HUNTINGTON — “In this oratory, may God, the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, be worshipped in spirit and in truth,” exclaimed Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades in his homily at the blessing of St. Felix Oratory in Huntington.

The historic day not only included the blessing of the oratory, the dedication of the altar, but also the formal announcement that the Dominican Sisters of Mary, Mother of the Eucharist, a community of sisters based in Ann Arbor, Mich., will use a part of the former friary for formation of their sisters beginning next fall.

Bishop Rhoades thanked John Tippmann and the Mary Cross-Tippmann Foundation for the purchase and overseeing the renovation of the friary.

“I believe it is 33 years since the sacred liturgy was offered here, when St. Felix Friary closed after 50 years as a novitiate for the Capuchin Franciscan order,” he said.

The friary is revered as the hallowed home of Venerable Father Solanus Casey.
Preparing for Easter sacraments

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHOADES

These past two Sundays, I had the joy of celebrating in both our cathedrals, the Rite of Election and the Rite of the Call to Continuing Conversion of Candidates who are preparing for Reception into the Full Communion of the Catholic Church.

The Rite of Election marked the close of the period of the catechumenate for 227 adults of our diocese who will be baptized, confirmed, and receive their first Holy Communion at the Easter Vigil. These men and women, now called “the elect,” have now begun the period of final, more intense preparation for the sacraments of initiation. Women and men are called “the elect” because they have been chosen or elected by God. At the ceremonies these past two Sundays, their names were inscribed in the Book of the Elect.

During the Rite of Election, the godparents of the catechumens testified that they have faithfully listened to God’s word proclaimed by the Church and have responded to that word and begun to walk in God’s presence. The catechumens testified that they desired to enter fully into the life of the Church through the sacraments of Baptism, Confirmation, and the Eucharist. The assemblies gathered at our cathedrals testified that they would pray for the catechumens as we move toward Easter. It is good for all of us, during these weeks of Lent, to remember the elect in our prayers.

After the Rite of Election, we celebrated the Rite of the Call to Continuing Conversion of 275 adults of our diocese who will be received into the Full Communion of the Catholic Church. These are men and women, already baptized, who seek to be able to participate fully in the sacramental life of the Catholic Church. Their sponsors testified that they are ready to receive the sacraments of Confirmation and Holy Eucharist. And, again, the members of the assembly pledged to support these candidates in faith, prayer, and example. It is also good for all of us, during these weeks of Lent, to remember the candidates in our prayers.

As we look forward to celebrating at Easter the life-giving mysteries of our Lord’s suffering, death, and resurrection, we do so along with the 502 men and women of our diocese who will join us for the first time at the Eucharistic table of the Lord. They will join us in faith and in the sacramental sharing of the paschal mystery.

Our evangelizing mission

I have said many times in parishes throughout our diocese that a truly vibrant parish is an evangelizing community. Evangelization is the fundamental mission of the Church. We have received the missionary mandate from Jesus Himself who said: “Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you; and Lo, I am with you always, until the close of the age.” (Mt. 28:18-20)

The Twelve Apostles were the first missionaries. The local churches they founded became missionary communities. What was done at the beginning of Christianity remains important for us because the Church is missionary by her very nature.

When we think of the Church’s missionary activity, we naturally think of the proclamation of the Gospel in foreign lands where people have not heard about Christ or the Gospel and where the Church is not established. This is what is called the Church’s mission “ad gentes.” It can be called “a first evangelization.” Every October, we celebrate World Mission Sunday and support the Church’s missions in these areas of the world.

It is also important for us to recognize the need for our missionary activity here in the United States and in our diocese. Here most people have heard Christ proclaimed and here the Church is established. The first evangelization of America began centuries ago. Both Blessed John Paul II and Pope Benedict XVI have spoken of the need for a “new evangelization” in the Western world. It is not “new” in content, but in energy and ardour, in methods and expression. It is urgently needed especially because of the secularization process that has produced a serious crisis of the meaning of the Christian faith and of belonging to the Church. We need only think of the millions of people in our country who practice no religion, baptized Christians who have become indifferent to the faith, and the many people who have become lost in “the deserts of the secularized world.” Pope Benedict has spoken often about “the eclipse of the sense of God” in our society. Yet, every human soul thirsts for meaning and purpose in life, indeed, thirsts for the living God.

In the context of our increasingly secularized culture, we must be ever more attentive to our evangelizing mission. This begins with ourselves and our own commitment to Christ and the Gospel. In this season of Lent, we are reminded of the need for our own continual repentance and conversion, our constant need of being evangelized ourselves by constant renewal and growth in holiness. Only then can we evangelize others with credibility.

The witness of our lives as faithful disciples of the Lord Jesus has primary importance in the work of evangelization. The witness of our parishes as vibrant communities of faith, hope, and charity is what makes them true evangelizing communities. Besides our witness, there needs to be an explicit proclamation of the Gospel. We must not be afraid to speak about and share our faith and to invite others to the Church. We are to bear witness to the faith and to proclaim it. We evangelize; we do not proselytize. We propose; we do not impose. We respect other religions and the religious liberty of our neighbors. At the same time, we do not withhold from non-Christians the riches of the mystery of Christ. And, of course, we respect our brothers and sisters who are non-Catholic Christians with whom we share a common baptism. We pray and work for Christian unity. At the same time, we also bear witness to our Christian brethren of the fullness of the revelation which the Catholic Church has received and the fullness of the means of salvation which we have received from our Lord, including the seven sacraments.

As we approach Easter, we pray for the 502 people in our diocese who will become Catholic: those who will be baptized and those who will be received into the full communion of the Catholic Church. We welcome them and we rejoice with them. At the same time, looking to the future, I invite all to be even more dedicated to the mission of evangelization. We have conducted the Catholics Come Home campaign to invite our non-practicing brothers and sisters to return to the practice of the faith. We must continue to reach out to them. And we must be even more ardent in our mission of evangelization to the unchurched. May the Lord bless us with spiritual fervor as we proclaim and bear witness to Him with joy and with love! May Mary, the Star of Evangelization, intercede for us in this holy mission!
HUNTINGTON — The signing of a lease was part of the festivities associated with the blessing at St. Felix Friary on March 3. The lessee? The Dominican Sisters of Mary, Mother of the Eucharist.

Their motherhouse in Ann Arbor, Mich, is currently at capacity “due to our amazing increase in vocations. In order to preserve the integrity of life and provide proper formation for the young women, additional housing is needed. St. Felix seems perfect for this,” said Mother Mary Assumpta Long, superior for the Dominican Sisters of Mary, and one of the four founding sisters of the community.

Mother Assumpta reported through an email interview with Today’s Catholic that the conversation began about a year ago from Carl Minick, a member of St. Vincent de Paul Parish in Fort Wayne and executive director of the Mary Cross-Tippman Foundation, who had heard about their growing community and wanted to know if some sisters could possibly be interested in living at St. Felix. When the need for interim housing became apparent, “we decided to visit the monastery and as we walked through the building, it seemed like this was where God was leading us,” Mother Assumpta said.

“In the short history of our community, we have met so many wonderful and faith-filled Catholics including, now, Mr. John Tippmann of the Mary Cross-Tippman Foundation and his wife, Master Assumpta said. “John had gone through his own prayerful discernment and then decided to purchase and renovate this monastery for the needs of the Church.”

The fact that the renovations were completed at the same time that we sisters identified our need is a sign of God’s providential blessings for those who respond to His voice,” she added. “We will never be able to adequately thank John Tippmann and his family for the beautiful renovations to this monastery and the invitation to come and live therein.

“The sisters’ lease agreement encompasses the possibility of five years. “Our over-riding concern for our community, at this point in time, is moving forward with the building of a priory,” she said Mother Assumpta. “Once the Texas priory is built, we will be able to move the sisters there.”

In the meantime, the St. Felix facility will be used for the formation of the sisters. Mother Assumpta noted she expects about 25 sisters will be located to St. Felix in the fall.

“The sisters who will be living at St. Felix will be in their novitate stage of formation,” said Dominican Sister Joseph Andrew Bogdanowicz, another founder of the community. “A sister is a novice for two years. During this time, she continues her religious formation. The novice studies the vows she is preparing to take in her religious profession, the Rule of St. Aquinas, and the constitution of the community and she makes a second meditation daily together with her fellow novices.”

“The first novitiate year is primarily dedicated to study and development of the interior life, while the second year is dedicated to introducing the novice to the apostolic life of the community,” Sister Joseph Andrew said. “At the end of the two years, if the sister and the community discern that it is God’s will, she proceeds with vows of charity, poverty and obedience for three years.”

“The sisters will be faithful in carrying out the Dominican monastic life at St. Felix. The contemplative and monastic practices include daily Mass, the Liturgy of the Hours, Eucharistic Holy Hour as a community, recitation of the rosary, dedication to daily prayer and ‘cloister appropriate to our life,’” noted Sister Joseph Andrew.

“I should not come as a surprise that as Dominican Sisters of Mary, Mother of the Eucharist, we have deep and ardent love for the most Holy Sacrament of the altar,” Mother Assumpta said. “Christ is at the very center of our being.” She added, “Seeking to maintain and invigorate our love for our Divine Spouse, each Dominican Sister of Mary rejoices to begin her day with a daily hour of Eucharistic Adoration and the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass. The first Friday of every month finds us before the Divine throne for night Adoration. Our monthly ‘Retreat Sunday’ includes a full day of Eucharistic Adoration and our weekend yearly retreat offers the same.”

“The Eucharist is present, not only in the chapel of our Motherhouse, but also in the chapels of all of our mission houses,” Mother Assumpta said. “Wherever we go we always find ourselves at home because He is there.”

“We depend greatly on the presence of our Eucharistic Spouse to help us in our prayer and work, and we could not live without Him,” Sister Joseph Andrew added. “Our vocation to live the evangelical counsels for the glory of God, the salvation of souls, and the transformation of the world only arises from the graces received from His Divine Eucharistic Presence.”

“The community of the Dominican Sisters of Mary, Mother of the Eucharist is growing rapidly.

“With certainty we can say it is growing by God’s grace and mercy — not only for our community and our schools but for the good of the entire Church,” Sister Joseph Andrew said. “We seek to live our consecrated life faithfully and with devotion. Our life of consecrated fidelity attracts young women of this generation who seek such a commitment for God and His people.”

“The Dominican charism is aligned to the New Evangelization both in our prayer and our teaching mission, added Dominican Sister John Dominic Ramussen, another of the founding sisters. “First and foremost, we must know the Person of Jesus Christ through the contemplative dimension of our life. Both the fruits of a rich prayer life and of assiduous study overflow into our teaching and preaching about the Person of Jesus Christ. Thus faith and reason are not separated as we provide in our schools challenging academics coupled with sound catechesis.”

“Young people are drawn to our clarity in living the religious life as well as in our teaching,” Sister Joseph Andrew noted.

DOMINICAN SISTERS OF MARY, MOTHER OF THE EUCHARIST, TO MOVE INTO ST. FELIX

BY TIM JOHNSON

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, said March 1 that there is more “confusion than clarity” in the revised federal contraceptive mandate and urged U.S. bishops to continue their fight against “mandates that require us to violate our moral convictions.” The archbishop of New York is pictured during the November 2011 meeting of the U.S. bishops’ conference in Baltimore.

for 20 years in Capuchin friaries in New York, Harlem, and Yonkers,” Bishop Rhodes said in his homily.

“Then, in 1924, he was assigned to St. Bonaventure Monastery in Detroit where he served for 20 years. He served as the porter, the doorkeeper, where he welcomed thousands of people.”

“People came to him because in him they experienced in a deep way the presence of God. He was renowned for his compassion,” Bishop Rhodes said. “There are many reported miracles, conversions, and other blessings received through his prayers and counsel.”

Father Solanus’ superiors sent him to St. Felix Friary in 1946, where he lived for 10 years, to ease the burden of so many visitors the simplex priest would see. Eventually, however, people flocked to Huntington as well, sometimes hundreds of people from Detroit. Father Solanus worked in the friary garden and tended the beehives. Father Solanus’ room was preserved in the friary, even when the property was owned by the United Brethren Church for many years.

“Father Solanus Casey spent much time in the chapel absorbed in prayer for long hours, even in the middle of the night,” Bishop Rhodes said of the oratory he was about to bless. “(Father Solanus) had an intense prayer life that also sustained him in illness and suffering.”

Father Solanus left St. Felix in 1956, recalled to Detroit by his superiors so that his skin disease, which was worsening, could be treated at a hospital there. He died a year and a half later.

“How grateful I am that this friary where a possible future saint of the Church lived for 10 years is now once again a Catholic facility,” Bishop Rhodes said.

After the Mass, Bishop Rhodes blessed the halls and rooms of the friary and then gathered with the media, Dominican Mother Assumpta Long, superior of the Dominican Sisters of Mary, and John Tippmann, who purchased the property, for a ceremonial signing of the lease that will bring the Dominican Sisters of Mary to the facility where novitiate training will be held.

“What a day of joy it is; this is a historic place in Huntington,” Bishop Rhodes opened at the press conference. “It’s a historic place for the Church in our diocese.”

“Eighty-three years ago, when this facility was built for the Capuchin friars as a novitiate, we can think about the hundreds and hundreds of priests and brothers who grew in their relationship with Christ here and then went forth from here to serve the Lord in the spirit of St. Francis,” Bishop Rhodes said. “We remember all of them. And it is with special joy that we come to rededicate St. Felix Oratory today, to dedicate the altar of the oratory chapel, to be here to celebrate a new stage of the history of this place, a spiritual place where so many will come to grow in their faith, to draw closer to Christ, to be spiritually refreshed through retreats and through spiritual days that will take place here.”

“Also with special joy we welcome Mother Mary Assumpta and the Dominican Sisters of Mary, Mother of the Eucharist, who will be coming here in a few months and where sisters will be here in formation for the consecrated life — another great blessing for our diocese,” he noted.

Bishop thanked John Tippmann, the Mary Cross-Tippmann Foundation and the whole Tippmann family “for their faith, and for their generosity in allowing this dream to become a reality.”

“Thanks are certainly in order, and I cannot thank you enough,” said Mother Assumpta. She told those gathered that she has become familiar with the diocese by reading Today’s Catholic, and added, “It is a great honor to be in the diocese that you lead.”

To John Tippmann, Mother Assumpta said, “What a family. I know all about you because you gave us the book,” referring to the family history book.

Carl Minick, the executive director of the Mary Cross-Tippmann Foundation and member of St. Vincent de Paul Parish, Fort Wayne, had contacted Mother Assumpta originally a few years ago.

But just six weeks ago, the friary set up a website promoting the retreats at the facility. Minick told Today’s Catholic he sent that website link to the Dominican Sisters of Mary. The next morning, there was a message from Mother Assumpta, “that maybe this was something they could be interested in.”

John Tippmann said the friary project started when Fort Wayne businessman Ed Romary called him and encouraged the Fort Wayne commercial property owner to check out the St. Felix Oratory.

Romary gave Tippmann a book on Father Solanus and asked Capuchin Father Ron Rieder, pastor of Ss. Peter and Paul Parish in Huntington and who knew Father Solanus personally, to give Tippmann a tour of the friary.

Tippmann said he returned to Fort Wayne and told the real estate board at his company, “We need to buy this facility down in Huntington. I don’t know what it is, but here’s their brochure. Next thing you know, we owned it,” Tippmann related at the press conference.

“I didn’t have a clue what we were going to do with it,” Tippmann said. “Father Rieder said, ‘Hey, you’ve got faith. That’s all it’s going to take. You’ve got to have faith.’”

“ ‘They say, if you build something, the people will come,’” Tippmann added, “And I think if you rebuild something, they will come again. So I think this is sort of the second beginning of this facility.”

Tippmann told Today’s Catholic a lot of volunteers were part of the renovation, especially from the Huntington area. “Some days we had as many as 25 volunteers in here working all over — inside the building, out on the grounds, everywhere,” he said.

Father Rieder enthusiastic at seeing the friary restored welcomed the announcement made by the Dominican Sisters of Mary. He said, “This is one of the happiest days of my life.”

ing, said he is putting more hope in finding a resolution to this issue through Congress or the courts than the White House. “We have to be realistic and prepare for tough times,” he said.

He also disputed the opinion expressed in an editorial in the March 5 edition of America magazine, which said the bishops’ objection to the revised mandate is primarily “a difference over policy” and seemed to “press the religious liberty campaign too far.”

Bishop William E. Lori of Bridgeport, Conn., chairman of the U.S. bishops’ Ad Hoc Committee on Religious Liberty, also took issue with the editorial in a March 2 letter to the editor. In reference to the editorial’s call for civility and a “conciliatory style,” he said: “Maybe Moses wasn’t at his best when he confronted Pharaoh. Maybe the Good Shepherd was a bit off his game when he confronted the rulers of his day.”

In his column, Archbishop Niederauer acknowledged “the issue of contraception is extremely important in American society,” but also pointed out that there are “frameworks through which the government’s desire to make contraceptives widely available and affordable, and the Catholic Church’s desire not to be involved in supplying contraceptives that conflict with Catholic faith, can both be accomplished.”

In a March 1 congressional subcommittee hearing, Sebelius said she was confident an acceptable compromise could be reached in the health care law to allow self-insured religiously affiliated institutions to provide contraception access without violating their religious beliefs.

“There are a variety of arrangements already in place in the 28 states that have this law already in place and we intend to use any such arrangements to provide contraception access without violating their religious beliefs,” she said. Sebelius told members of the House Energy and Commerce Health Subcommittee during a hearing about the HHS’s 2013 budget proposal.

“We believe it’s a solution that the administration and Congress will support, and that the president will support, to make sure that religious liberties are respected,” she said. Sebelius was responding to a question by Rep. Fred Upton, R-Mich., who asked about possible penalties for religious employers that fail to comply with the HHS mandate to offer contraceptive drugs that violate their religious principles.

Upton said a Catholic hospital in his state would likely be subject to fines of more than $1 billion. Rep. Joe Pitts, R-Pa., who chaired the hearing, read a statement from Catholic Charities USA emphasizing that the organization did not endorse the revised HHS mandate and shared the “goal of the church-affiliated organizations, including Catholic charities, hospitals, schools and universities, to opt out of mandated contraception coverage and would have extended exemptions to any nonreligious employer with a moral objection to such coverage.

Under the amendment, any employer also would have been allowed to refuse to cover any other preventive healthcare procedures required under the rule if they held a moral or religious objection.

Bishop Lori said in a statement after the vote that the bishops will continue their strong defense of conscience rights for all people.

“The need to defend citizens’ rights of conscience is the most critical issue before our country right now,” Bishop Lori said. “We will continue our defense of conscience rights for all people.

Archdiocese of Omaha opens sainthood cause for founder of Boys Town

BY LISA MAJSSON

OMAHA, Neb. (CNS) — It started in 1917 with a rented house, five boys who needed a home in Omaha and a Catholic priest determined to help troubled and abandoned youths throughout the city.

Now, Boys Town helps more than 1.6 million people each year through its main campus of group homes, churches, a grade school and high school, post office and bank, as well as a national research hospital in Omaha, a national hotline, and other services and locations around the country.

And the priest who started it all — Father Edward Flanagan — might someday be named a saint.

The process toward canonization began Feb. 27 with Archbishop George J. Lucas — surrounded by more than 200 people with dozens of cameras flashing — placing a notice on the doors of St. Cecilia Cathedral in Omaha.

The notice, which is a centuries-old Church tradition, alerted the public to the opening of Father Flanagan’s sainthood cause. It also invites people to share their thoughts with a tribunal that is being formed to review the priest’s life and works.

The second step is beatification, after which he is called “blessed.” The third step is sainthood. At various steps in the canonization process, evidence of alleged miracles is presented to Church authorities.

In general, two miracles need to be accepted by the Church as having occurred through the intercession of the prospected saint.

If Father Flanagan is canonized, he would be the first person declared a saint whose ministry was based in the Archdiocese of Omaha.
HENRYVILLE, Ind. (CNS) — As one of the few buildings in town to come through intense storms March 2 nearly intact, St. Francis Xavier Church has become a natural staging area for relief efforts, community organizing and prayer. Four days after a devastating tornado hit, volunteers and professionals used St. Xavier, the nearby Henryville Community Church and a community center as bases for people trying to put their lives back together. The town of about 1,600 was one of several in the region to be largely destroyed by a wave of storms that created dozens of tornadoes across 11 states March 2 and 3. At least 39 people were killed, including one in Clark County, where Henryville and nearby Marysville took direct hits. Deaths also were reported in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Ohio. Substantial damage dotted those states as well as Georgia, North Carolina, Illinois, Mississippi, Virginia and South Carolina. Tracy Guernsey, the staff nurse at Henryville’s public school complex, was among about 40 people still in the building when the tornado hit. She told Catholic News Service in a March 5 phone interview that if classes hadn’t been dismissed early in the face of the advancing storm, the death toll in Henryville would have been dramatic. She said school and the parish offices were undisturbed. The tornado hit at the normal dismissal time of 3 p.m., Guernsey said. “The bus drivers were the heroes there. If they hadn’t sent the buses out early, it would’ve been a different story.” Also reeling were parishioners of St. Luke Catholic Church in St. Marys, Ky., which was destroyed by another tornado in the same weather front. There, parishioner Helen Pennington was working in the church basement when the twister approached. Two carfuls of people passing through the area asked to seek shelter and joined her in the basement while the structure above was flattened. Six buildings — the church, the rectory, an outreach ministry, a storage building, grotto and picnic shelter — previously stood on the property. After the storm, only the locked door of office manager Benedictine Sister Jan Barthel’s office and its adjoining wall were left standing atop the church’s basement foundation.

Volunteers load donations into a truck for tornado victims outside St. Francis Xavier Church in Henryville, Ind., March 4. Calm weather gave residents of storm-wrecked towns a respite as they dug out from a chain of tornadoes that cut a swath of destruction March 2 from the Midwest to the Gulf of Mexico, killing at least 39 people in five states.

Cardinal dismayed that White House rebuffs religious freedom concerns

WASHINGTON (CNS) — In a strongly worded letter to his fellow bishops, Cardinal Timothy M. Dolan of New York charged that White House officials failed to consider the U.S. bishops’ concerns that the federal mandate governing coverage of contraception and sterilization under the health care law violated religious freedom principles. An invitation from the White House to “work out the wrinkles” regarding the mandate either by rescinding it or at least widening the exemptions on religious grounds failed to reach an agreement and the effort “seems to be stalled,” he said in the letter released late March 2. The letter cited recent comments by a White House official that the mandates are a “fait accompli” and that Congress was notified of the rules being published in the Federal Register “without change.” Cardinal Dolan, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, also said that during a recent meeting with White House officials, USCCB staff members “asked directly whether the broader concerns of religious freedom ... are all off the table.” He wrote: “They (USCCB staff) were informed they are.” The cardinal said, “Instead they advised the bishops’ conference that we listen to the ‘enlightened’ voices of accommodation,” pointing to a recent editorial in America magazine. The editorial in the magazine’s March 5 issue questioned whether the bishops’ opposition to the revised mandate released by the administration Feb. 10 was an issue of disagreement over government policy, as opposed to an infringement of religious liberty, “The White House seems to think we bishops simply do not know or understand Catholic teaching and so, taking a cue from its own definition of religious freedom, now has nominated its own hand-picked official Catholic teachers,” the letter continued.

Ohio community mourns after ‘senseless tragedy’ at high school

CHARDON, Ohio (CNS) — Wearing Chardon High School colors of red and black and carrying candles and red flowers, more than 3,000 people from Chardon and neighboring communities gathered inside and outside of St. Mary Catholic Church for an evening vigil held Feb. 28 to pray with and comfort one another after the tragic shooting at the high school. Five students were shot Feb. 27 when a teenager opened fire around 7:40 a.m. in the cafeteria at Chardon High School in the Cleveland suburbs. The shooting victims were rushed to the hospital, where Daniel Parmertor, 16, a St. Mary parishioner, was declared dead. Russell King Jr., 17, was pronounced dead at 1 a.m. Feb. 28, and Demetrius Hewlin, 16, died later that day. Demetrius’ mother, Phyllis, is a member of St. Mary parishioner, was declared dead. Russell King Jr., 17, was pronounced dead at 1 a.m. Feb. 28, and Demetrius Hewlin, 16, died later that day. Demetrius’ mother, Phyllis, is a member of St. Mary Parish. Nick Walczak, 17, remained hospitalized in serious condition March 1. The fifth victim, Joey Rickers, 18, was in another part of the school when she was shot; she was released from the hospital Feb. 28. The alleged shooter, identified by his family as 17-year-old T.J. Lane, was chased from the school and arrested a short time later. He was being held in jail as a juvenile, and formal charges against him were to be filed by March 1. St. Mary Church is across the street from Chardon Middle School and Chardon High School, and its pastor, Father Daniel Redmond, said the church has remained open and welcoming to anyone who wants to pray or talk to counselors. He noted that parish Life Teen group also had gathered for prayer. “Generally, it’s just shock that everyone is feeling,” Father Redmond told the Catholic Universe Bulletin, newspaper of the Cleveland Diocese.

Virginia Senate passes revised ultrasound bill, aims to reduce abortion

RICHMOND, Va. (CNS) — Both chambers of the Virginia General Assembly started revising legislation forcing women to get a fetal ultrasound before an abortion after Gov. Bob McDonnell persuaded lawmakers not to require a vaginal probe as part of the procedure. That change was reflected in the revised version of a House bill that the Senate Education and Health Committee approved Feb. 23 on an 8-7 party-line vote. The measure, sponsored by Delegate Kathy Byron, a Republican from Lynchburg, was approved in a full Senate vote 21-19 Feb. 28. The amended bill excludes women who are victims of rape and incest. ‘“Though amended, the ultrasound bill as passed by the Senate will still give many women considering an abortion the opportunity to first have the benefit of important additional information before making these life-altering decisions,” said Jeff Caruso, executive director of the Virginia Catholic Conference, the public policy arm of the state’s bishops. “The Virginia Catholic Conference considers this Senate-approved bill an important improvement to Virginia’s current informed consent law and looks forward to its anticipated final approval in the House,” he said. “As this bill was extensively debated and covered, one point that seemed to get lost all too often is that the information to be gathered is information about an unborn child — a member of the human family with intrinsic dignity whose value is beyond measure,” added Caruso. “As dialogue continues on measures that seek to build a culture of life one small step at a time, let us continue to speak with persistence and determination for those who have no voice but ours,” he said.

HIGH SCHOOL PHYSICS STUDENTS TREATED TO JAZZ

Provided by Saint Joseph’s High School

Saint Joseph’s High School students of instructor Chris Culver’s physics classes found their study of sound waves became more understandable when Stephen and Mary Merriman and their jazz music were brought into class. Stephen is a master piano technician, possessing an expertise in both the workings and tuning of the piano and the playing of jazz. Joined by Saint Joseph’s junior John Dean on the piano, Mary on the bass, and Stephen on the Djembe drum, students were treated to 10 minutes of jazz. Following the performance, Culver and Merriman instructed the students in the physics of sound, using a “striped down” piano that allowed students to not only hear but also see and feel the creation of the notes.

Nun Laments Booming Business In Coffins for Babies

Sister Mary Ann has lived and worked in Jeremie on the remote southwest coast of Haiti for many years. She knows the poverty of her area well, but she still feels the pain of its terrible impact on the local people. “When a baby dies, and they build the rough wood coffin, I feel the pain of the mother — of the whole community,” she said. “Life is too precious — too valuable.”

And still, the local carpenter has another coffin in his shop and one on his workbench ready for his saw and hammer. As long as the children die, the coffins must be made. “Fortunately, we do have reason for hope. We have developed a medical outreach to this community and it’s beginning to work — we are able to save the lives of these little ones,” she added. “Sometimes we laugh, ‘we will put these carpenters out of business. No more coffins for our babies.”

The president of Cross Catholic Outreach, Jim Cavnar, shares St. Mary Ann’s sense of hope. While meeting with key staff from the Haitian Health Foundation, he was impressed by the determination and success of the outreach. With the help of contributions from American Catholics, Cross Catholic Outreach will be able to supply Sr. Mary Ann’s program with urgently needed medical supplies.

“The help, Cavnar knows, will be meaningful — not just a token gift. “I met a boy just today who illustrates the impact of Sr. Mary Ann’s work,” he said. “Because of the Haitian Health Foundation, he could be treated for typhoid in time. We drove him home today. There won’t be a coffin built for Makendy Louis. He will be back in school soon with a future ahead of him.”

“The question is... will the next child receive the same life-saving help?” he added. “Will that next child live or die? Our actions now will answer that question.”

To provide Sister Mary Ann and the Haitian Health Foundation with as many medicines as possible, Cross Catholic Outreach is now seeking financial contributions from American Catholics. “Our goal is to help fulfill Sister Mary Ann’s dream — by ending Haiti’s booming business in coffins for babies,” Cavnar said. “If American Catholics will join with us in this effort, I know it can be done.”

“And don’t underestimate the impact your individual gift can have,” he added. “In countries like Haiti, a $10 donation can literally save a life. There are scores of children that die because their mother or father couldn’t obtain a simple anti-diarrhea medication — something we could supply with a donation of a few dollars. Imagine, saving a life. You can have that kind of impact with even a modest contribution to this outreach.”

Cross Catholic Outreach Now Endorsed by More Than 60 Bishops, Archbishops

As Cross Catholic Outreach (CCO) continues its range of relief work to help the poor overseas, its efforts are being recognized by a growing number of Catholic leaders in the U.S. and abroad.

“We’ve received an impressive number of endorsements from Bishops and Archbishops — more than 60 at last count,” explained Jim Cavnar, president of Cross Catholic Outreach. “They’re impressed by the fact that we’ve done outreaches in almost 40 countries and that we undertake a variety of projects; everything from feeding the hungry and housing the homeless to supplying safe water and supporting educational opportunities for the poorest of the poor.”

Archbishop Robert Carlson of St. Louis sent one of the more recent letters of encouragement, writing: “It is my hope that this ministry will continue to flourish and reach as many people as possible. I will inform the priests of the Archdiocese of St. Louis of the important work that Cross Catholic Outreach does and elicit their prayerful and financial support for the service you provide to the less fortunate around the world.”

In addition to praising the work CCO accomplishes, many of the Bishops and Archbishops are impressed by the unique collaborative relationship Cross Catholic Outreach has with the Pontifical Council Cor Unum in Rome. This allows the charity to participate in the mercy ministries of the Holy Father himself. In his praise of CCO, Archbishop Dennis Schnurr of Cincinnati underscored this unique connection.

“Cross Catholic Outreach’s close collaboration with the Pontifical Council Cor Unum is a source of encouragement,” the Archbishop said. “The Holy See has unique knowledge of local situations throughout the world through its papal representatives in nearly two hundred countries and through its communications with Bishops and others who care for the poor and needy in every corner of the world.”

CCO president, Jim Cavnar, explained the significance of this connection. “Our collaboration with Cor Unum allows us to fund outreaches in virtually any area of the world and we have used that method in special cases — to help the victims of natural disasters, for example,” he said. “It only represents a small part of our overall ministry, but it can be a very important benefit in those situations.”
“Cross” Program Can Turn $50 Donation Into $4,250 Worth Of Aid For The Poor

James Cavnar, the president of Cross Catholic Outreach, looks at a $50 gift differently than most charity leaders.

“When I’m handed a $50 donation, I see a $4,250 shipment of material aid on its way to the poor. That’s the end result of the gift when I use it to deliver donated goods overseas,” Cavnar explained. “For example, we may convince a medical organization to donate life-saving medicines or nutritional supplements, but we can only deliver those items overseas if we have cash donations to pay for the shipping costs. For every $1 donated to our shipping program last year, we were able to send more than $85 worth of goods to the needy in Haiti and other third-world countries.”

Of course, the same formulas apply to other gifts. A donation of $25 allows Cross Catholic Outreach to supply the poor with more than $2,000 worth of aid and a $100 gift can yield nearly $10,000 in food, medical supplies and other life-saving materials — an amazing multiplication of the donor’s contribution.

“This program is popular because it produces more bang for the buck, as the saying goes. It also rescues goods that might have been wasted and puts them to good use — helping the poor,” Cavnar said. “That’s a win, win situation.”

Catholic lay leaders and clergy in Haiti’s Central Plateau are frustrated. In the isolated village they call home, children are dying and families are suffering for reasons they do not understand — reasons that test their spirit and their faith.

They recall one recent and painful experience.

“I will never forget it. I was called to the home of Madame Wilner, a woman who lived in a rural area outside the village. She was poor — very poor. Living in a shack with very little food and almost nothing for her children.

“When I arrived, she came out to meet me, frantic about her baby, Gason. ‘I have tried to help him... made a cure... he is dying... help me,’ she cried. I knew the cure she had made for the baby was some ineffective concoction of herbs that rural people often try in their desperation. Such things never work, but they are tried because there is no other choice.

“I gasped when I stepped inside the dreary shack and saw the baby. His body was covered with some kind of terrible skin infection. He was obviously suffering, and his tiny body also showed the disturbing signs of other trauma. I could clearly see his rib bones heaving with labored breaths, and his hair was orange from malnutrition. Sobbing, his mother begged for my help. ‘Anything... please... do anything,’ she cried. ‘I have nothing... no way to save him.’

“Because the local clinic had been closed for lack of supplies, I knew that the baby’s only hope was a mission hospital nearly 3 hours away by car. I carefully lifted the baby up, placed him into my automobile, and set out for help.

“I drove as quickly as I could over the rough dirt roads, but two hours into the trip, my spirit dropped. Something was wrong. I could see that Gason Wilner was slipping away. Suddenly, his body began to convulse — first slowly, then more violently. My eyes welled up with tears, and I began to pray. As if in merciful response, the baby’s tormenting convulsions stopped. I drove on, tears running down my cheeks, as God gently took tiny Gason away.

“I will never forget it. It is yet another reason I beg on behalf of the poor. For Gason Wilner, and for the other children here who die needlessly. Something must be done.”

James Cavnar agrees, and his meetings with clergy and lay leaders have already produced progress. Through Cavnar’s organization, Cross Catholic Outreach, medical supplies will be obtained for shipment to clinics that serve Haiti’s poor. Cavnar is asking other American Catholics to join him in this endeavor.

“Frankly, we need your help. We need the help of American Catholics who want to assist priests to be part of the solution. The medicines that could have saved Gason Wilner would have cost a few dollars. What is a child’s life worth — certainly a few dollars?? We need to see that these people are helped,” Cavnar said. “The more people who contribute, the more we can do.”

And, Cavnar pointed out, every donation contributed is important because it only takes a few dollars worth of medicines to save a life in many cases.

“On behalf of the priests, nuns and laypeople who are trying to help the poor of Haiti, I ask you to prayerfully consider making a sacrificial contribution to this cause,” Cavnar said. “Your actions may save the life of a child. Your gift may be the gift of life for a little one like Gason.”

NOTRE DAME — “Go and make disciples of all nations,” proclaimed Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades as he echoed the words of Jesus Christ’s great commission to His Apostles.

The theme of evangelization was heralded by the bishop at the All School Mass at the University of Notre Dame’s Purcell Pavilion at the Joyce Center on Feb. 27. Students, teachers and administrators of 21 South Bend area and Western Michigan schools, along with 20 parish priests participated in the 20th year of this annual Mass.

Bishop Rhoades explained that the Apostles first went out in the streets of Jerusalem to teach and baptize people in the name of Jesus. Persecution of the Apostles followed and they set out for other destinations including the city of Antioch. It was here that the name “Christian” was first used to describe a follower of Jesus.

While early Christians preached only to the Jewish community, they remembered Jesus’ call for discipleship to all nations, and began to include the gentiles in their proclamation of Christ’s teachings, the bishop added. The expansion of their evangelization led the Apostles Peter and Paul to the pagan city of Rome where both were martyred and buried.

Peter was martyred and buried on a hill in Rome called the “Vatican.” Eventually St. Peter’s Basilica was built over Peter’s remains and is part of the Holy See, also referred to as the Vatican, where the pope resides.

Bishop Rhoades told the audience that he had recently returned from a 10-day visit to Rome with other bishops from Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin.

He explained that all bishops are obligated to go to Rome every five years to pray at the tombs of Sts. Peter and Paul. In addition, the bishops are required to meet with the Holy Father during their visit.

On Feb. 9, Bishop Rhoades met with Pope Benedict XVI and they both discussed the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend and the young people of the diocese. Bishop Rhoades noted that the pope was very interested in the diocese’s Catholic schools in particular.

“Our Catholic schools are one of the strengths of the Church in the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend,” Bishop Rhoades told the pontiff. The pope, pleased by what the bishop had told him, responded, “Please give my blessing to the children of the Catholic schools.”

Pope Benedict spoke to all of the bishops during their “ad limina” visit about a new evangelization that is needed in the Church. The pontiff explained that many Catholics do not go to Sunday Mass anymore and need to be more active in their faith. The pope indicated that Catholic schools are a way of showing this new evangelism.

“The whole Church is universal and we have brothers and sisters in Africa, Asia, Latin America and Europe. The pope said the youth of America have a special responsibility (in evangelization) because they have been blessed in many ways,” Bishop Rhoades emphasized.

The bishop explained that Catholic School students could serve as missionaries to other countries by becoming a part of The Holy Childhood Association, which helps the world’s poorest children.

“I have a dream that every Catholic school in our diocese has a strong and active Holy Childhood Association,” said Bishop Rhoades. He noted that by joining the Holy Childhood Association, students can minister and evangelize to those in needy countries through prayer and financial support. The bishop suggested that financial support could be achieved by sacrifice, such as foregoing a special treat at lunch and donating the cost of the treat towards a classroom fund for the Holy Childhood Association.

The view of a universal Christian body resonated for many of those in attendance at the All School Mass. Two parish priests expressed that the All School Mass was a great way for students to understand this concept.

Father David Ruppert, pastor of St. Anthony de Padua Parish in South Bend, remarked, “It’s important for the children to know that they are more than their classroom, school or parish.”

Father Terry Coonan, parochial vicar of St. Pius X Parish in Granger, added, “As the body of Christ we are each slightly unique but are all connected in organic ways.”

Jennifer Sosinski, a fourth-grade teacher from Holy Cross School, said for students often see each other in sporting events or groups such as quiz bowls during the school year. “Here (at the All School Mass) they are able to see the bigger community of all the children coming together and praying to Jesus together,” Sosinski said.

Students Annalise Hernandez of St. Matthew Cathedral School, and Wyatt Toothacker of St. Pius X School, remarked that the joyous music and prayer increased the All School Mass appeal.

Near the conclusion of the Mass, Bishop Rhoades thanked Quality Dining, the sponsor of the All School Mass, and the clergy, administrators, teachers and students for their efforts in making the annual event a success.

Before dismissing the students the bishop shouted to the enthusiastic crowd, “I’m proud of you, bear witness to the faith, and evangelize!”
Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades celebrated the All-School Mass at the University of Notre Dame’s Purcell Pavilion at the Joyce Center on Feb. 27. Twenty-one schools from the South Bend region participated.
St. Patrick, patron of Ireland and parades

BY VINCE LABARBERA

St. Patrick is one of the world’s most popular saints. He’s the patron of Ireland, engineers, Nigeria, the Diocese of Norwich, Conn., parades and all things green.

St. Patrick’s Day is observed on March 17, the date of his death, circa 461. It’s celebrated in and outside of Ireland, as a liturgical and non-liturgical holiday. In the dioceses of Ireland it is both a solemnity and a holy day of obligation, and outside of Ireland, it can be a celebration of Ireland itself. It’s a day when everyone claims or wants to be Irish. And it announces the death of winter and the coming of the green of spring.

There are many stories surrounding St. Patrick. A popular folk tale claims he chased all snakes from Ireland. But the story has no historical basis. Another legend, that St. Patrick used shamrocks to teach about the Holy Trinity, also generally is agreed to be a myth. He is said to have stood in ice water up to his arm pits to teach about the Holy Trinity, which he was told to leave Ireland by going to the coast, probably to France. There he found some sailors who reportedly took him back to Great Britain, where he reunited with his family.

He began his studies for the priesthood in the schools of Tours and Lerins, off the French coast. During this time Patrick had another dream in which the people of Ireland were calling him back to Great Britain, where he reunited with his family. He was ordained by St. Germanus, Bishop of Auxerre, whom he had studied under for years. Later Patrick was ordained a bishop and sent to take the Gospel to Ireland.

He arrived in Ireland on March 25, 433, at Slane. There he suffered much opposition. One story says he met a chieftain named Dicu (or Milda) of one of the tribes, who tried to kill him. Patrick converted the chieftain after he was unable to move his arm until he became friendly. Patrick’s strategy was to convert chiefs first, who then would convert their clans through their influence.

Patrick preached the Gospel throughout Ireland. He had many disciples, who preached and converted all of Ireland for nearly 40 years, urging the people to greater holiness in Christ. Patrick ordained many priests, divided the country into dioceses, held Church councils, founded several monasteries and began building churches throughout the country.

Patrick worked many miracles. After years of living in poverty, traveling and enduring much suffering, he died in a monastery, ironically in strife-torn Ulster, County Down, in Northern Ireland where he had built the first church. Patrick really isn’t a saint with a capital S, having never been canonized officially by Rome. That’s because there was no formal process for canonization in place when Patrick died. For the first millennium of the Church, canonizations were done at the diocesan or regional level. When exceptionally holy people died — martyrs were considered saints for having given the ultimate sacrifice — the local Church affirmed liturgically they could be celebrated as saints. That was the case with St. Patrick, whose feast has not been dropped from the Church’s universal calendar.

The sign of the cross calls on God’s presence

Edward Sri offers a biblical walk through the Mass at workshops in Mishawaka, Fort Wayne

BY TIM JOHNSON

FORT WAYNE — “The Mass is the most biblical way to worship God,” noted Dr. Edward Sri, a nationally-known, dynamic Catholic speaker who appears regularly on Eternal Word Television Network and has authored many books.

Sri offered those attending his recent workshops in Mishawaka and Fort Wayne a unique tour of the liturgy and traced the biblical roots of the prayers of the Mass. He began with the first prayer of the Mass — the sign of the cross, and spoke in depth on its biblical roots.

“It is a prayer (the sign of the cross) that has tremendous roots in Scripture,” Sri said.

He explained, “In the Bible, when we call on God’s name, we are invoking His presence.”

“We are calling on God’s presence, and His name, and our help,” Dr. Edward Sri, noted Dr. Edward Sri, who has authored many books.

“Secondly, when we make the sign of the cross, Sri related, ‘And I want to follow Your standards to happiness.’

Sri said, ‘They prayed the sign of the cross, Sri related, “They prayed the sign of the cross all throughout the day.”

One of the very practical things that the faithful can take away from the sign of the cross, Sri related, comes from looking at what the early Christians did.

“When the early Christians made the sign of the cross, they didn’t do it just before prayer, or Mass, or just before they said, ‘bless us O Lord,’” Sri said, “They prayed the sign of the cross all throughout the day.”

One early Christian said the sign of the cross should be made on all occasions: ‘Over the bread we eat, over the cups we drink, in our comings and our goings, in our sleep, in our lying down, in our rising up.’

“The sign of the cross is a powerful safeguard, for it is a grace from God, a badge of the faithful and a terror to the devils,” the early Christian added.

“The sign of the cross is a powerful mark of fidelity,” Sri related. “It is a powerful thing.”

“Secondly, when we make the sign of the cross, we are saying, ‘God, I want to call on Your help and protection in my life,’” Sri said.

“Protect me in my life. Protect me from sin, from temptation.”

Dr. Edward Sri was the keynote speaker at the Institute for Catechetical Formation for Fort Wayne area Catholic schoolteachers on Feb. 24. The event, held at Bishop Luers High School, was coordinated by the Office of Catechesis and included Mass celebrated by Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades. Sri is the co-founder of FOCUS, the fellowship of Catholic university Students, and serves as the provost and professor of theology and Scripture at the Augustine Institute’s Master’s program in Denver, Colo.

When faced with temptations, or struggles with certain sins, “It is a great time to turn to the sign of the cross for Jesus’ help,” Sri said. When one catches himself in these struggles, “say Jesus’ name in your head, and trace the sign of the cross over your heart very simply,” encouraged Sri, “and find God to help you not go down that road. . . .”

The second practical point Sri encouraged was for parents to trace the sign of the cross over their children’s heads. “It’s a beautiful thing every morning to bless your children and every night before they go to bed,” Sri, a father of six, shared.

Sri’s talk continued with the rich biblical background of the Mass, especially with the new translation that has been recently implemented in the English-speaking counties.

Sri, who has authored “A Biblical Walk Through the Mass: Understanding What We Say and Do in the Liturgy,” which explains this background of the Liturgy of the Word and the Liturgy of the Eucharist, is available through Ascension Press.

SOUTH BEND — The second annual “Diaper War” between Marian and Saint Joseph’s high schools was held Friday, Feb. 24. The students collected diapers to be donated to the Women’s Care Center.

“Last year, between both schools, we collected a three-to-four month supply for the Women’s Care Center,” said right to life teacher and co-moderator Tom Dlugosz from Marian High School. “We are so happy to do this; we are committed to supporting their efforts to help women and their children.”

The students who bring diapers in on collection day get to enjoy a “dress down day,” and the right to life group advertises the collection day through posters and announcements for a couple of weeks to help get the word out.

“It’s a fun competition between the schools, but in the end it’s really about how many diapers we collect to help women in our community,” said senior Ellen Nagy, one of the officers of the Marian High School Right to Life group. Another officer, senior Jenny Seng agreed saying, “We have a really active group here at Marian. When I joined it was a lot of seniors only. Now we have a lot of freshmen and sophomores and have about 50 members. This event has great student support for a great cause.”

Both schools have energetic right to life groups and actually stayed at the same hotel in Washington, D.C., in January when they traveled to the annual National Right to Life March at the capital. “The kids got to hang out and get to know each other. It was really nice,” said Dlugosz.

The gathering and counting of the diapers are done by the right-to-life student members. Then the diapers are bagged and delivered to the Women’s Care Center by the administrations. The winner of the diaper war is announced during the annual basketball game between Marian and Saint Joseph’s. This year that game took on special significance as it was the last game played at the Saint Joseph’s Alumni Gym.

“We may be rivals on the court,” said Marian Principal Carl Loesch, “But we are friends off the court,” said Marian Principal Carl Loesch, “But we are friends off the court and we are honored to join efforts with Saint Joseph’s to support this great organization.” Marian went on to win the basketball game over Saint Joseph’s, 64-49.

Saint Joseph’s won the diaper war last year, but it was a double victory for Marian this year, which collected 26,794 diapers. In total the schools donated 49,764 diapers.

“We are so thankful to our students’ generosity to Women’s Care Center,” said director of development at Marian, Alicia Redinger. According to Bobby Williams, the director of the Women’s Care Center Foundation, 40 percent of all babies born in St. Joseph County receive some sort of assistance from the Women’s Care Center.

“We distribute, free of charge, hundreds of thousands of diapers each year. We are always in need of additional contributions to fill this tremendous need. It is a blessing that the students of Saint Joseph’s and Marian put their hearts and souls into this friendly competition each year. Their efforts are truly pro-life “in deeds” ... and not just words. Our volunteer President Ann Manion and I are especially grateful to Principal Carl Loesch and Principal Susan Richter for their incredible support and leadership as well,” said Williams.

The Women’s Care Center now has 18 locations in Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin. To help them help area women choose life visit www.womenscarecenter.org.

Our spiritual journey to the empty tomb

Fasting
Now that the Lenten season is in full swing, and we have entered fully into the 40-day desert journey, I feel I’ve gotten a deeper sense of where I’m headed with my commitment to connecting with God through daily prayer. Each year during this penitential season we hear so much about the conversion of heart — the interior change that is man’s true desire to come closer to God. I believe that to have that interior change of heart, we must choose to “do” some things differently.

In my last Lenten reflection I wrote about the three pillars of Lent with a focus on prayer as a springboard to deepening our relationship with God. Prayer, as a form of daily communication with our Creator, can lead us to inspired ideas of where His love is leading us. But how do we put that leading into practice as we act to make positive changes in our lives?

When I was a child my Lenten practice revolved around giving up something I enjoyed. I fasted from chewing gum or drinking soda. As an adult I continue with the practice of fasting — second pillar of Lent — which I’ve found can be a fruitful endeavor in my Lenten efforts to open myself to that desired change of heart.

Fasting is one of the oldest practices associated with the season of Lent. Scripture is packed with the benefit of fasting from the Old Testament to the New. Throughout history the faithful have not only abstained from eating meat but have fasted from all food for days in an attempt to empty themselves before the Lord in repentance. I believe there is a sacrificial beauty to the rhythm of fasting — the emptying and filling, and back again. When we physically fast from food, with a contrite heart, we allow our bodies to be empty of matter so that a space opens that can be filled with the indwelling spirit of God.

Of course, the act of fasting can help us bring our passions under control and develop that sometimes hard won self-discipline — another important pillar of Lent.

Gospel Reading
3rd Sunday of Lent
Jn 4:4-52

The Book of Exodus is the source of the first biblical reading this weekend. In Hebrew history, the Exodus virtually was unsurpassed as an event of great significance, unless perhaps this distinction goes to creation itself. In the Exodus, the Hebrew people, enslaved and dreadfully mistreated in Egypt, escaped. Eventually, they found the new homeland.

None of this good fortune happened because of luck or human strategy. Rather, God’s power led the Hebrews to a successful escape from Egypt. Moses, their leader in this endeavor, was chosen by God for the task.

As the flight was underway, Moses received from God and then gave to the people what long has been called the Ten Commandments.

These familiar commandments formed the essential requisites for the relationship between God and the Hebrew people. By observing these commandments, the people fulfill their obligations under the Covenant. It was as if God and the people were entering into a legal contract, solemnly binding both parties. St. Paul’s First Epistle to the Corinthians goes to the heart of the Christian message. Christianity preaches Christ. In this reading, Paul asserts that Jesus is the key to salvation. So, the apostle declares, he preaches, “Christ crucified.” It is a “stumbling block for the Jews, and an anathema for the Gentiles.” (The Jews, suffering under Roman oppression, and enduring so much, were inclined to regard Jesus as an impostor and the False Prophet. Others, “gentiles,” would have seen Jesus as a convicted felon, found guilty by the jurisprudence of Rome than a proclaimed its wisdom and perfection.)

For its Gospel reading, the Church this weekend furnishes us with St. John’s Gospel. This weekend’s reading is one of the most familiar sections of the New Testament. It recalls the time when Jesus, shortly before Passover, entered the temple precincts and found underway a brisk traffic in the things needed for ritual sacrifice. Furious, the Lord drove the merchants away.

He then predicted that the temple would fall, in itself a virtual blasphemy for many who witnessed this event, and then made the astonishing announcement that he would rebuild the colossal structure in three days. It had taken many people many years to build the temple in the first place.

The Gospel reading sets the stage for Good Friday when Jesus accused of being a blasphemer and a troublemaker. The Lord’s prediction calling for the re-building of the temple in three days looked ahead to the Resurrection.

The reading establishes Jesus as God’s voice, and God’s agent. He is very outdone at the misuse of the temple. The reading also looks forward to Calvary and to the Resurrection, the climactic moments in Redemption.

This reading also reveals much about the bystanders. The Lord’s reaction to the money changers and peddlers reminds them of the Scriptures, yet they fail fully to grasp the Lord’s identity or message.

Lent reminds us of our humanity. Despite all the differences in lifestyles and scientific knowledge, nothing removes us from the condition in which the contemporaries of Jesus lived. We, as were they, are humans, subject to human limitations.

Being human has its bright side. We congratulate ourselves, for example, on the brilliant design of spaceships. The dark side is that we, as did the accusers of Jesus, fail to see reality in full perspective. When it comes to right or wrong, too often we choose the wrong side.

Sin brings, and has brought, such injury to people. Stubbornly, we hold onto sin. Lenten discipline calls us more sharply to focus, better to see sin in its reality.

God never deserts us, even in our folly. He forever gives us life. Jesus is our Savior and example. He alone has the way to eternal life.

Contraception, abortion, and the battle for the heart of the woman

On Saturday, Feb. 25, a political cartoon was featured in the Journal Gazette, which showed a husband holding a newspaper, which said “Santorum: America is at War with Satan” and the husband says to his wife, “Yes and apparently the front line is your uterus.” While crass in its wording, I could not help but think that there was an ironic truth expressed.

In many ways, the sexual revolution of the 1960s and ’70s was built on a premise of giving new freedom, a revolution that has led to the destruction of the family. The solution that the culture offered to women, the savior meant to liberate women from the shackles, which childbirth perceptively imposed on them, was contraception and abortion. No more women would be enslaved by their biology. They were now free to control their lives without unwanted pregnancy getting in the way.

Some years later, after the use of contraception and abortion became mainstream of our culture, Pope John Paul II asked an important question, “What things will be more conducive to liberate women, have they liberated her? Or have they not rather made her a slave?” (to the bishops of the Midwest, “ad limina” visit, 1987). What did the pope mean by this?

I would offer these thoughts. In marriage, contraception has a way of divorcing sex from love. When sexual relations between spouses loses part of its full power, that is, the ability to procreate, what is also lost is the power to communicate “I love you, and I give my whole self to you.” When this happens, rather than a spouse who is embraced and loved as the person that she is, more and more the woman becomes simply the object of sexual pleasure for the man. By God’s design, women are especially sensitive and perceptive to this reality. A woman intuitively knows when she is being used. So the use of contraception in marriage has not liberated the woman, but rather leads her to enslavement, leads her to being an object to be used, even by her husband.

This enslavement becomes an even starker reality when abortion becomes involved. Again, touted as a liberator of women when faced with an unwanted pregnancy, in reality it rips at her motherly heart, enslaving her in a reality of regret and sorrow at her lost child. Abortion’s ready availability also only expands the ways in which the woman can become enslaved by that prediction to abortion makes it even easier for men to use women without the thought of any consequence.

Indeed, Pope John Paul’s question has become as poignant today as ever: has the woman really become liberated or has she not rather become enslaved?

It is not hard to see the hand of Satan behind this, tempting women with the promise of freedom when in reality she is being offered enslavement. And Satan knows what he is doing. To enslave the culture of our age, it is enough to enslave the woman. Pope John Paul II also pointed out that the culture flows through the heart of the woman so important is the role of the woman in family life, in raising children, in society in general (e.g. “On the Dignity of Women,” No. 30). If the woman is enslaved, the result is death, death of the culture, death of marriage, death of true love, death of life itself.

Satan is on the attack in our age, and the battle line is indeed the heart of the woman.

The contraception mandate and ‘cooperation with evil’

The Affordable Care Act that Congress passed in 2010 directs employers to provide health insurance or pay a fine. New regulations adopted by the Department of Health and Human Services will also require employers to provide full coverage for contraceptives, abortion drugs and sterilization procedures that the Catholic Church teaches are gravely immoral.

There is a modest exemption for some religious groups (churches and religious orders), but most of them still have to comply.

This is a religious freedom issue, but some doubt its importance. After all, when we provide health insurance at The Catholic University of America, are we morally responsible for all of the procedures it covers? Why would we be more responsible than we are for the wages we already pay? Perhaps one of our employees or contractors spends that money in strip clubs or on cocaine.

Just what are we morally responsible for? It cannot be for every result of every action we perform. It would be absurd to blame me for a hot dog vendor’s extramarital affair, just because my lunch purchase helped finance it.

At the other extreme, it seems equally absurd to maintain the innocence of Pontius Pilate, who allowed a grave miscarriage of justice with his feigned and strategic indifference to Jesus’ fate.

Catholic moral theology calls this the problem of “cooperation with evil.” When C (the Cooperator) assists A (the Actor) to do some immoral act, intending to advance A’s wrongful purposes, we have a case of formal cooperation. Formal cooperation is intrinsically wrong.

Think of a getaway driver. He does not rob the bank, but he deliberately assists the robber to escape with the money. The driver cannot claim that he is legally driving a car, a lawful act. He is guilty of formal cooperation because he intends to advance the robber’s purpose.

This is the most obvious reason why Catholic institutions should decline to provide insurance for contraception, abortion and sterilization. The insurance policy is a way of paying for immoral drugs and services — as a criminal financier might pay for the bank robber’s gun, mask, satchel and car.

It is no excuse to say that one is furnishing the money, and that what the robber does with the gun, etc., is his moral responsibility. The health insurance provider, like the robber’s financial backer, intends to advance the principal actor’s ends.

There is a second, distinct reason why institutions like ours object to covering contraception, abortion and sterilization in our health insurance policies. Our mission as a Catholic university is not just to teach students microeconomics and Spanish literature. We are concerned with their growth in grace as well as wisdom.

We teach them in class, in the sacraments, in the activities of student life, that these activities are immoral. Most, we hope, heed the lesson. To pay for these same activities in one office while we condemn them elsewhere will inevitably cause the virtuous to doubt the truth or the sincerity of our teaching.

Herein lies the fundamental wrongness of the health care mandate. This is the most obvious reason why Catholic institutions should decline to provide insurance for contraception, abortion and sterilization.

St. Vincent, St. Joseph claim CYO league titles

BY MICHELLE CASTLEMAN

FORT WAYNE — St. Vincent de Paul School in Fort Wayne took home two of the three Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) league titles on Feb. 25 claiming both the seventh-grade division and the eighth-grade large school division for the 2011-2012 season.

In the White League (seventh-grade) tournament, the No. 1 seeded Panthers finished their season with an impressive 23-1 season beating St. Charles for the championship.

Coach Courtney Paul, who along with her brother-in-law, coached the 12 young Panthers to an undefeated league finish, credited “defense and the boys’ camaraderie” as team strengths.

Stepping into the head position for a good part of the year and the final tournament, Paul was very pleased with her team’s overall season, and said, “They played hard every time they hit the floor.”

The same group also won the CYO championship as fifth graders and sixth graders thus far.

In the Gold League, the older Panthers downed St. Jude, 42-37, on a hard-fought battle played hard every time they hit the floor.

“St. Jude was very pleased with her team's performance in the tournament and the final tournament, Paul on the hand to assure his assembly.

Knights come up short in overtime

BY MICHELLE CASTLEMAN

FORT WAYNE — The teams and the fans were the same. But the sport and the outcome were different. Once again this school year, Fort Wayne Bishop Luers High School went head to head with Evansville Mater Dei — this time for a girls’ basketball state championship at the Hulman Center in Terre Haute.

The Knights were making a third straight appearance and vying for a record-breaking seventh title. Bishop Luers (21-5) sailed through the post-season, virtually untouched.

Denny Renier’s Knights entered the contest ranked No. 2 facing the No. 1 Wildcats (26-1) in a classic match-up. But 0.02 seconds was not enough time for the Class 2-A defending champs to catch and shoot for a victory in an evenly matched battle that saw the score tied seven times.

Just the eighth time in the history of the Indiana tournament, the championship was declared in overtime. Unfortunately for Bishop Luers, the Knights have come up short two of those times. However, it was an outstanding effort by Bishop Luers who trailed at the end of each of the first three quarters.

Led by Allison Butler’s string of buckets, the talented Knights made a 12-8 surge in the fourth period to force the extra minutes when the scoreboard read 49-49.

During the final time-out in regulation, the Knights attempted to set up an out-of bounds play under their own basket with 3.1 seconds but senior Brooke Ridley’s potentially winning shot was blocked by the Wildcats’ Tori Schickel. Ridley answered back with a clean swat of her own against Schickel in the overtime, but Mater Dei’s Maara Muensterman went on to hit the clincher.

Winning their first ever state title, Steve Guion’s Wildcats were sparked by deadly three-point shooting. Ashlynn Spahn finished with 15 points — all treys. The final outcome was 56-52.

“...Butler finished with 13 points for the Knights, while the runners-up were anchored, as they have been all season, by their 6-foot-1-inch senior center, Miracle Woods. Woods finished her high school career netting 17 points and pulling down 9 rebounds.

The Knights celebrated a red medal ceremony on Monday afternoon, March 5, at an all-school assembly.

Bishop John M. D’Arcy, archbishop emeritus, was on hand to assure his assembly.

The loyal fan continued with a prayer and affirmed his pride in Bishop Luers, “I have celebrated many championships with this school and have never been so proud of any team as this one.

Both the superintendent of Catholic Schools, Dr. Mark Myers, and assistant superintendent of Catholic Schools, Marsha Jordan, were in attendance. Dr. Myers offered his congratulations and thanked the team for representing the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend with such character.

“We are not called to be successful, we are called to be faithful. Thank you, for being faithful,” he concluded.

Coach Denny Renier was next to address the convocation. “In basketball, as in life, there are going to be losses. I hope that these girls, especially our seniors, can separate this extremely difficult time with their incredible accomplishments this season and throughout their careers,” he winked.

Next Renier honored his top pair with commemorative basketballs. Both Miracle Woods and Brooke Ridely scored over 1,000 points and a record-breaking number of rebounds during their four years of duty at Bishop Luers.

Woods tallied up 1,123 points and 678 rebounds, while Ridley netted 1,048 points and a shattering 780 boards. A solemn Ridley detailed she will always remember how her team stayed together, “We fought hard but came up short.”

Marian wins sectional

BY CHUCK FREEBY

MISHAWAKA — Marian basketball coach Rob Berger was justifiably pleased after the Knights won a boys’ basketball sectional. Saturday night though, Berger was on the sidelines guiding Marian to another title.

For the first time since 1969, Marian earned one of Indiana’s heralded crowns, downing John Glenn, 61-56, to win the Class 3-A sectional at Plymouth.

“When they won the last sectional in ’69, I was five months old,” noted Berger afterwards. “I’m 43 now, so this was a long time coming. We’re just happy to get out of here with a win.”

The Knights, ranked seventh in the Class 3-A poll, had all they could handle from John Glenn. Nathan Stegemiller hit six three-pointers in the first half for the Falcons, who trailed by just a 31-29 count at halftime.

With Notre Dame basketball coach Mike Brey watching from the stands, Marian star Demetrius Jackson caught fire in the second half. Jackson drilled three three-pointers in the stanza, including one at the buzzer that gave Marian a 48-41 lead.

Marian couldn’t pull away though. Freshman Jake Strong buried a pair of threes in the fourth quarter, as Glenn would pull within two with just over three minutes remaining.

Freshman Devin Cannady hit a key shot to pad the lead to three. After a missed three-pointer by John Glenn in the waning seconds, Marian’s Robert Mischler made a steal and calmly hit two free throws to provide the final margin.

“I take my hat off to John Glenn,” noted the Cornell-bound Mischler in the midst of the celebration. “They played a heckuva game. We have to play better defense next week.”

Jackson’s 22 points led the Knights’ attack. Senior Drew Hasler provided Marian with a solid game inside, scoring 14 points with 12 rebounds.

Marian returns to Plymouth Saturday for regional action. The 18-3 Knights face Gary Wallace in the semifinals at 10 a.m, followed by Andraen and Western. Winners return for the regional final at 8 p.m.

In appreciation...

In a recent issue of Today’s Catholic, a request was made for financial support to help cover production and mailing costs of the newspaper. If the request was a quiet one, the response was a roar of approval. Checks from all over the diocese came in and each signature represented more than a name. Each one was a statement of faith, of confidence, and a call for continued spiritual care and guidance.

Your assistance is deeply appreciated and your response demonstrates a willing involvement in our intention to deliver the clear voice of truth and leadership. So thank you again...

"Science Tests Faith"

This DVD presents a fascinating journey as the Catholic Church invited Science to test a modern-day Eucharistic Miracle. The astounding results support belief in the REAL PRESENCE OF JESUS in the Eucharist!
The Investigative Team found in the Consecrated Bleeding Host the presence of Flesh and Blood, Human DNA and Heart Muscle Tissue containing White Blood Cells that can only exist if fed by a living body.

SEE AND HEAR THE STORY UNFOLD...
WHAT SCIENCE DISCOVERS WILL CONFRONT THE MIND AND HEART OF EVERY PERSON.

The Investigative Team includes an exclusive interview with the Investigative Team!
(Recorded Live at Transfiguration Catholic Church, W. Milton, Ohio)
