference were Lisa Everett, far right, and Sister M. Benedicita, OSF, second from right. Elizabeth Kirk, far left, chaired the session, and Sister Margaret Mary Mitchel, OSF, second from left, assisted with Sister Benedicta’s PowerPoint presentation.

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The latest Vatican statistics show a slight increase in Catholics as a percentage of the world’s population, and a slow but steady rise in the number of priests and seminarians worldwide. The statistics, for the period beginning with the end of 2008, were presented along with the new Vatican yearbook Feb. 20. The Vatican said the number of Catholics reached 1.166 billion, an increase of 4.4 percent, or 1.7 percent, from the end of 2007. During the same period, Catholics as a percentage of the global population grew from 17.33 percent to 17.4 percent, it said. The number of priests stood at 409,166, an increase of 1,142 from the end of 2007. Since the year 2000, the Vatican said, the number of priests has increased by nearly 4,000, or about 1 percent. Looking at the distribution of priests around the world, it said: 47.1 percent were in Europe, 30 percent in the Americas, 13.2 percent in Asia, 8.7 percent in Africa and 1.2 percent in Oceania. The number of seminarians around the world rose from 115,919 at the end of 2007 to 117,024 at the end of 2008, an increase of more than 1 percent, it said. The increase in seminarians varied geographically: Africa showed an increase of 3.6 percent, Asia an increase of 4.4 percent, and Oceania an increase of 6.5 percent, while Europe had a decrease of 4.3 percent and the Americas remained about the same.

New bishop says prayers, vitality of local church will help him lead

OWENSBORO, Ky. (CNS) — Bishop William F. Medley, ordained as the fourth bishop of the Owensboro Diocese Feb. 10, seemed to slip easily into his new role as bishop and shepherd of Catholics in western Kentucky. After completing the ordination rite during the ceremony at the Owensboro Sportscenter arena, Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, the principal ordaining bishop, led Bishop Medley to the cathedral. As he took his seat, the congregation of more than 5,000 people gave him a standing ovation. When the new bishop spoke to the crowd, he joked that they had almost missed his opportunity to speak. “They almost didn’t let me talk!” he said, explaining that he was instructed to keep his remarks brief. Bishop Medley’s opening remarks were sprinkled with humor as well as humility and gratitude. “I speak what every person on earth should say every day — to God be the glory,” he said. “I’m strengthened in confidence with all these holy people praying for me. The size and enthusiasm of this gathering tells of the vitality of the Church of western Kentucky.”

MOMENTUM BUILD CANCEL INTERNATIONAL DEBT OWED BY HAITI

WASHINGTON (CNS) — It took a major earthquake, but momentum is building to cancel all of the remaining debt that Haiti has taken on from several international financial institutions. The years-long effort by organizations such as the Jubilee USA Network and the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops to convince the institutions to relieve Haiti of its debt got a boost Feb. 5 when Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner announced that the U.S. would work with its worldwide partners to see that the impoverished Caribbean nation’s indebtedness was forgiven. Geithner’s announcement followed an earlier statement from Dominique Strauss-Kahn, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, who said Jan. 20 that the IMF would discuss with donors ways to “delete all the Haitian debt.” The actions are significant because Haiti must focus all of its financial resources toward recovery and rebuilding large segments of the country that were destroyed during the Jan. 12 earthquake, said Melinda St. Louis, associate director of the Jubilee USA Network, a coalition of more than 75 religious denominations and faith communities, human rights, environmental and labor organizations focusing on the biblical concept of debt forgiveness. Geithner’s announcement “is a very positive step,” St. Louis told Catholic News Service. “Having their support is critical. We do have that high-level political commitment and we do consider that a victory.”

Lent is for spiritual training, pope says before beginning retreat

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Before beginning his annual Lenten retreat, Pope Benedict XVI encouraged Catholics around the world to pray, fast and perform penance in the weeks leading up to Easter. The entire period of Lent should be like “a desert” during which people can return inside themselves and listen to the voice of God, in order to overcome the temptations of the Evil One,” the pope said in his noon blessing Feb. 21. He described Lent as a time of spiritual training, undertaken not with an attitude of pride, but in an effort to live more closely with Jesus in prayerful reflection and penitential practices. The importance of spiritual fortification in order to resist temptation was illustrated by the Gospel account of Christ’s own temptations by Satan in the desert, the pope said. “Christ came into the world to free us from sin and from the ambiguous fascination of designing our lives without God. He did so not with high-sounding proclamations, but by fighting personally against the tempter, right up to the cross,” he said. “This example is valid for everyone. Lent is a time of spiritual training, beginning with oneself, by changing one’s life for the better.”

During Olympics, woman spearheads campaign to help homeless

 VANCOUVER, British Columbia (CNS) — When most people think of Vancouver, they think of this city, they imagine athletes and spectators from around the world. But that’s not what sprang to mind for Carolyn Wharton of Star of the Sea Parish in White Rock, nearly 30 miles outside Vancouver. Instead, Wharton immediately thought of all the homeless people making their way to Vancouver for what they see as an opportunity to roam a greener pasture. Wharton noted that the homeless population of every Olympic Games host city increases by 300-400 during the games. Wharton is the coordinator of her parish’s volunteer group, the Helpers of St. Anne. Every year they hand-make 25-30 convertible coats for homeless men and women — the thick and heavy garments convert to sleeping bags. Wharton decided to increase this year’s quota. She had to get the coats commercially made because the work load of 3.6 percent in Asia; 8.7 percent in Africa and 1.2 percent in Oceania. The number of seminarians around the world rose from 115,919 at the end of 2007 to 117,024 at the end of 2008, an increase of more than 1 percent, it said. The increase in seminarians varied geographically: Africa showed an increase of 3.6 percent, Asia an increase of 4.4 percent, and Oceania an increase of 6.5 percent, while Europe had a decrease of 4.3 percent and the Americas remained about the same.

New bishop says prayers, vitality of local church will help him lead

OWENSBORO, Ky. (CNS) — Bishop William F. Medley, ordained as the fourth bishop of the Owensboro Diocese Feb. 10, seemed to slip easily into his new role as bishop and shepherd of Catholics in western Kentucky. After completing the ordination rite during the ceremony at the Owensboro Sportscenter arena, Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, the principal ordaining bishop, led Bishop Medley to the cathedral. As he took his seat, the congregation of more than 5,000 people gave him a standing ovation. When the new bishop spoke to the crowd, he joked that they had almost missed his opportunity to speak. “They almost didn’t let me talk!” he said, explaining that he was instructed to keep his remarks brief. Bishop Medley’s opening remarks were sprinkled with humor as well as humility and gratitude. “I speak what every person on earth should say every day — to God be the glory,” he said. “I’m strengthened in confidence with all these holy people praying for me. The size and enthusiasm of this gathering tells of the vitality of the Church of western Kentucky.”

Catholic agency ends foster, adoption services in District of Columbia

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of Washington closed its 80-year-old foster care and public adoption program in the District of Columbia so the agency would not have to violate Catholic teaching by licensing same-sex couples as foster or adoptive parents. The program — which covered 43 children and their biological families, 35 foster families and seven staff members — was transferred to the National Center for Children and Families Feb. 1. Under a new law allowing same-sex marriage in the District of Columbia, Catholic Charities would have been required to place children with same-sex couples as foster or adoptive parents. Scholarship tax credit gets tangled in education funding debate

INDIANAPOLIS — With dwindling state revenues, funding cuts hit school corporations hard causing some to do what Department of Education officials told them to do “only as a last resort” — lay off teachers. Lawmakers headed into the 2010 legislative session hoping to give school corporations the ability to dip into other education funding sources like capital projects money, currently prohibited by law to use for salaries, to prevent additional teacher layoffs.

The House and Senate each offered proposals to restore some of the $300 million education funding cuts.

House Bill 1367, authored by Rep. Greg Porter, D-Indianapolis, covered numerous education matters including an eight-day delay in the scholarship tax credit, but did allow school corporations to use their capital projects funding to make up the shortfall provided teachers received no pay raise. However it excluded the automatic incremental pay raise teachers have in their contracts. The incremental raise has been one of the major sticking points in the negotiations.

Senate Bill 309, authored by Sen. Ron Alting, R-Lafayette, allows school corporations to transfer funds from their school corporation budgets, but stipulated a pay freeze for teachers including the incremental raise. The Senate version also placed stricter limits on the amounts of funding shifts and prohibits funding transfer from the debt service fund.

When House Bill 1367 moved to the Senate, the Republicans removed all the contents of the bill including the scholarship tax delay and added their version of the education funding solution, the contents of Senate Bill 309 and Senate Bill 258 requiring reading proficiency standards.

In the House, two members of the House Education Committee, Rep. David Cheatham, D-North Vernon, and Rep. Robert Behning, R-Indianapolis, hammered out a bipartisan amendment to attach to Senate Bill 309, which was now in the House Education Committee. The compromise amendment prevented teacher layoffs and instituted a one-year incremental raise.

When House Education Committee chairman, Rep. Greg Porter, D-Indianapolis, author of House Bill 1367 realized Senate Republicans stripped his bill in the Senate, he offered a surprise amendment to reinsert the content of his bill, House Bill 1367 into Senate Bill 309 during the Feb. 17 committee hearing. The Democrats who hold a slim majority on the committee, voted in support of Rep. Porter’s amendment and it passed.

Glenn Tebbe, Indiana Catholic Conference executive director, “What was so upsetting and surprising about this was the House Republicans and House Democrats had worked out a compromise. When the language to House Bill 1367, including the scholarship tax credit delay, came back into the bill, it really threw a wrench into the whole education funding debate.

“The scholarship tax credit, which saves the state money and will offer hundreds of children better educational opportunities, unfortunately, has become a political football in the education funding debate,” said Tebbe.

Behning said, “The single most important thing in the classroom for the success of Hoosier children is a highly qualified, dedicated teacher. Our goal is to keep these teachers on the job and that’s what my compromise amendment did.

In 2009, Indiana teachers earned on average nearly $50,000. As part of their contract, teachers automatically get on average a 2.6 percent salary increase and may receive salary raises on top of the incremental raise. Democrats support a “pay freeze” as long as it doesn’t include the incremental pay increase. Republicans want a total pay freeze.

According to Behning, the one-year incremental teacher pay freeze would save the state $60 to $90 million. The state could also save approximately $30 to $70 million annually if school corporations would accept the state health plan rather than their own private health insurance.

“Indiana is facing one of the worst economic times since the Depression. State employees have been under a pay freeze for three years and they get no incremental raise either,” said Behning. “Teachers are quasi-state employees. What we are asking is reasonable — a pay freeze for 2010-2011 school year so that teachers can stay on the job, and we prevent further teacher layoffs.

Shortly after, Rep. Porter’s amendment passed the House Education Committee, his amendment was challenged by House Republicans. Rep. Porter’s failure to give proper notification on his amendment violated the House Majority rules. As a result, House Speaker Rep. Patrick Bauer, D-South Bend, ordered another hearing on Senate Bill 309 which is scheduled for Feb. 22.

In an unusual development, Chairman Porter deleted several sections of HB 1367 including the delay of scholarship tax credit. The amended SB 309 now includes some aspects of the funding flexibility that was agreed to last Wednesday, Feb. 17. The revised bill, SB 309, passed committee in a bi-partisan vote of 9-3.

“The educational goals of the Republicans and Democrats will have to be ironed-out in conference committee,” said Tebbe.

The Indiana General Assembly must adjourn by March 14, but is expected to extend the first week of March.
Will new tax laws affect your estate plan?

For the first year in decades, American tax law has repealed the federal estate tax for 2010. As of Jan. 1, federal estate taxes are repealed for any deaths that occur during this calendar year, regardless of the size of that individual’s estate (state estate/inheritance taxes may still apply). Although the law was originally passed in 2001, almost no one believed that Congress would actually allow the estate tax to end in 2010, even for just one year.

In December 2009, the House voted to indefinitely extend the federal estate tax with a top rate of 45 percent and a $3.5 million exemption amount per individual. (The exemption is the amount that can pass free of federal estate tax.) However, when the Senate failed to act, the estate tax was repealed for 2010. This might sound like good news, but it could be a major problem for the surviving spouse and cost the beneficiaries significant tax dollars.

Funding the Bypass Trust in 2010

Many individuals create estate plans that establish trusts upon the first spouse’s death in order to achieve a number of important goals. Typically, these trusts are termed “Bypass Trust” and “Marital Trust.” The “decedent’s” assets are used to fund a bypass trust for the family and a marital trust for the surviving spouse. Through “formula language,” which estate planning attorneys draft in wills and revocable trust documents, a bypass trust is funded with the maximum amount that can pass free of federal estate tax, and a marital trust is funded with the balance.

For example, if in 2009, suppose “husband” passed away owning assets valued at $5 million. Upon his death, his estate documents establish a bypass trust for his children and a marital trust for his wife through formula language. Since the exemption amount was $3.5 million, the bypass trust would have been funded with $3.5 million in assets and the marital trust with the balance of $1.5 million.

Let us assume this same example for 2010. Since there is no federal estate tax in 2010 and thus, no exemption amount, the bypass trust would be funded with $5 million and the marital trust with $0.

Because of the nature of the formula language used in these types of estate plans, and now with an unlimited amount exempt from estate taxes in 2010, the amount a surviving spouse inherits could easily be $0.

Another tax for beneficiaries in 2010

Under this new tax law, the “step-up in basis” is eliminated. Prior to 2010, when a “beneficiary” received property from a “decedent,” the “beneficiary’s” basis in that property was the value of the property on the date of the “decedent’s” death. Thus, if “decedent” owned ABC stock valued at $100,000 on the date of death and the stock transferred to a “beneficiary” through inheritance, the “beneficiary’s” basis in that stock was $100,000. If “beneficiary” sold that stock for $100,000, then “beneficiary” would pay no capital gains tax.

Under current law, if “beneficiary” inherited the same stock from “decedent” and “decedent” bought it 20 years ago for $30,000, “beneficiary’s” basis would be the carryover basis of $30,000. If “beneficiary” sold the stock for $100,000, then “beneficiary” would have a capital gain of $70,000 and would have to pay capital gains tax!

A small reprieve exists in that the executor of the estate can increase the “beneficiary’s” basis by up to $1.3 million and another $3 million for assets left to the surviving spouse.

What will happen after 2010?

In 2011, the federal estate tax is scheduled to reappear with tax rates up to 55 percent and the exemption amount at $1 million per individual. The carryover basis will go away, and the “step-up in basis” will resume.

Congress still may decide to change the tax laws before 2011 and reinstate federal estate taxes yet this year. However, if that were to happen, the exemption amount and top tax rate are unknown. In addition, Congress may also decide to reinstate the “step-up in basis” for beneficiaries before the end of 2010. This may or may not happen, leaving Americans in a state of tax limbo.

What are your next steps?

Review your will or revocable living trust with your estate planning attorney as soon as possible to determine if any of your estate plans need to be changed to reflect the temporary repeal of the federal estate tax.

God seeking the sinner

BY MSGR. BRUCE PIECHOCKI AND ELIZABETH FAGERBERG

Opening/Closing Song: Father, We Thank Thee, Who Hast Planted (Gather Comprehensive No. 568); Hosea (No. 386)

Opening Prayer:

Prayer for Priests Gracious and loving God, we thank You for the gift of our priests. Through them, we experience Your presence in the sacraments. Help our priests to be strong in their vocation. Set their souls on fire with love for Your people. Grant them the wisdom, understanding, and strength they need to follow in the footsteps of Jesus.

Prayer for Ordinarians Inspire them with the vision of Your Kingdom. Give them the words they need to spread the Gospel. Allow them to experience joy in their ministry. Help them to become instruments of Your divine grace.

We ask You through Jesus Christ, who lives and reigns as our Eternal Priest. Amen.

Excerpt from Pope Benedict XVI’s Letter to Priests

The saintly Cure of Ars reflected something of the same idea when he said: “It is not the sinner who returns to God to beg his forgiveness, but God himself who runs after the sinner and makes him return to Him. This good Saviour is so filled with love that he seeks us everywhere.”

Commentary from Msgr. Bruce Piechocki, Pastor, Our Lady of Good Hope, Fort Wayne

I live out the words of Pope Benedict both as a minister of Reconciliation and as one who sins. As a minister of Reconciliation, I am humbled by the way in which God uses my clumsy words and efforts to draw people to seek forgiveness. Whether it be in conversation or preaching, it seems so often that words I regard as insignificant are the very words people claim led them to seek God’s forgiveness and healing. During celebrations of the sacrament of Penance, there have been many times I have heard myself sharing words that I would never have thought to say in a million years. I know that it is God at work, not me!

As a fellow sinner, it is often the words or examples of persons much closer to God than I who open my heart to my own need for forgiveness. The Lord Jesus is not content to let me go my own way. He uses others to get my attention, sometimes even using their faith and lives to give me a spiritual kick in the backside when I am too blind or stubborn to realize that my own need for forgiveness and my complete dependence on God.

Sharing Faith

Reconciliation as personal encounter

When we celebrate the sacrament of Reconciliation, it is not only our sins that we need to remember but the love of Christ as well. To simply remember our sins and feel bad about our human failures is really only the beginning. We are to grow in awareness that our Father is calling us to a relationship of love with Him. He has so much more in mind for us!

Pope John Paul II highlighted the sacrament of Reconciliation as a personal encounter of conversion and healing. He insisted on “a rediscovery of Christ as mysterium pietatis, the one in whom God shows us his compassionate heart and reconciles us fully with himself. It is this face of Christ that must be rediscovered through the Sacrament of Penance.” — Nova Millenium Ineunte, n. 37.

Christ shows us His face so that we can live like Him, and the only way we can live like Him is if He is in us. Becoming holy is a personal encounter of conversion and healing. He insisted on “a rediscovery of Christ as mysterium pietatis, the one in whom God shows us his compassionate heart and reconciles us fully with himself. It is this face of Christ that must be rediscovered through the Sacrament of Penance.” — Nova Millenium Ineunte, n. 37.

Christ shows us His face so that we can live like Him, and the only way we can live like Him is if He is in us. Becoming holy is a participation in God’s own life, and it begins with our baptism. If we come to believe that Christ is alive in us, then the sacrament of Reconciliation is not just a matter of spending some time with God to “clean the slate,” but it is actually deepening our union with Him. Truth be told, God is giving us His holiness, so we need to give Him our time in prayer and in regular celebration of the sacrament of Reconciliation. We must learn to let go of our own mind and our own way of life so that we can take on the mind of Christ. Then we will welcome the opportunities offered in the sacrament of Penance to let Him habit us, instruct us, correct us and console us.

Reflection questions

Our Father is more anxious to forgive than we are to ask. Why do we find it hard to take Him at His word? What hinders us from celebrating the sacrament of Reconciliation?

Do we use the daily opportunities that surround us to practice forgiveness? Do we notice when we are being forgiven by others?

Closing Prayer:

Lord, our God, help us to walk with You on the pathway of the beatitudes and to live out Your mission in today’s world. Bind us to all men and women so that together we may bring the Good News to the ends of the earth. Open our hearts and our communities to the needy, the afflicted and the oppressed. May we radiate the Living Christ and transform our lives in the hope of the Resurrection. This prayer we make to You, our living God, now and forever. Amen.

Spiritual pilgrimage with the Stations of the Cross

BY KAY COZAD

L ast week Today’s Catholic began this year’s Lenten journey by offering the history of the popular devotion of the Stations of the Cross and meditating on the first two stations. This week stations three and four are investigated.

The opening prayer to each station is:

“We adore you, O Christ, and we praise You, because by Your divine grace, You have redeemed the world.”

After reading a meditation explaining each step of Christ’s passion the following traditional prayers are recited:

“Our Father, Hail Mary and the Glory Be

The third station: Jesus falls for the first time

Though Jesus is divine, He is also man. As He carried our sins and failings, He fell beneath the heaviness of the cross to show us that He knows failure as we do. He fell so that we might rise again to holiness. Consider a time when you fell — into failure or away from faith. How did you respond? Pray for divine strength today to rise again.

Prayer: Jesus, by Your cross You have redeemed the world. Show me, Lord, by Your sacrifice that I might rely on Your grace to rise again each time I fall. I place my trust in You. Amen.

The fourth station: Jesus meets His mother

Jesus glanced into the crowd and saw His grief-stricken mother standing helpless in her beloved Son’s suffering. Her heart was broken at the injustices of His injuries and rejection. Nonetheless Mary walked with Jesus unto his death on the cross, so that we might be healed of our sins. Pray to the Blessed Mother that she might continue to intercede on behalf of all mankind for our salvation.

Prayer: Blessed Mother, you watched as they scourged and tormented your Divine Son and walked with Him to His death. Your love for Him is everlasting. You are my model for true discipleship. Even as you grieve, intercede for me that my faith in Your son will bring me salvation. Amen.

Crayons donated to Haiti

Preschool through second-grade students at Most Precious Blood School in Fort Wayne are doing their part to help with the Haiti Relief efforts by melting down broken crayons to make fun shaped swirl crayons which they sold during their lunch periods. All proceeds go to Haiti. Pictured are some kindergarten students selling their crayons to fellow classmates during a lunch period.
GRANGER — Aerial photographer Dick McCloskey sees things from a different angle than most of the general population as he flies in an aircraft in the skies of Indiana and Michigan. In the past few years McCloskey has also viewed his faith from a different angle, with a perspective from the teachings of the Secular Franciscan Order.

The St. Pius X parishioner is a cradle Catholic who was, by his own admission, a “very luke-warm Catholic for many years.” In October of 2005 McCloskey and his wife Anne went on a pilgrimage to Italy with other St. Pius X parishioners. While in Assisi, McCloskey had some time of his own and went to the crypt where St. Francis is buried.

“I had a profound feeling of a presence that I still can’t explain. The presence was telling me — not in words, but in my innermost feelings — that it was time to take my faith seriously. When we came home I made an appointment with Father Bill Schooler to go to Confession. My last Confession was in 1963, 42 years previously,” McCloskey explains.

A relative on Anne’s side of the family is a Secular Franciscan. McCloskey told this relative of the experience he had at St. Francis crypt and she invited him to the Secular Franciscan meeting at the convent in Mishawaka. During that meeting he felt the same presence he had experienced at Assisi. “I just knew that St. Francis was leading me back to Christ and the Church,” he recalls.

McClouskey entered the formation process in April 2006 and made his profession in the Secular Franciscan Order (SFO) on July 13, 2008. He was recently elected formation director of the Immaculate Conception Fraternity. His responsibilities include guiding the formation of aspiring members and the ongoing formation of the professed members of the fraternity.

The qualities of simplicity, a spirit of poverty, love of the poor, and devotion to Jesus through His Blessed Mother found in the order fit McCloskey’s persona, he emphasizes. “Franciscans are intensely spiritual in a laid back, joyful way. We support each other spiritually in our individual ministries. We are all about looking for Christ in other people and in each other. Franciscans are people of service. We find Christ in others by serving them,” he says.

Among McCloskey’s paid vocations is his 36 year career as a real estate appraiser. In 1998 he learned to fly small airplanes and now holds a private pilot certificate with instrument and sea plane ratings. This eventually led him to put aerial photography to support his flying hobby. I started AeroVision Aerial Photography in 2002 as a result of this thought process.”

As an aerial photographer McCloskey sells his photos to various markets, including real estate brokers and developers, construction companies, government agencies and various individuals. At first he would fly and shoot pictures by himself. “I quickly found that it is very difficult, but not impossible, to get good photos while flying the airplane. I now have a pilot, Wes Kautzman, who flies while I shoot. However, I get to do the landing since that is the only thing better than flying,” he beams.

The two locate the area to be photographed using GPS unless they are familiar with the location. McCloskey uses a high definition digital camera that is hand-held with the assistance of a stabilizing gyroscope and then takes pictures through the open window of the airplane.

One of the most challenging parts of taking the pictures through the open window is the outside temperature. “Have you ever stuck your hands and face out of the window when the outside air temperature is 20 degrees and you are traveling at 120 MPH?” he laughs.

Faith also impacts his aerial photography business. “It allows me to take off from terra firma in a small airplane knowing that God will take good care of us. I have been able to use my photography to support good causes. We took a complete series of photos of the construction of St. Pius X Education Center from ground breaking to the dedication service. I have also given many samples of my photography for silent auctions to raise money, such as the Center for the Homeless, St. Monica’s Home and School Association and Habitat for Humanity.”

McCloskey stresses that God is always at the center of his vocations and his desire to be of service to others. “Every time I take off I say a prayer of thanksgiving for the gift of flight. Once I took a friend of mine flying who had never been off the ground in an airplane. She was very frightened but as we left the ground the first thing she said was ‘Oh, look at my Master’s creation! I now thank Him for His gift of creation every time my wheels leave the runway.’”

Dick McCloskey demonstrates how he takes aerial photography through the window of high-wing Cessna 172 aircraft.
Thursday nights at Henry’s mean family

BY MARK WEBER

FORT WAYNE — Given her patrician bearing and quiet dignity, one would not suspect that this genteel great-grandmother of 88 years would hit the same Main Street bar in Fort Wayne every Thursday night.

Meet Irene Freistroffer, long-time Cathedral parishioner and daily communicant, swimmer, chauffeur, hospital hostess, retired career woman and matriarch of a family of eight, all living, all over achievers, and all residing in Fort Wayne... and, oh yes, she hits Henry’s bar on Main every Thursday because her son John, owns the place and the rest of the family knows she will be there in case they care to drop in to share a little family news.

Irene Gaborsek moved from Chicago to Fort Wayne as a teenager, when her father took a job here as assistant brew master of Centlivre Brewing. Irene and her brothers and sisters were all baptized Catholics but were not raised in the faith, because their parents, both Catholics, fell away over a misunderstanding which remains unexplained.

Regardless, Irene, following graduation from North Side High School, took it upon herself to seek out a priest for instructions and has been active in the church ever since.

Irene’s had a part-time job in a Kroger store in high school. After graduation, she worked for an attorney and then as secretary to the president of Fort Wayne National Bank. She was a diocesan employee for a year, as a clerk in the tribunal office, and worked for the city of Fort Wayne for 25 years as office manager for the street department, retiring from this position at age 75.

Irene Freistroffer has an all star family of eight, unique in the fact that all of her sons and daughters are still in Fort Wayne.

Mary (Keefee) is the principal of Bishop Luers High School and has had that position for 16 years and before that taught religion there for three years.

Henry Freistroffer is president and CEO of Craftline Graphics and co-owner of Columbia Street West, a bar/restaurant on The Landing in Fort Wayne.

Tom Freistroffer, a Notre Dame football star in the Parseghian era is owner of Freistroffer Appraisal and Real Estate.

Daughter Fry (Schindler) R.N., is vice president and co-owner of Bandido’s Mexican Restaurants in Fort Wayne, Portland and Lima, Ohio.

Laura (Sweigert) is office manager for Freistroffer Appraisal and Real Estate.

Donna (Brook) is Fort Wayne District Council president for the St. Vincent de Paul Society, and treasurer for the St. John’s/St. Patrick Conference of St. Vincent de Paul and waitress manager for Henry’s bar and restaurant in Fort Wayne.

John Freistroffer is owner of Henry’s bar and co-owner of Columbia Street West.

Joe Freistroffer is manager of Three Rivers Barricade. Putting first things first, Irene Freistroffer had all eight of her children before she learned to drive an automobile. She was taught to drive by her sister-in-law, and has been behind the wheel ever since and drives daily to the cathedral for morning Mass. Irene travels by air, too, and has visited Rome, Japan, Medjugorie and Ireland, but considering the warp and woof of the Freistroffer family fabric, her favorite time and place is undoubtedly Thursday nights at Henry’s.

Planned gift represents longtime friendship with priests

BY ELISA SMITH

FORT WAYNE — When James C. Metzler decided to make a gift of his home to the Catholic Community Foundation of Northeast Indiana, he chose to honor his close, longtime friendships with priests.

Metzler’s home was originally owned by his parents. His father was a Catholic but his mother was not. She converted to the Catholic faith in the early 1960s, and Metzler too converted when he was 19 years old. He spent one year in the seminary at St. Joseph College in Rensselaer.

“My family has always befriended priests,” stated Metzler. “Spending a year in the seminary, I felt close to the priests also.”

Now retired from ASI (American Silcones, Inc.), Metzler is very active at his parish. He serves as a Eucharistic minister at the cathedral, head of the lector program, member of the finance council and sacristan.

Metzler feels that making a planned gift to the Church represents a final step in living a life of stewardship. “I don’t have family to leave it (the home) to,” said Metzler. “And Mom and Dad had it going to the Church.”

“The priests struggle financially,” he mentioned, “so if I can help them out, I like doing that. Besides, the guys are, in some ways, a lot like me!”

Bill Siri: 50 years as a Vincentian with the St. Vincent de Paul Society

BY KAREN CLIFFORD

SOUTH BEND — Bill Siri and the St. Vincent de Paul Society (SVDP) go back over 50 years. According to Queen of Peace SVDP Conference president Chip Healy, Siri exemplifies the concept of “giving back” to the community.

“As treasurer of SVDP, Bill would call around for someone to deliver the goods to the family but since we were still light in numbers Bill would assign himself to find a partner and fill grocery needs to those looking for help if no one else was available. He also drove members of our parish who were unable to drive themselves to doctor appointments. In every kind of weather, and any type of personality, Bill would smile and ask what more he could do for a client,” says Healy.

Siri began volunteering with SVDP at St. Jude Parish, South Bend, in the 1960s with the intent of “doing something besides my regular job.” During his years with SVDP he has delivered food pantry items and food vouchers from area grocery stores to needy families in the local area. Siri recalls that he and other SVDP volunteers helped to build a wheelchair ramp for a person to whom he delivered food and grocery store vouchers. And sometimes, his mere presence in someone’s home would bring cheer to a household.

“I remember delivering to a couple where the husband was a paraplegic and incapable of speech. The wife really appreciated the volunteers coming to visit so that she felt a part of the community,” Siri recalls.

Healy emphasizes that Siri also accepts leadership roles readily for the Queen of Peace SVDP conference. “In time, as our group began to grow, I realized that in order to create an exciting and motivational atmosphere for members I would need help in directing particular groups in projects that define our ministry. Bill agreed to relinquish his role as treasurer to become my vice president. Aside from his nearly 50 years of Vincentian service in several other parishes over the years, he silently commanded the respect and admiration of our members by his kind and gentle manner and his willingness to share his knowledge from experience. These attributes make him absolutely irreplaceable as vice president.”

Siri has several health issues that make movement extremely difficult and uncomfortable for him Healy notes. “Bill survived a car crash when he was younger that left him with a broken neck and several other injuries that have made movement extremely uncomfortable for him. Yet he refuses to slow down, much less out to talk to our children about the value of service as a Vincentian. He is a wonderful role model for all parishioners young and old at Queen of Peace.”

In appreciation of his contributions to SVDP, Queen of Peace established the Bill Siri Vincentian Service Award. According to Healy the award was created “so that people realize there are those who walk in their midst’s that live a near perfect Catholic lifestyle and cannot properly function if they are not putting the will of God first in their lives. This is an exclusive award that may only be awarded a time or two in a generation. Its purpose is to go out and find a worthy recipient. Its objective is to recognize people who have worked and dedicated their entire lives to the service of God through his people.”

In September of 2009, the Queen of Peace Conference of Young Vincentians was established. Affectionately known as “the Mini Vinnies,” the group collected food and made Christmas baskets last year, and made wooden crosses for nursing home residents. They are currently making care baskets for the people of Haiti. Laurie Haverty, Queen of Peace leader of the Young Vincentians, expresses Siri’s influence on the youth group. “Bill is truly an inspiration to our youth at Queen of Peace. The school children see him frequently as Bill comes to the pantry to prepare food for delivery to homes. He also has taken time out to talk to our children about the value of service as a Vincentian. He is a wonderful role model for all parishioners young and old at Queen of Peace.”

Saying goodbye, thank you to Msgr. Lester

The passing of an icon such as Msgr. J. William Lester leaves us grieving and celebrating the life of a model priest whose commitment to serving the Church was done with enthusiasm, joy and eagerness.

During this Year for Priests, how appropriate that we celebrate the life of Msgr. Lester. His passing just after the installation of Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades has linked Msgr. Lester with five of the nine bishops, which also includes Bishop John F. Noll, who ordained Msgr. Lester to the priesthood 65 years ago; Bishop Leo A. Pursley, Bishop William McManus; and our bishop emeritus, Bishop John M. D'Arcy.

Msgr. Lester was often colloquially called an “Energizer Bunny.” In more recent years, as his health occasionally posed obstacles, Monsignor’s zest for life and his high energy found him bouncing back quickly on the road to recovery and still willing to serve wherever and however.

Education was the heart of Msgr. Lester’s ministry. His father, who was not a Catholic, was an educator who once operated a commercial school in Bluffton, the home of monsignor’s mother, Ida. James Lester was later employed by the state in the public schools sector, and the family lived in Gary where Monsignor Lester was born and grew at Holy Angels Parish and attended school there under the watchful and devout Catholic eye of his mother. Msgr. Lester has a sister who is a religious, Holy Cross Sister Jeanette Lester.

After two years at Bishop Noll High School, the seminary called. Archdiocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, which encompassed all of northern Indiana in Msgr. Lester’s youth and early priesthood, would be graced with his presence and administrative skills.

Beginning with Huntington Catholic High School in 1947, principalships seemed to fit Msgr. Lester well. In 1951, he became principal at Central Catholic. Students there have fond and engaging stories about their fine principal. He remembered the students, who they married, their maiden and married names, years after graduation.

In 1957, he went from principal to superintendent. One of the things he studied was the baptismal records and sacramental records at parishes in Fort Wayne. He presented the study’s findings to Bishop Noll, who was residing on Bishop’s Island in Sylvan Lake, during the summer. The bishop told Msgr. Lester, “Well, it looks like we’re going to have to build some schools,” Bishop Luers High School, Bishop Dwenger High School in Fort Wayne and Marian High School in Mishawaka can trace their origins to Msgr. Lester’s study. At Bishop Luers, Msgr. Lester even coordinated the services of the Franciscan order to staff the school.

Msgr. Lester allowed himself as a “father” figure to 23 Cuban boys who came to Fort Wayne as part of Operation Peter Pan in the early 1960s. They lived at the St. Vincent Villa in Fort Wayne, where Msgr. Lester resided while superintendent.

In a 2009 interview, Msgr. Lester chuckled, “I became close friends with the boys through counseling, summer trips and stopping fights when needed.” Many have gone on to business and educational skills.

It’s up to the Irish to heal scandal

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — For Vatican and Irish participants, the two-day meeting on the handling of priestly sex abuse cases was a major accomplishment, combining a frank admission of mismanagement with truly collaborative discussions on how to avoid such mistakes in the future.

But for much of the wider public, especially in Ireland, the meeting Feb. 15-16 fell short of expectations and was remarkable for what it didn’t do: no bishops were fired, no abuse victims were heard and Pope Benedict XVI made no plans to visit Ireland and build bridges to alienated Catholics.

“The papal whitewash” and “The Irish bishops have already fired, no abuse victims were heard” were two not-untypical headlines in Irish newspapers.

The encounter highlighted the dilemma facing the pope and other Vatican officials as they try to defuse the pastoral crisis in Ireland. By convening the bishops, the pope clearly signaled his deep interest and concern over the scandal. But because the meeting was not designed to produce “marching orders” or even policy decisions, it was bound to leave some disappointed.

Managing expectations on a topic this explosive is never easy. In this case, the anticipated agenda of the meeting was inflated by media reports that spoke of a shake-up of the church hierarchy in Ireland or a grand papal gesture. Even the word “summit,” used by the press but not by the Vatican, suggested there would be high-level conclusions.

Instead, the results were much more about information-sharing than decision-making. There were several reasons for that:

• Irish bishops have already implemented many-lauded guidelines and policies to protect children from abuse, including full cooperation with civil authorities. As one Vatican official put it: “They already have a very good system in place. Now they have to follow it.”

Jesus is our hope

2nd Sunday in Lent
Lk 9:28b-36

The Book of Genesis is the source of the first reading. The central figure is Abraham, who is highly important to understanding the Hebrew sense of self-identity, and to the unfolding of salvation itself. Jews regard Abraham to have been the father of their people. It is not that he just was an ancestor in human biological terms. He solidified within the Hebrew concept of nationhood the notion of faith in God and loyalty to God. Indeed, Abraham is regarded as the great exemplar of faith.

Obliquely referring to Abraham’s faith, and to the course of salvation, Pope Pius XI said that Christians essentially are Semites, descendents of Abraham in a spiritual sense. He is a special figure in the religious traditions of Muslims. Scholars believe that Abraham was an actual person. He is not the figment of imagination, nor a figure constructed in some literary effort. He actually lived.

In this reading, God communi- cates with Abraham. Some say God is in Abraham’s world, but God is above and beyond Abraham’s world. Therefore, Abraham does not relate to God as if God were an equal.

God has command over nature and the living beings of nature. God can order Abraham to capture animals and then to sacrifice them. Since the animals that Abraham captured were sacred, as they were intended for sacrifice to praise God, Abraham protected them from being taken by birds of prey. It is not as if birds of prey were inherently evil, although Jewish tradition later would proscribe cut- ing the flesh of any bird of prey, or any other predator. Rather, they simply were victims of their own instincts and unaware of the most important of all realities, that God is and that God lives.

Abraham himself is vulnerable. Darkness overcomes him. The sun sets. He is terrified. Without God, he is at risk, powerless before the elements, helpless before whatever might come.

The second reading is from the Epistle to the Philippians. Philippi was one of those cities, Greek by background, its name honoring the father of Alexander the Great, in which a Christian community had formed.

Paul wrote to these early Christians to direct and encourage them by deepening their knowledge of Jesus. He insists that human beings are imperfect, even without their willful sinning. Human bodies are “lowly,” he declares. Christ elevates and restores humans. In Jesus, by the grace of God, human beings can die if they earnestly follow the Lord.

St. Luke’s Gospel provides the last reading. It is Luke’s story of the Transfiguration, a story found also in Mark and Matthew.

Brilliant and powerful, the story tells that the Apostles Peter, James, and John were with Jesus at a very important moment. In this case, were with Jesus. They certainly saw the humanity of Jesus. Yet in this situation, they saw the divinity of Jesus. The Lord showed them this divinity. On their own, they were unable to see it. Strong sym- bols from Hebrew tradition convey the reality of this divine identity. God spoke from a cloud. Glimmering light surrounded Jesus. Finally, Jesus was the tradition of salvation. On either side of Jesus were the prophets Moses and Elijah.

Reflection

As we progress in Lent, the Church offers us several important lessons. First, as humans, we are limited. Second, in our human limitation we are short sighted. Third, we all shall die. Finally, we are promised life, in Jesus, the Son of God. Jesus is our only hope. He is our only access to true and eternal life.

Jesus does not trap us into union with God. We must turn to God. Abraham is our model. Jesus is the key. This process of facing facts, of conversion, and of turning totally to Christ is the purpose of Lent.

I n late 2009, the Holy See and the Russian Federation agreed to full diplomatic relations at the ambassadorial level, bringing the total of such exchanges to 178 — a remarkable achievement, considering that, in 1978, the Holy See had full diplomatic relations with only 84 states. Less than 100 years after the Entente powers banned the Holy See from the post-World War I peace conference by a secret clause in the Treaty of London that brought Italy into the war on the side of Great Britain and France, the Holy See — the juridical embodiment of the ministry of the Bishop of Rome as universal pastor of the Catholic Church — is fully engaged in the complex world-off-trades of international diplomacy.

Those complexities just keep growing, made more complex, thanks to some distinctive features of contemporary Russian history and one long-standing feature of Russian culture. The latter is the close relationship between the Russian Orthodox patriarchate of Moscow and the Kremlin, which has endured through czars, commissars and now presidents and prime ministers; the former involves the strange post-Cold War situation in Russia.

To say that Russia has never come to grips with the legacy of 74 years of communism is to underline the problem. Lenin’s — the ghostly relic of one of the 20th century’s greatest mass murderers — remains on display for the veneration of the obverse and the confused in Red Square. Parades celebrating the birthday of Stalin, whose homicidal record topped Lenin’s, are not uncommon. Documentary filmmakers who dare to tell the truth about communism’s depredations are burned in effigy. History is often rewritten in order to cloud, even deny, the horrors of the GULAG system (which, as Anne Applebaum demonstrated in her Pulitzer Prize-winning book, was not an accidental feature of Stalinism but an essential component of Stalinist “economics”). Vladimir Putin, the true center of power in Russia despite having been compelled to trade the presidency for the office of prime minister, has made it clear that he is not satisfied with a Russia shrunk to the country’s size at the time of Peter the Great. Yet neither Putin nor his successor as president, Dmitry Medvedev, seems much interested in dealing with Russia’s colossal demographic and public health problems, which include a rapidly shrinkage native population (thanks to catastrophically low birth rates and declining life expectancy), both exacerbated by environmental degradation and rampant alcoholism. Meanwhile, Russia’s “market” economy resembles a Mafia operation rather than the “free economy” of which John Paul II wrote in Centesimus Annus.

To underline this point, Putin’s efforts to reconstitute the old Soviet “near abroad” as a de facto or de iure parts of a Greater Russia are clear: the Caucasus, central Asia, and Ukraine. Ukraine is the strategic key to all the rest; without Ukraine, Russia cannot be a superpower. One of the chief repositories of Ukrainian national consciousness is the Ukrainian Greek Catholic Church, Byzantine in its liturgical life and polity but in full communion with Rome. Declared illegal under communism (in a brutal 1946 maneuver aided and abetted by the Russian Orthodox Church), the Greek Catholic Church of Ukraine was the world’s largest underground religious minority for four and a half decades. Its flourishing after communism, and its dedication to building a Ukraine that models the free and virtuous society proposed by Catholic social doctrine, is one of the most heartening stories unfolding in the former Soviet Union.

Vatican diplomats and ecumenists have had their difficulties with the Ukrainian Greek Catholic Church — in part because of Ukrainian passions and intricacies, but also because of a tendency to bend over backwards. To say that Russia has never come to grips with the legacy of 74 years of communism is to underline the problem of the Vatican and the Russians zation of the church in Ireland.” But the resignation of bishops has always been considered a personal decision involving the individual bishop and the pope, and would never be done by a committee — or even by “summit.”

• Likewise, the suggestion by some Irish media that abuse victims should have been brought down to Rome for the encounter was never seriously considered at the Vatican. Church leaders said it would have seemed like a publicity stunt. They pointed out that when Pope Benedict met with abuse victims in the United States and Australia, it was arranged quietly and without fanfare. If something similar happens in Ireland some day, they said, it will also happen away from the media glare.

One outcome of the Vatican-Irish meeting was perhaps too subtle to measure on the media applause meter, but significant nonetheless. By all accounts, there’s been a shift in attitude inside the Roman Curia since 2002. At that time, the sex abuse crisis in the United States still found many Vatican officials in denial or very defensive; today, according to the Irish bishops, virtually all of the 10 Vatican department heads in attendance offered genuine support and help.

The Vatican now knows that priestly sex abuse is not a passing episode limited to one or two countries. As if that needed demonstrating, a new clerical sex abuse scandal was emerging in Germany even as the Vatican meeting took place — and the Vatican newspaper wrote about it. Cardinal Sean Brady of Armagh, Northern Ireland, said the Vatican seemed to understand that this is “not an Anglophone problem.”

Compare that to the famous remark made by Cardinal Dario Castrillon Hoyos at a Vatican press conference in 2002. After noting that many of the journalists’ questions were posed in English, he said that fact alone “already says something about the problem and gives it an outline.”

Cardinal Castrillon, a Colombian who was head of the Congregation for Clergy at the time, worried that accused priests weren’t getting a fair hearing, suggested that priests were being unfairly singled out as a category of professionals when it comes to sex abuse and implied that money was a factor in the cases coming to light.

His replacement at the clergy congregation, Brazilian Cardinal Claudio Hummes, has taken a much different approach. While defending the majority of priests as honest and admirable pastors, Cardinal Hummes recently said instances of priestly sexual abuse were “extremely serious and criminal facts” that need to be brought to the attention of the civil justice system and not just to Church authorities.

What happened to St. Dorothy?

Why are certain saints no longer on the calendar? My first name is Dorothy and I am so hurt she is no longer on the saints’ calendar. My maiden name is Blais and I always enjoyed so much my double feast days (sort of) in February. I know there is still St. Blaise, but what happened to St. Dorothy? Maybe there are other saints who have “disappeared” too. D.H.

It is completely within the discretion of the Holy Father to determine which saints and blessed are to be on the Universal Liturgical Calendar. The criterion that he would use to determine this, I would assume, is whether those saints and blessed have importance for the entire Church. Some saints and blessed were taken off the calendar, I presume, because it was determined that, while a particular saint or blessed is most important for a certain segment of the Church, the saint or blessed was not well known or did not impact the life of the entire Church.

Saints and blessed can be included on a regional basis in the liturgical cycle. For example, Blessed Andre Basset is included in the liturgical calendar for the United States, but he does not appear on the universal calendar. My guess would be that St. Dorothy does appear on a regional liturgical calendar some place in the world where she is known or has had an impact.

St. Joseph Mishawaka claims tournament championship
BY JOE KOZINSKI

MISHAWAKA — Sunday would feature two compelling stories of adversaries trying to navigate their way to a highly coveted prize — the Inter-City Catholic League post-season tournament championship.

St. Joseph (Mishawaka) was undefeated, winners of the St. Martin DePorres Division and defending ICCL tournament champions and St. Pius, second place in the division and runner-up in the classic last season.

St. Pius would return the nucleus of talented players that competed in the finals last year and seemed to be peaking right at tournament time.

St. Pius also possessed a seventh-grade point guard, Greenan Sullivan, who had been simply stellar the entire run to the championship game.

The tournament draw would pit the Lions of St. Pius against the best the league had to offer. As Coach Shawn Sullivan calmly enthused post game, “For all the weekend scores, the girls basketball section at ICCL was very much a team effort,” he explained.

Greenan Sullivan had scored 22 in a 4-point come-from-behind victory over the Crusaders, a 13-point showcase in an over time thriller where he hit a big three and converted free throws in a 2-point win over the Kings, and another 14 points in a come-from-behind two-point conquest over the Eagles.

The Wildcats’ course was not as rocky, they handled an over matched St. Thomas team by 19 and then just held on to squeeze a point victory over a very talented St. Anthony ball club.

The game lived up to the billing as the two heavy weights traded shots — St. Joe with a trapping press and active zone defense and St. Pius with the dribble penetration of Sullivan and the finishing abilities of their two big men — Denton Gillis and Eric Mossey.

“The game came close and with two minutes and 30 seconds to play, the fans knew that there was a lot of basketball to be played. The questions is be asked was could Sullivan and his mates find some more magic or would the battle-tested Wildcats hold on. The answer would be what all coaches preach to their players — ‘Free throws win games.’ The Wildcats responded to the heavy pressure by going 9-13 from the line, six for seven from Michael Rice in the fourth quarter to seal the fate of both teams and bring the championship plaque into the arms of St. Joseph (Mishawaka) by a final, 40-32.

“The key word in describing us is ‘team,’” commented St. Joe Coach Steve Ravotto. “Playing together with total effort and determination is what we stress everyday at practice.”

“The last two games we had six players that were within one point of each other scoring and that is the effort we needed to compete with St. Pius,” remarked Ravotto. “Greenan has a lot of talent and he makes the players around him better, at half time our focus was placed directly on him and our kids worked hard to contain him.”

“It surprised us a little this season. We started of early struggling and didn’t know what type of a team we were,” stated Ravotto. “A light switch went on and we just kept getting better.”

The Colors Division also crowned a tournament champion with Christ the King (White) defeating St. Monica (Purple) after erasing an early 10-point deficit by the score of 37 to 28. St. Monica’s Will Whitten netted 21 and the Kings Alex Mahry had 16 in the victory.

FORT WAYNE — An exciting tournament is guaranteed when the top three “large school” teams finish with identical league records. St. Vincent, St. Charles and St. Joseph/St. Elizabeth each ended with four wins and one loss in the Gold League regular season to share medal honors. The top-seeded team, St. Joseph/St. Elizabeth, was determined by the most points scored. Therefore, the other two were in the opposite bracket and forced to meet on Friday night, Feb. 19, in the semifinals of the girls’ Catholic Youth League (CYO) 74th annual tournament.

As promised, the showdown between St. Vincent and St. Charles was everything it has been for the past four years ending with St. Charles advancing to the championship game by defeating the Panthers, 44-37.

“We had not beaten St. Vincent for two years,” explained a thrilled Coach Kurt Patterson from St. Charles. The natural rivalry has heated up since the girls were in high school when the Panthers took the CYO title. The Cardinals won the tournament as sixth graders and the Panthers again as seventh graders. But this year, it was the Cardinals’ turn.

First, however, they had to get by the talented ladies from St. Joseph/St. Elizabeth, and Patterson knew that would be no easy task.

“We were physically tired and mentally drained from the big win the night before,” admitted Patterson. On two occasions, the Cardinals had beat the Panthers this season, once before Christmas in the regular season match up, 27-24, and once after the new year in a “no-count” contest, 22-20.

“We maintained focus and did just enough to win. St. Joe/St. Elizabeth is a great effort team,” Patterson added.

The Panthers jumped out to a 6-4 lead in the first quarter with Addie Riembold paving the way. But the Cardinals fought back in the second, led by Abby Sordelet’s trey and clutch plays from Jordan Schneider to put St. Charles up, 13-11, at the half. The lead changed hands again and again with both teams scoring 5 points in the third quarter as the two crowds battled to out-cheer each other.

The Panthers continued their valiant effort in the final quarter trying to claw their way past the Cardinals. With 23 seconds on the clock, point-guard Jessica Golden never flinched as she swished two free throws to bring her team within in a bucket, 20-22. Back to the line with 7.6 seconds, Golden made another from the charity stripe, but it was not meant to be for the Panthers.

The Cardinals won the 2010 championship, 22-21. Sordelet and Schneider teamed up for 13 of St. Charles’ points, while the Panthers’ Riembold led all scorers with 12.

Panthers’ Coach Don Golden was very pleased with his team’s run this season.

“We were very well-rounded with outstanding post play, good ball handling and outside shooting and we were solid off the bench. It was very much a team effort,” he summarized.

Although his girls lost to St. Vincent by two points in the championship show down of the University of Saint Francis holiday tournament, they beat Memorial Park along the way.

“Beating Memorial Park was huge. It gave us a big boost to what was a very successful season,” said Golden. “This is a very tight-knit group who like each other very much. It will be so tough next year when all they separate to different high schools,” explained Golden.

Diocesan high schools make a splash this swimming season

BY MICHELLE CASTLEMAN

Wether in the pool or on the deck, members of the four diocesan Catholic high school swim teams represented their teams well in the IHSAA sport of swimming this season. Unlike many of the teams they compete against, these schools do not have pools on their premises making it a challenge for these athletes to practice their craft. Finding time six days a week, some teams twice a day, at Notre Dame, Crossroads Children Home or a neighboring high school, usually meant early mornings and long days.

But as Coach Jeff Siples of the Bishop Luers Knights explained, “As a rule, swimmers are very focused.” And the dedication and determination of these young participants paid off this season. The Lady Knights recently finished with their best times in nearly every event at their sectionals advancing two swimmers, sophomore Erin Hipskind and Nikki Keller and one diver, Maria Beck, to the state competition.

“I was very proud of the way our kids represented Bishop Luers both in the pool and on the deck,” concluded Siples.

“Another common saying among swim teams,” Siples added, “Plan your swim, swim your plan.” Swimming is a very psychological sport. A swimmer’s total time is all about his plan. Siples loved coaching one particular swimmer in the distant race, the 500, which is all about strategy. Siples coaches the race as 10 individual races, down and back.

“It was terribly exciting to see her work hard and plan to drop each split then achieve her individual goal,” Siples said.

Like most teams, Siples has many team members who do not swim year-round. He admits, “None of our swimmers may earn a Olympic medal.” But he continues to coach for the joy of seeing the sense of accomplishment in his swimmers.

A swimming competition, a meet consists of 12 events. At Saint Joseph’s in South Bend, Tony Kowalski boys’ team advanced in eight of these races at the Indiana state sectional meet and finished third place as a team.

“We had an outstanding sectional meet. Everything went perfectly. Although we do not have a lot of depth, we will be taking a good group to the state meet,” explained Kowalski. Indianapolis’ IUPUI natatorium will be the site of the upcoming state level competition. Swimmers advancing include two freshman, Trevor Carroll and Luke Fifer, who won two individual events each. Junior Tony Carroll won the backstroke and junior Tom Polega won the butterfly. The relay teams advancing are made up of the Carroll brothers, Fifer and senior captain Tom Brandt. Captains Brandt and Kyle Pope lead their team in prayer before each meet. The girls’ team from Saint Joseph’s also had a very successful season and are around 22 members deep. It is reported that their coach Bonnie Schrem listed a relay team and swimmers in the 200 and 500 events at the state competition.

Jim Niebalski is at the helm of the Marian High School group in Mishawaka. His Knights included 22 females and 17 males. According to Niebalski, the girls’ sport has only been around for the past 10 years and the boys have been competing for the past six. Although they struggled some during the regular season finishing with a 2-10 record, junior David Schafer set two school records at the sectional preliminaries and freshman

The Bishop Dwenger team was 33 members strong and coached by Susan Meyers this season. Both the boys and girls Saints finished runner up in the Fort Wayne Summit Athletic Conference (SAC) meet and regular season with a 12-1 record. The ladies also finished fourth in the state sectional meet while the guys tied for fourth.

Named to the all-SAC team for the Saints were: distance swimmer, Molly Coffee (200 free, 500 free); sprinter Marissa McDonald (50 free, 100 back); Jeffrey Feder Spielberg (200 free, 500 free); Stephen Weust (50 free, 100 free); Ethan Welch (200 Individual Medley, 100 Back) and Justin Frain (200 IM, 100 fly).

Eric Bohne felt he would be successful as an assistant coach if he could convince at least one or two of his Saints to make swimming their life-long passion.

“You can be in the water at any age,” he explained.

Bohne also stressed faith first, family second, school third and swimming fourth. “They were a wonderful group. I was very proud of their winning season and how they improved their times each meet,” concluded Bohne. One parent also noted how impressive it was to see all members of the Saints team join in a ring of prayer before each meet. “This is great to see and really helps us all understand why they are at Bishop Dwenger,” he summarized.

TODAY'S CATHOLIC
The death of Msgr. J. William Lester

The great and generous heart of Msgr. Bill Lester, a heart which was always yes — and never no — that splendid heart finally stopped beating last Saturday, and this remarkable priest went home to God.

This was no ordinary man. As I try to prepare some words for a fitting homily at the Mass of Christian Burial, the words do not come easily. The tears come quickly, but the words do not.

A wise counselor, a joyful pastor, a builder of schools, a Catholic educator and a highly intelligent priest. I know of no one who has done more for this diocese than this son of Holy Angels Parish in Gary.

He welcomed and became a father to the Cuban boys who came to our diocese in 1961. Two became priests and one a bishop. He proposed the building of our diocesan high schools and led the fund raising.

He, along with Msgr. Jim Wolf and others, led the restoration of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

In the painful matters which came upon the Church in recent years, he was a steadfast and wise advisor, always seeking the truth with compassion and love.

When a parish was in difficulty for whatever reason, he would readily accept the mission from his bishop — the more difficult, the better. His wise counsel and sure and enlightened leadership would soon set the parish on the right course.

I am touched with great sadness at his passing, but oh so grateful to God for his friendship and his wise pastoral counsel these past 24 years.

Safe home dear Bill, safe home. May the angels lead you into Paradise, may the martyrs receive you at your coming.
