SOUTH BEND — Thirty men and 25 women were on hand to celebrate Easter Mass and a liturgy at the St. Joseph County Jail on April 8, Easter Sunday. Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades was celebrant at the Mass, which was reported to be one of the first Masses celebrated for inmates.

Joining Bishop Rhoades in the prison chapel were Deacon Greg Gehred and University of Notre Dame master of divinity student Matt Flynn. Jeffrey Blue and Dan Lawson were instrumental in coordinating the Easter Mass.

“During this Easter Triduum, I have a chance to say Masses in some of the finest cathedrals, the basilica at Notre Dame and preached to full churches,” said Bishop Rhoades. “The flowers and music were beautiful as well, but I am just as honored to be here with you my brothers and sisters in Christ as we celebrate this Easter Mass.”

Bishop Rhoades said it was important for him to celebrate Mass for inmates at Easter. The bishop was doing what Jesus commanded in Matthew’s Gospel, “I was in prison and you visited me.”

During his homily, Bishop Rhoades spoke of the joy of the Easter season. “Easter is the celebration of new life and Jesus’ return to the living. In baptism, we begin to live a new life — the life of the risen Jesus.

“I know that being in jail and away from your families is a challenge,” he added. “We all have challenges. So today my brothers and sisters in Christ you have a chance of new life in the Resurrection. Let us thank God for life and know Jesus’ love. He is always at your side and will never forsake you.”

The 25th Annual Bishop’s Appeal (ABA) has exceeded all previous Bishop’s Appeals with pledges totaling $6,267,759.

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades said, “Once again, I am so very grateful to all who have given to the 25th Annual Bishop’s Appeal. The success of this year’s appeal is a witness to the faith of our people and their commitment to our Lord, Jesus Christ. Our diocese is filled with faith-filled people whose faith is manifest in their generosity and love for Christ and the Church.”

The ABA is a major source of funding for the ministries and services of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, enabling the diocese to do the work of Jesus Christ and reach across parish boundaries in the areas of evangelization, formation and education, family and pastoral life, and charity.

The ABA is successful because it begins in the parish and is oriented toward the parish. Each parish is assigned a goal according to an objective calculation based on parish offertory totals. All overage from the ABA is returned to the parish. A successful parish appeal means not only success for diocesan ministries and services, but also success for the parish. Strong parishes mean a strong diocese. Ultimately, all ministries and services funded by the ABA promote the fullness of pastoral and spiritual renewal of all parishes.

The pledge total for the 25th Annual Bishop’s Appeal exceeded last year’s totals by $29,312. “It is important that we have a strong Annual Bishop’s Appeal because parishes benefit greatly,” stated Harry Verhiley, secretariat for Stewardship and Development. “In our diocese parishes keep all funds raised above their parish goal. This year, we received pledges totaling $1,631,746 over our diocesan goal of $4,636,013. That means that the funds collected from the overage will be returned to the respective parishes to support parish ministries and services. A strong Bishop’s Appeal, means strong parishes. Once again, this is a true expression of good Christian stewardship.”

Inmates find hope in Easter liturgy
The Octave of Easter and the Sunday of Divine Mercy

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHOADES

The celebration of Our Lord’s Resurrection continues in the Church for eight days, called the Octave of Easter. Each day of the Octave is ranked as a Solemnity in the Church’s liturgical calendar, the highest ranking of liturgical feasts. At Masses during the Octave of Easter, as on Sundays, the Gloria, is recited or sung. And at the end of each Mass of the Octave, the double Alleluia is sung at the dismissal.

The Octave of a great feast has its roots in the Old Testament. There are many Jewish feasts that lasted for eight days, for example, the Feast of Passover and the Feast of Tabernacles. In the Catholic Church, we celebrate eight days of Christmas as well as eight days of Easter.

The Gospel readings at Masses during the Octave of Easter include passages from the Gospels that relate various appearances of the Risen Jesus. Reflecting on these Gospel texts is a wonderful way to prolong the celebration of Easter. Each day during the Octave, we proclaim in the Gospel Acclamation: “This is the day the Lord has made; let us be glad and rejoice in it.”

The Octave of Easter ends on the Second Sunday of Easter, the Sunday of Divine Mercy. In the Jubilee Year 2000, at the Mass in which he canonized the humble religious Sister Faustina Kowalska, Blessed John Paul II declared that from then on throughout the Church the Second Sunday of Easter would also be called the Sunday of Divine Mercy. This is entirely appropriate since, as Blessed John Paul II reminded us, “Divine Mercy is “the Easter gift that the Church receives from the risen Christ and offers to humanity…” Blessed John Paul II frequently reminded us that “mercy is an indispensable dimension of love.” He would refer to mercy as “love’s second name.” God’s love was revealed and actualized as mercy. We see this in the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus. And this is what we are called to live and actualize today in our lives and in the life of the Church. Our Lord said Saint Faustina three ways we are called to exercise mercy: “to our neighbors: by deed, by word, and by prayer. To love as Jesus loved includes practicing mercy towards others. Jesus taught us in the Beatitudes: Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy.”

At Mass on the Sunday of Divine Mercy, we will hear the Gospel account of Our Lord’s appearance to the apostles on the night of the first Easter Sunday. When He appeared to them, the Risen Jesus showed them His hands and His side. He showed them His glorious wounds. These wounds reveal the divine mercy. And then Our Lord imparted to His apostles His own power to forgive sins and entrusted to them and their successors the ministry of reconciliation when he said to them: Receive the Holy Spirit. Whose sins you forgive are forgiven them, and whose sins you retain are retained. In the sacrament of Reconciliation, we have a blessed opportunity to experience the divine mercy in a powerful way through the forgiveness of our sins. In this sacrament, we encounter our merciful Savior through the ministry of his priests.

Through Saint Faustina, our Lord promised an abundance of graces to the faithful who devoutly observe the Sunday of Divine Mercy in many of our parishes. There are various devotional practices revealed through Saint Faustina that can help us in our spiritual lives: the Chaplet of Divine Mercy, the image of Divine Mercy, and the simple prayer: Jesus, I trust in you. These devotions are not ends in themselves — they help us to put mercy into action in our lives, to live the Beatitudes: Blessed are the merciful. Showing mercy to our neighbors is a requirement of Divine Mercy devotion. As Our Lord said to Saint Faustina: I demand from you deeds of mercy which are to arise out of love for me. You are to show mercy to your neighbors always and everywhere. You must not shrink from this or try to excuse yourself from it.

At Mass on the Sunday of Divine Mercy, we will pray Psalm 118 (the responsorial psalm that day). This is one of a series of psalms that the Jewish people call the Hallel. They were songs of praise used on festivals that recalled God’s deliverance of His people from slavery in Egypt. Psalm 118 is one of thanksgiving to God for His steadfast love and mercy in rescuing his people from their enemies. In Psalm 118, we read: Let the house of Israel say, ‘His mercy endures forever.’ Let the house of Aaron say, ‘His mercy endures forever.’ Let those who fear the Lord say, ‘His mercy endures forever.’ Jesus himself would have prayed this psalm at the Last Supper. When we pray it, we remember Christ’s passion and death and we thank God for raising Jesus from the dead. It reminds us to trust in the Lord and His merciful love. It truly endures forever.

In the Divine Mercy image, we see two rays of light shining from the heart of Jesus, one red, the other white. The red represents Christ’s blood and the mystery of the Eucharist. The white represents the water of Baptism and the Gift of the Holy Spirit. From the Sacred Heart of Jesus, God’s merciful love shines forth and illumines the world.

As we celebrate the Sunday of Divine Mercy, let us “give thanks to the Lord for His mercy” (Psalm 118:1). And may the Lord help us to spread His mercy and to bear witness to it among all our brothers and sisters!
Christ’s resurrection changed the world, pope says at Easter

BY CINDY WOODEN

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Light and darkness, truth and lies, hope and despair are in a constant battle in the world, but with His death and resurrection Jesus conquered sin and death for all time, Pope Benedict XVI said on Easter.

“If Jesus is risen, then — and only then — has something truly new happened, something that changes the state of humanity and the world,” the pope told tens of thousands of people in St. Peter’s Square before giving his Easter blessing “urbi et orbi” (to the city and the world).

With the sun shining on the square — transformed into a garden with 42,000 flowering plants, shrubs and trees — Pope Benedict began the celebration of the morning Mass April 8 just 10 hours after having finished celebrating the three-hour long Easter vigil in St. Peter’s Basilica.

In his Easter message at the end of the morning Mass, the pope said every Christian can share the experience of Mary Magdalene, who was the first to encounter the risen Jesus on Easter morning.

The encounter “lets us experience all God’s goodness and truth,” he said. The risen Lord “free[s] us from evil not in a superficial and fleeting way, but sets us free radically, heals us completely and restores our dignity.”

The Resurrection means that Jesus belongs not just to the past, but is present today, giving hope and comfort to all those who suffer, the pope said.

Pope Benedict offered special prayers and encouragement to Christians persecuted for their faith and to the people of the Middle East, asking members of all religious and ethnic groups to work together for the common good and respect for human rights.

Particularly in war-torn places there will be an end to bloodshed and an immediate commitment to the path of respect, dialogue and reconciliation,” after months of violent battles between Syria’s government and opposition forces.

The pope also prayed for the people of Iraq, for Israelis and Palestinians, for those suffering famine and violence in the Horn of Africa, and for those suffering from conflict in Mali and in Sudan and South Sudan.

At the end of his message, he wished people a happy Easter in 65 languages, including Mongolian, Hebrew, Hindi, Chinese, Maori, Esperanto and Latin.

In English, he said: “May the grace and joy of the risen Christ be with you all.”

At the Easter vigil the night before, the pope welcomed eight with you all.”

During the prayer, the pope asked the crowd not to use flashes for their cameras during the procession because such lighting “would spoil the sense of the celebration.”

In English, the pope said: “Faith, then, which reveals God’s light to us, is the true enlightenment, enabling God’s light to us as a space for knowledge and truth, as a space for encounter and freedom, as a space for good and love.”

The light of Easter, he said, proclaims forever the fact that “life is stronger than death. Good is stronger than evil. Love is stronger than hate. Truth is stronger than lies.”

The world needs the light of Christ and the light of faith, because darkness always attempts to obscure people’s vision of what is good and evil and what the purpose of their life is, the pope said.

“Today we can illuminate our cities so brightly that the stars of the sky are no longer visible,” he said. “Is this not an image of the problems caused by our version of enlightenment?”

“With regard to material things, our knowledge and our technical accomplishments are legion,” he said. But when it comes to the more important matters, such as “the things of God and the question of good,” people can no longer see them.

“Faith, then, which reveals God’s light to us, is the true enlightenment, enabling God’s light to break into our world, opening our eyes to the true light,” he said.

Holy Cross to celebrate ordination

NOTRE DAME — The United States Province of Priests and Brothers will celebrate the ordination of their brother Holy Cross Deacon Matthew C. Kuczora to the priesthood at 2 p.m. at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart on the campus of the University of Notre Dame on Saturday, April 14.

Provincial Superior Holy Cross Father David T. Tyson will present Deacon Kuczora for the ordination to the priesthood. Deacon Kuczora has already committed to live his life in communion with the life and the work of the congregation. As a Holy Cross priest, he will focus his discipleship through a life of making God known, loved and served across all borders.

When Father Tyson received Deacon Kuczora’s final vows last August, he said in his homily, “Matt’s journey of discipleship led him to Holy Cross. He has found that the mission of Holy Cross is not one that belongs to us as individuals. Rather, our mission, which is the Lord’s, is a mission that we hold in common, and that is nurtured by our common prayer, our common life and our common effort, all of this with the Eucharist at the center.”

In anticipation of his Ordination to the priesthood, Deacon Kuczora said, “The diversity of ministry in Holy Cross and the joy with which its priests and brothers carry it out first drew me to begin this process. Now, years later, I stand on that firm foundation and feel God calling me to continue that work, making Him present for all people. As Father Jacques Dujarie, a driving force in the formation of Holy Cross, once said, ‘I am a priest to be father to the orphan, the consolation of the widow, the support of the poor and the friend of the suffering.’ I am overjoyed to celebrate a call fulfilled and a new life of service begun.”

Deacon Kuczora, the oldest of five children born to Paul and Pamela Kuczora, grew up in Marion, where he and his family were members of St. Paul Catholic Church. He attended Marion High School and graduated cum laude in 2005 from Notre Dame with a bachelor of business administration degree in accounting. He also received a master of divinity degree from Notre Dame in May 2011.

For the past year Deacon Kuczora has been assigned to serve at Nuestra Madre Santísima de la Luz Parish, a Holy Cross parish in Guadalupe, Nuevo Leon, Mexico. He has also been serving as director of postulants (a program to provide candidates with an introduction to the history, spirituality, charism, life and work of the Congregation of Holy Cross). After Ordination, Kuczora will return to Mexico.

Father Kuczora will celebrate his first Mass, a Mass of Thanksgiving, on Sunday, April 15, at 11:45 a.m. at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart.

Titanic: Looking back a century later

Three priests gave spiritual comfort to the anxious and doomed on April 14, 1912

BY MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

A century now has passed since the British luxury liner, S.S. Titanic, sank in mid-Atlantic after striking an iceberg on April 14, 1912. Other sea disasters have cost more lives, but none has retained the popular interest as much as the loss of what then was the largest and grandest ship afloat.

Another dimension to the story, almost never told, but rich in heroism and dedication, is about the three Catholic priests who were aboard. All three refused seats in lifeboats as the great ship was founding, refusing to leave the terrified passengers. Survivors also remember the priests’ heroism, and that the priests gave spiritual care to the passengers literally until the end. All three went down with the ship.

One was Lithuanian. One was Bavarian. One was English.

Passengers who survived the disaster remembered the three priests on the voyage. The priests celebrated Masses every day. (There would have been three separate Masses. Concelebration in the Roman Rite, aside from priestly Masses. Concelebration in the celebration of Masses every day. (There were six priests on the voyage. The priests continued to pray with those who asked for prayer.

The Bavarian priest was Benedictine Father Joseph Benedict Peruschitz. He was born on March 21, 1871, in Stassalch-Dingharting, in Bavaria. He entered the Benedictine community at Scheyern in 1894, and on April 28, 1895, he was ordained a priest.

In 1912, he was on his way to Rome and wanted to act as a priest. He offered a place in a lifeboat, but he too declined to leave the other passengers. One survivor recalled seeing him shortly before the sinking in a group of passengers leading them in the rosary. This priest also died with the ship. His body was never recovered, or if it was recovered, it was never identified.

Congregationalist minister’s son

The third priest aboard the famous ship was an Englishman, Father Thomas Roussel Davids Byles, who had a very interesting life.

Born on Feb. 26, 1870, in Yorkshire, he was the son of a Congregationalist minister. For a while, this minister served a congregation in Omaha, Neb., and his family was with him.

The Byles family was prominent. The priest’s uncle served as a Member of Parliament and was knighted. One of the priest’s sisters was a missionary in China.

Thomas Roussel Davids Byles himself went to Oxford, where he developed an interest in Roman Catholicism. He converted, and he also took a new name. His new name was “Roussel.” Interestingly, it was taken from the name of a Huguenot ancestor, Francois Roussel, who had fled to England from France in 1684, a year before King Louis XIV revoked the Edict of Nantes.

After converting, he went to Rome to study for the priesthood. He received a degree in theology from the Gregorian University, and on June 15, 1902, he was ordained to the priesthood.

After returning to England, he took a teaching position at St. Edmund’s College, in Ware, Hertfordshire, a Catholic school. From 1905 until his death, he served as pastor of the Catholic parish in Ongar, Essex.

Younger brother’s wedding

Father Byles’ younger brother, William Byles, also converted to Catholicism. This younger brother moved to the United States. In Brooklyn, he met a woman who eventually became his wife. The couple invited Father Byles to come from England to officiate at their wedding. It was scheduled for the weekend after the Titanic was to have landed in New York.

After sailing from Southampton on the Titanic, called at Cherbourg, in France, to receive additional passengers. Many of these passengers had come from Paris to attend a wedding. The couple invited Father Byles to attend their wedding. It was scheduled for the weekend after the Titanic was to have landed in New York.

When the ship was in port in Cherbourg, Father Byles wrote his housekeeper in Ongar. His letter, which was removed from the ship in Cherbourg and posted, survives. The letter is filled with descriptions of the ship’s comfort and size.

For example, the priest noted that although the Channel was very rough that day, the Titanic had made the crossing with little vibration or rolling. He also mentioned that two other priests were on board, a Bavarian Benedictine, and a secular priest from Lithuania.

So, evidently within hours of sailing from Southampton, the three priests had met each other.

On the morning of Sunday, April 14, the day that would end with the collision, Father Byles celebrated Mass twice. One Mass was for second-class passengers. Later, Father Byles celebrated Mass for third-class passengers. Most third-class passengers were immigrants to America. Many were Irish, and they would have understood English.

Many others, however, were from continental Europe. Father Byles preached his third class homily in English and French, and the Father Peruschitz followed with a sermon in German and Magyar.

When the collision with the iceberg came, Father Byles returned to third class. Many of its passengers, never before aboard a ship on the high seas, and such a huge ship at that, never amid such a crowd in such an emergency, and handicapped by no knowledge of English... in a strictly English-speaking environment as was the Titanic, were at the mercy of the circumstances. Survivors remembered that Father Byles pointed third-class passengers to exits from lower decks or into the boats. He heard confessions. He prayed with anxious passengers. Some reported that he too was offered a seat in a departing lifeboat, but he refused to leave the other passengers. He died with the ship.

His body was never recovered, or if it was recovered, it was never identified. His brother and his brother’s fiancée went on with their wedding, conducted of course by another priest. Newspapers of the day said that the couple left the church in their wedding finery, went home to change into mourning clothes, and returned to the church immediately for a Requiem Mass for Father Byles.

Later that year, they traveled to Europe. They toured the House of Commons where their guide was a young man destined to be very much a part of the British establishment as was the Titanic. None survived. The wife of one of these ministers also perished. Rescue ships eventually recovered many bodies from the scene. Many of these bodies were identified and sent to relatives for burial, either in the United States or Europe. The many unidentified bodies were taken to Halifax, Nova Scotia, where they were buried. Perhaps one or more of these priests were buried in Halifax among the unidentified. Newspapers and magazines of the time specifically reported the heroism of these priests. Small monuments exist, one to Father Peruschitz at the Scheyern abbey in Bavaria, the other to Father Byles at the parish church in Ongar, Essex. Several years ago, the American Benedictine Historical Review published an article about Father Peruschitz. However, given the considerable publicity still forthcoming on the disaster, little reference is made today to these three priests, all of whom literally gave their lives to provide spiritual comfort to the anxious and the doomed.

As Supreme Court deliberates, fans, foes of health reform law prepare

WASHINGTON (CNS) — As justices of the U.S. Supreme Court begin deliberations on four questions about the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, efforts will continue to reverse elements of the health reform law related to religious freedom and abortion that many find problematic. Both those who support the law and those who oppose it “should be preparing both for the possibility that the law will be invalidated and for the possibility that the law will be upheld,” said Richard W. Garnett, a professor of law and associate dean at the University of Notre Dame Law School. “I’m sure that people in the relevant industries are doing exactly that,” he told Catholic News Service. Noting that various parts of the law take effect over the next few years, unless the entire law is overturned, Garnett said compliance with all the elements of the 906-page law will “require some work.” Specific regulations for some aspects of the law — such as the Department of Health and Human Services’ contraceptive mandate — are still being worked out, he added. It’s possible that the Supreme Court’s decision has already been made, although the court is not likely to publicize its opinions until late June.

Proposal to pay for contraceptive cost ‘radically flawed,’ say bishops

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Even with a new federal proposal that third-party administrators pay the costs of contraceptives for religious employers who object to the health-care reform law, the public debate over the mandate continues. In a 32-page document that was published March 21 in the Federal Register, HHS has proposed new regulations for third-party administrators to work out, he added. It’s possible that the Supreme Court’s decision has already been made, although the court is not likely to publicize its opinions until late June.

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — During a Mass in which priests renew their promises of fidelity to Christ, Pope Benedict XVI firmly criticized dissent from Church teachings and disobedience of God’s will as illegitimate pathways toward reform and renewal. Surrounded by more than 1,600 priests, bishops and cardinals, the pope cautioned against calls for women’s ordination, saying such campaigns seemed more “a desperate push” to fulfill one’s own preferences rather than a sincere attempt to conform one’s life more closely to Christ. During the April 5 chrism Mass in St. Peter’s Basilica, which focuses on Holy Thursday as the day Jesus shared his priesthood with the apostles, the pope said he wanted to use the occasion to ask all priests, including himself, to meditate upon what their consecration really means. “Are you resolved to be more united with the Lord Jesus and more closely conformed to him,” which entails a renunciation of oneself and “of the self, which are living through difficult times.” Cardinal Daoud was born Basile Moussa Daoud in Meskene, Syria, Sept. 18, 1930, and had served as archbishop of Homs, one of the cities now being most deeply affected by violence as the government consolidated power in the region.

Ballot question on homosexual, transgender rights defeated in Anchorage

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (CNS) — Anchorage residents rejected a ballot initiative April 3 that sought to add “sexual orientation” and “transgender identity” to the list of protected legal categories in the city code. With nearly 98 percent of votes counted, the measure was failing 58 percent to 42 percent. More than 54,000 residents voted on the April 3 ballot — far more than city officials had expected. In fact, some precincts ran out of ballots and had to be restocked less than an hour before the polls closed. Before the vote, religious liberty advocates had expressed concern that Anchorage-area churches, faith-based organizations and business owners would be forced to violate deeply held religious beliefs regarding the issue of a 2006 City Council measure passing. Roger L. Schwartz was among the prominent religious leaders who urged residents to vote against the ballot measure. Following the election, he issued a public statement affirming the dignity of each person. “The people of the Anchorage Municipality may have spoken, and Proposition 5 appears to have been defeated,” he said. “Although I did not support Proposition 5, I fervently oppose all acts of unjust discrimination against any person or group. I pray that Anchorage will strive to be an even more tolerant city for all our citizens,” he added.

The basis for our social interaction must remain a deeply held respect for the dignity of each human person — a dignity that comes not from the state but from our Creator. I reiterate what I stated in my pastoral letter, the Catholic Church, No. 2358 states that people with homosexual tendencies “must be accepted with respect and compassion, and sensitivity. Every sign of unjust discrimination in their regard should be avoided.”

The initiative had been proposed by an Anchorage coalition of homosexual rights advocates, with the backing of several national gay rights organizations. According to state record, the group raised about $350,000 in support of the initiative — three times more money than opponents raised.

Young Catholic residents are the new face of natural family planning

ST. LOUIS (CNS) — It was a month before she had to decide her specialty in medical school, and Brooke Jemelka found herself at a crossroads. She had been contemplating on pediatrics during her studies at Texas A&M University, but by the end of her third year, she was starting to question whether she could live with her life. Then she delivered her first baby, “and my whole life changed,” said Jemelka, a native of Yoakum, Texas. As she was involved in pro-life activities, including sidewalk counseling, pro-life rallies and more. It was later that she realized that she was right the way for a future in obstetrics and gynecology. “I felt like there was no way I could not be doing God’s work,” she said in an interview with the St. Louis Review, newspaper of the Archdiocese of St. Louis. Today, Jemelka is one of six — yes, six — resident physicians in the OB/GYN Residency Program at Mercy Hospital in St. Louis who plan to specialize in natural family planning, or NFP, in their future practices. As residents currently are caring for uninsured and underinsured women who come to Mercy’s JFK Clinic. While doctors in St. Louis and around the nation who realize the natural benefits of fertility care are still considered the minority, all of these residents have encountered many women who want to know the truth about their fertility through the use of NFP.
Diocesan Black Catholics encouraged to participate in national congress in Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS — Black Catholics from all over the United States, Canada and the Caribbean will be gathering together in Indianapolis for a three-day celebration of Catholic and African-American faith, identity and culture. The National Black Catholic Congress, Congress XI will be held Thursday, July 19, through Saturday, July 21, at the JW Marriott Indianapolis.

Celebrating the 25th anniversary of the congress’s revival in 1987, the theme, “Faith Engaged: Empower. Equip. Evangelize,” will celebrate not only what has been accomplished from past congresses, but also look towards the future.

Immaculee Ilibagiza will be the featured keynote speaker. A survivor of the Rwandan genocide in 1994, Ilibagiza will be sharing her story of faith, hope and forgiveness.

Other features of the congress will be various panels, exhibits, cultural events and professional development. Mass will be celebrated each day, featuring dozens of celebrants from around the country, inspirational dance and superb music.

Youth and young adults will have their own programs and presentations, which have been designed by and for the next generation of Black Catholics.

Due to a generous grant from the Our Sunday Visitor Student Institute, the registration fee for 100 participants from the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend will be covered. Please note that additional costs, such as transportation, hotel, meals and parking will be the responsibility of the participants.

In order for the registration fee to be covered by the grant, participants must register with the diocese. Visit www.diocesefwsb.org/nbc for more information or to register.

Notre Dame to host colloquium ‘The Church and Islam’

NOTRE DAME — The Institute for Church Life at the University of Notre Dame will host the upcoming The Church and Islam: An International Colloquium at the University of Notre Dame event April 19-20. The colloquium is open to the public. Registration is required. To register, visit http://icl.nd.edu/icl-events/the-church-and-islam-conference.

The colloquium will feature a keynote presentation by Cardinal Jean-Louis Pierre Tauran, president of the Pontifical Council for Interreligious Dialogue. In his address, Cardinal Tauran will draw on his experience in interreligious dialogue in Rome and throughout the world, while discussing the current state of Muslim-Christian relations.

A panel discussion on Friday morning will feature both Muslim and Catholic scholars. Each scholar will offer an appreciative reflection on a major figure of the other tradition. Together they will present a method of appreciating holy figures of other religions.

Finally, on Friday afternoon, Egyptian Jesuit scholar Samir Khalil Samir will illustrate how Arab theologians have historically presented Christian teaching to their Muslim neighbors, and discuss how the experience of Arab Christians might be instructive for the encounter of the Church and Islam today.

The Church and Islam is an international colloquium dedicated to scholarly and religious reflections on the encounter of the Catholic Church with Islam. The colloquium is inspired by meaningful questions shared by many believers today:

• What is the condition of the Church and Christians in various parts of the Islamic world?
• How do Muslims view the Bible, and Christian teaching on Jesus, the Church and the Saints?
• How have Christians presented their faith to Muslims in response to Muslim critiques?
• The event is being organized by John C. Cavadini, McGrath-Cavadini Director of the Institute for Church Life, and Gabriel Said Reynolds, Tisch Family associate professor of Theology and director of undergraduate studies, Department of Theology, University of Notre Dame.

A complete schedule of events is available at http://icl.nd.edu/icl-events/the-church-and-islam-conference/schedule-speakers/. For those unable to attend in person, presentations will be recorded and made available online within a few days of the colloquium at http://icl.nd.edu.

Archbishop Brugués visits Holy Cross College

NOTRE DAME — The Secretary of the Congregation for Catholic Education, Archbishop Jean-Louis Brugués, paid a visit to the campus of Holy Cross College March 22. After being warmly greeted by the college president, Holy Cross Brother John Paige, Archbishop Brugués met with a variety of students, including a group who participated in the “Through Eyes of Faith Global Perspective Program,” directed by Professor Dianne Barlas.

Holy Cross College is one of 10 Catholic institutions of higher learning Archbishop Brugués visited during a whirlwind five-day tour of the Midwest this spring. At the invitation of the Association of Catholic Colleges and Universities, the archbishop came to the U.S. to learn firsthand the reality of Catholic higher education in this country. He was especially interested in learning about the global experiences of students at Holy Cross College.

He listened as Professor Barlas explained how valuable it is for students to have a special connection with the Congregation of Holy Cross network as they travel to Brazil, Ghana, India or Peru for a two-week cultural mission trip.

The archbishop imparted a blessing upon all those gathered at the Plei Center before departing.

On Oct. 10, 2007, Pope Benedict XVI named Archbishop Brugués the Secretary of the Congregation for Catholic Education in the Roman Curia and bestowed upon him the ex officio title of “archbishop.” Since Nov. 19, 2009 he has also been the analyst for the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

USF launches series with ‘Future of Nursing’ in new downtown center

FORT WAYNE — The University of Saint Francis will host the first public lecture in its downtown Fort Wayne USF Performing Arts Center and launch a free educational lecture series with “The Future of Nursing” on April 26 from 2-4 p.m. The USF Performing Arts Center is the former Scottish Rite Center at 431 W. Berry St. The university, Parkview Health, Lutheran Health Network and the Franciscan Alliance are co-sponsors.

USF BSN/Graduate Nursing Program Director Mindy Yoder will present on the future of nursing, including information provided by a recent report published by the Institute of Medicine. USF Professor of Nursing Dave Johnson will moderate a panel of chief nursing officers and other statewide healthcare professionals as they discuss the impact of the study’s findings on healthcare locally and across the state.

USF School of Health Sciences Simulation Lab Director Dawn Mabry will demonstrate the functions of METIman, a patient simulator that personifies the future of healthcare training and patient safety. Booths representing Parkview Health, Lutheran Health Network and the Franciscan Alliance will be staffed to connect healthcare employers with job candidates. Information on the University of Saint Francis nursing education program will also be available.

Nursing professionals may earn two hours of continuing education through attending the presentation. An application has been submitted to the Indiana State Nurses Association, accredited by the American Nurses Credentialing Center’s Commission on Accreditation, for approval of the continuing education hours.

Applications for this free education event are at futureofnursing.eventbrite.com by April 24.

Priests publicly renew their promises and manifest their communion with the bishop at the Chrism Mass celebrated April 3 at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne.

Celebrating the Sacred Paschal Triduum on Holy Thursday at St. Matthew Cathedral in South Bend, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades washes the feet of seminarians. The washing of the feet represents the service and charity of Christ who came "not to be served, but to serve." In the homily Bishop Rhoades said, "At the Last Supper, after taking off his outer garments, Jesus did what slaves did: he washed dirty feet. An incredibly humble action! By His Incarnation and His death on the cross, the Son of God humbled Himself. He loves us to the end. He washes our dirty feet by cleansing us in the purifying waters of Baptism and in the sacrament sometimes called the 'second Baptism,' the sacrament of Penance.”

Those gathered on Good Friday afternoon at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception came forward to show their reverence for the cross of Jesus, with a touch, a kiss or a bow.

Deacon Ben Muhlenkamp processes with the Easter Candle into the darkened Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception after the blessing of the fire in front of the church during the Easter Vigil. “We rejoice tonight because Jesus Christ is the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. He lives not only yesterday, but today and for eternity,” Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades said in his homily.

LIVE WAY OF THE CROSS IN GOSHEN

Emily Nicholas receives her first Holy Communion at the Easter Vigil Mass on April 7 at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne. In the homily, Bishop Rhoades said, “I pray that you will always treasure the great and amazing gift of the Holy Eucharist, which will help you and nourish you as you grow in your lives as Catholics. The most holy Body and Blood of the Lord fills us with every grace and heavenly blessing, as we say in the first Eucharistic prayer.”

JAIL

Steve Coyle who has been chaplain at the St. Joseph County facility for 10 years, said having the bishop present for the Easter Mass was a special event for inmates. “It’s a big morale booster,” he said. “It’s an uplifting experience for them. The fact that the bishop takes time off from a very busy schedule to come in and visit at Easter – they take that as a treat. It’s not an everyday occurrence.”

Coyle said that once the inmates enter prison, there is a feeling of abandonment from the outside world. To have the bishop celebrate Mass with them gives them hope. “When I came to this diocese I wrote to the bishop and asked where he needed me,” said Deacon Gehred. “The bishop told me the jail could use my help, and for the past few years, my team and I have been here helping the inmates with Bible studies and Masses. To have the bishop here today is a true blessing.”

The bishop celebrated Mass in English and also spoke in Spanish. He took the time to shake each inmate’s hand and offer his blessing. “I been here for a while,” said one inmate. “But it makes life a little easier to bear when holy people come to visit us because most of us don’t know how to pray.”

Following Mass, the inmates received Divine Mercy holy cards that were given to them directly by the bishop. “I think it is wonderful that the bishop came the jail to say Mass,” said Matt Flynn. “I am living at the Catholic Worker House here in South Bend for a while and I know the stigma attached to people who have been in or are in jail. The bishop’s presence here reminded the inmates that life’s a wonderful thing. It’s a great gift. Today we thank God for life.”

Your Shield for Life

After the 10:30 Mass on Passion Sunday at St. John the Baptist Parish in Fort Wayne celebrated by Bishop John M. D’Arcy, bishop emeritus, a surprise presentation was made. Dorothy Heiny, on behalf of the parish, presented a new crozier to Bishop D’Arcy, replacing one that was worn and broken. “We are blessed to have Bishop D’Arcy as a parishioner,” said St. John the Baptist pastor, Father Cyril Fernandes. “He offers Masses here and returns every stipend for the good of the parish.” Bishop D’Arcy blessed the crozier and told the congregation that he received his first crozier 37 years ago when he was ordained as a bishop, and another 10 years later when he became bishop of this diocese. “This new gift,” he said, “will remain at St. John the Baptist Parish.”

About 90 priests publicly renew their promises and manifest their communion with the bishop at the Chrism Mass celebrated April 2 at St. Matthew Cathedral in South Bend.

CROZIER GIFTED TO BISHOP D’ARCY
Notre Dame — The Office for Civic and Social Engagement (OCSE) at Saint Mary’s College has announced that Areli Bautista of Warsaw was the 2011 award recipient of the Sister Olivette Whalen, CSC. Award for General Service. The award, along with five other awards, was presented at a banquet held on Tuesday, April 10.

Bautista, a member of Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in Warsaw, has served the campus and northern Indiana with heart and passion. Her dedication to social justice issues has grown through her service to those in need and she inspires other students to take action.

Jan Pilarski, director of the Justice Education Program, suggested Bautista for the award. She said in her nomination letter, “Areli is a wonderful example of the call of St. Therese of Lisieux to be ‘the hands and feet of Jesus’ in the world today, taking small steps every day that work powerfully toward change, growth and conversion.”

Bautista is a communication studies and psychology major with a minor in justice education. During her time at Saint Mary’s, she has served the region as an advocate for social justice. She is a student representative on the Northern Indiana Hispanic Health Coalition (NIHHC) in Warsaw.

Bautista is also involved with the group Transforming Action Coalition (NIHHC) in Warsaw.

FORT WAYNE — The University of Saint Francis Office of Alumni Relations will host a class reunion with a luau theme on May 19 at the main Fort Wayne campus for graduates of class years 1967, 1972, 1977, 1982, 1987, 1992, 1997, 2002 and 2007. A range of activities will be offered. Check-in will be from 1-2 p.m. in the Pope John Paul II Center.

Tours of campus, Brookside and the new USF Performing Arts Center will be offered from 2-4 p.m. Downtown tours will depart via trolley from the Hutzell Center front entrance.

During that time, alumni can also participate in community service projects at the North Campus, either by tying fleece blankets for Project Linus, which serves traumatized children, or writing notes to active duty military personnel. They can also try their hands at operating a two-wheeled Segway personal transportation vehicle. Rides will take off from the Trinity Hall front entrance.

St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School, in Fort Wayne, fourth-grade students in Stephanie Boss and Anna Cunningham’s classes had their annual Pioneer Day on March 21. Small groups of fourth graders and parent volunteers visited a variety of stations throughout the school with activities that pioneer children would have been familiar with, including cross stitching, quilling by rolling up thin strips of paper, quilting and making talking sticks. Pioneer Day concluded with square dancing.

Can business lead to holiness?
Promoting virtue in the executive suite

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — In an effort to help businesses stay strong and healthy, and avoid the occupational hazards of greed, overwork and exploitation, the Vatican’s justice and peace council has released a handbook for business educators and entrepreneurs.

“Vocation of the Business Leader: A Reflection” is a 30-page primer from the Pontifical Council for Justice and Peace that spells out the risks of unethical economic strategies and the principles needed for running a sound, moral business.

It seeks to heal the so-called “divided life” of Catholic employers, who may practice their Christian values at home and church, but not in the company they manage or run.

“Dividing the demands of one’s faith from one’s work in business is a fundamental error which contributes to much of the damage done by businesses in our world today, including overwork to the detriment of family or spiritual life, an unhealthy attachment to power to the detriment of one’s own good, and the abuse of economic power in order to make even greater economic gains,” the booklet says.

The ethical principles of the Church’s social teaching are presented not only as hindrances to the smooth functioning of a market economy but as tools for its repair.

“Without guiding principles and virtuous leadership, businesses can be places in which expediency overcomes justice, power corrupts wisdom, technical instruments are detached from human dignity, and self-interest marginalizes the common good,” it says.

The reflection was issued with zero fanfare in Rome: just a simple communiqué in French noting it was available online through the Vatican’s website.

Apostles and successors empowered to forgive sins

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

Second Sunday of Easter
Jn 20:19-31

A s is so often the case in the Easter season, the Acts of the Apostles furnishes the Liturgy of the Word with its first reading.

Then, Acts traces, for some years, the progress of the infant Church and the plight of its first members. In the process, it provides a fascinating insight into the formation of the Church’s structure, as well as a powerful lesson in the basic beliefs that so postulates absolute loyalty and devotion from the early Christians whom Acts praises.

So, this weekend’s reading from Acts describes the early Church. Its members were “of one heart and one mind.” Love, and common adherence to the Lord, were central to their lives. The Apostles bore witness to the Resurrection of Jesus. They had been the Lord’s special followers and students, whom Jesus commissioned to continue the work of salvation. They literally had seen the Risen Lord.

The first Christians revered the Apostles. Love within the community, and care for others in the model of Jesus, were more than platitudes or ideals. The early Christians assisted the poor. Indeed, they sold their property or houses and donated the proceeds to assist the needy.

St. John’s First Epistle supplies the second reading. It defines the Christian, as this definition was understood in the first century.

Each believer fully gave self in love to God, through trust and faith in Jesus. As a result of this commitment, and of the Lord’s redeeming acts, each Christian was a child of God. This term meant much more than merely earthly creation. It meant eternal life.

Baptism in water symbolizes this absolute commitment.

The Gospel reading for this weekend is from St. John’s Gospel. It is a Resurrection Narrative, and it is a story with which most Christians are quite familiar. Recall the dismay among the followers of Jesus when they found the empty tomb? Where had the body of the Lord been taken?

This reading answers the question. The body of the Lord has been taken nowhere. Jesus lives! He is risen! The encounter with Thomas, a story so well-known for so long among Christians, affirms this fact.

Resurrection from the dead is stunning in itself, but Jesus further acts as God. He confers the very power of the Holy Spirit on the Apostles. He grants the same Apostles the authority of forgiving sins, a divine privilege as sins affront God. Finally, risen to a new and eternal life, no longer confined by earthly space and circumstance, Jesus passes through locked doors to meet the Apostles.

Greeting the Apostles with “Peace be with you,” Jesus makes clear that peace only is in God.

Reflection

This weekend, the Church calls its people to have faith and to rejoice. Resurrection, and Redemption in Jesus, are not memories to be commemorated, but living realities for us to experienced here and now.

It is a time to find consolation and strength in the fact that Jesus lives for us here and now. Thus, we observe Divine Mercy Sunday on this date. In and through Jesus, the Risen, the Son of God, divine mercy is with us, inviting us to repent and to come to God.

While sin and human limitation present difficulties in our progress toward God, the Lord left us the Apostles, and their successors in the Church, as our guides and the bearers of divine mercy, literally, as they stand ready, and empowered, to forgive our sins.

SAINT OF THE WEEK

Benedict Joseph Labre
1748-1783
April 16

Born in France the eldest of 15 children of a prosperous shopkeeper, Benedict tried unsuccessfully to join a religious order. He was rejected as too young, too delicate and too eccentric. After a pilgrimage on foot to Rome around 1770, he spent several years wandering among Western Europe’s Catholic shrines, begging as he went. From 1774 on, he stayed in Rome, spending his days praying in churches and his nights in the ruins of the Colosseum. The Roman people esteemed this mendicant pilgrim, whose health finally failed, as “a new St. Francis.”

HOPE IN THE MOURNING

In my experience with loss, I have found that even after the years of grief I charted following the death of my husband, Trent, that certain situations would unexpectedly draw grief to the surface of my heart. I had consciously created a new life for my girls where I felt confident and secure. I believed I had “let Trent go.”

But I soon discovered that no matter the timeline, I would revisit my grief when it was called for naturally.

“Without guiding principles and virtuous leadership, businesses can be places in which expediency overcomes justice, power corrupts wisdom, technical instruments are detached from human dignity, and self-interest marginalizes the common good,” it says.

But I soon discovered that no matter the timeline, I would revisit my grief when it was called for naturally. On one occasion I found myself bursting with pride while weeping with undiluted grief at all that was missing as my sweet daughter graduated from high school. Then uncharacteristic rage surprised me when I was faced with a complex car repair — this because Trent was always my go-to car man — and where was he now that I needed him? You get the picture.

With those situations came a distress over my feeling that I must not have grieved well or left him go if I was still revisiting my grief. Over time, however, I learned that our in psychologically-savvy culture, with its new age lexicon, we are sometimes led to believe that letting go means never having to revisit the issue again. By definition letting go requires a release of sorts. But while releasing pain is one of the goals of healing work, loss has its own agenda.

Unfortunately, that only becomes clear years after the convoluted road of grief has been navigated successfully, with understanding and compassion.

THE VATICAN LETTER

CAROL GLATZ

University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, Minn.

The real unveling came in Lyon, France, where about 2,000 people gathered for a world congress of Christian business leaders March 30 to April 1.

The council’s president, Cardinal Peter Turkson, presented the guidebook at the congress, saying the Church wanted to help business people excel in their field and their lives.

But I soon discovered that no matter the timeline, I would revisit my grief when it was called for naturally.

A friend and I recently determined that we would have to agree to disagree. Our issue of contention? The idea of letting go.

Frank had lost his wife four years ago after a long and arduous fight with cancer. They had been happily married for 29 years and he felt truly lost in the wake of her death. Now after three years of walking in the wilderness of grief, learning the lessons only loss can teach, Frank felt it was time to let his beloved wife, Julia, go.

I feel as if I’ve made a new life for myself. But I miss her and think of her still, though admittedly not as often. Why can’t I just let her go and get on with life?” he pleaded.

His hope, I suspect, was that as he did his grief work and found his new course in life without her by his side, her memory would be laid to rest, never to surface again.

I have learned that our in psychologically-savvy culture, with its new age lexicon, we are sometimes led to believe that letting go means never having to revisit the issue again. By definition letting go requires a release of sorts. But while releasing pain is one of the goals of healing work, loss has its own agenda.

Unfortunately, that only becomes clear years after the convoluted road of grief has been navigated successfully, with understanding and compassion.

Giving over
Easter changes everything

Christmas occupies such a large part of the Christian imagination that the absolute supremacy of Easter as the greatest of Christian feasts may get obscured at times. Cardinal Gianfranco Ravasi, an Italian biblical scholar, suggests that we might begin to appreciate how Easter changed everything — and gave the birth of Jesus at Christmas its significance — by reflecting on the story of Jesus purifying the Jerusalem Temple, at the beginning of John’s Gospel.

In this prophetic and symbolic act, Ravasi writes, Jesus draws a sharp contrast between a religion of superficiality and self-absorption and a pure faith, centered on his person. God can no longer be present in a temple that has ceased to be a place of encounter, the “meeting tent” of the ancient Hebrews; that temple, however magnificent or magnificently constructed, had become a place of superstition and self-interest. In cleansing the temple, Jesus is declaring that God is now present to his people in a new and perfect way and in a new “meeting tent”: the incarnate Son, “the Word … made flesh” (John 1:14). He is, the new temple, and to recognize that and live in this new mode of the divine Presence, one must “remember,” as St. John writes at the end of the temple-cleansing story (John 2:22).

And remember what? Remember Easter. Remember the Resurrection. Through the prism of that extraordinary event that changed both history and nature, everything comes into clearer focus. Only a mature, paschal faith — an Easter faith — can perceive who Jesus is, understand what Jesus taught, and grasp what Jesus has accomplished by his obedience to the Father. Only in the power of this paschal “memory,” Cardinal Ravasi concludes, can we recognize that Jesus is the Christ, the Holy One of God.

Easter faith — the faith that proclaims that “He rose again on the third day” — is not only a hallmark of Christian conviction among others, as St. Paul teaches in 1 Cor. 15, Easter faith is that conviction on which the entire edifice of Christianity is built. Without Easter, nothing makes sense and Jesus is a false prophet, even a maniac. With Easter, all that has been obscure about his life, his teaching, his works and his fate becomes radiantly clear: this Risen One is the “first-born among many brethren” (Rom 8:29); He is the new temple (Rev 21:22); and by embracing Him we enter the dwelling place of God among us (Rev 21:3).

In the Gospel readings of the Easter Octave, the Church annually remembers the utterly unprecedented nature of the paschal event, and how it exploded expectations of what God’s decisive action in history would be. No one gets it, at first; for what has happened bursts the previous limits of human understanding. The women at the empty tomb don’t understand, and neither do Peter and John. The disciples on the road to Emmaus do not understand until they encounter the Risen One in the Eucharist, the great gift of paschal life, offered by the new temple, the divine Presence, Himself.

At one encounter with the Risen Lord, the Eleven think they’re seeing a ghost; later, up along the Sea of Galilee, it takes awhile for Peter and John to recognize that “It is the Lord!” (Jn 21:7). These serial episodes of incomprehension, carefully recorded by the early Church, testify to the shattering character of Easter, which changed everything: the first disciples’ understanding of history, of life-beyond-death, of worship and its relationship to time (thus Sunday, the day of Easter, becomes the Sabbath of the New Covenant).

Easter also changed the first disciples’ understandings of themselves and their responsibilities. They were the privileged ones who must keep alive the memory of Easter: in their preaching, in their baptizing and breaking of bread, and ultimately in the new Scriptures they wrote. They were the ones who must take the Gospel of the Risen One to “all nations,” in the sure knowledge that He would be with them always (Mt 28:19-20). And they were to “be transformed” (Rom 12:2). So are we.

George Weigel is Distinguished Senior Fellow of the Ethics and Public Policy Center in Washington, D.C.

What was needed, the three professors concluded, was a simple, concise primer that compiled key teachings of business leaders and economists worldwide — from mom-and-pop store owners to corporate executives. The initial idea was to craft something short that would avoid the lofty language typical of Vatican documents, and which would be as practical as possible.

While the pastoral reflection is a “welcome approach,” the booklet lacks concrete examples or anecdotes showing how business people can readily apply the teaching and “live out their vocation in a world full of temptations and difficulties,” Jayabalan said.

A precise question-and-answer format akin to that of the Baltimore Catechism would have been more engaging, he said.

The justice and peace council says it is pointing the way and letting individuals craft the changes needed, one business at a time. In his talk Cardinal Turkson told Christian business leaders the old paradigm of profit at all costs was over; “You are our hope. You are our hope for a more human economy” that sees it’s more profitable “to foster the development of each man and of the whole man.”

theology. Far from portraying business as a boogeyman, the text acknowledges that “businesses produce many of the important conditions which contribute to the common good of the larger society” and support the well-being of individuals.

But when the common good and human dignity are neglected in an exclusive pursuit of profits and dividends, the authors warn, an otherwise noble vocation has been hijacked.

The handbook offers a renewed vision of what successful businesses are meant to be and do.

The booklet provides “business leaders — and future ones attending business schools — with both principles and tools for discovering the good and deliberately pursuing it,” helping them “grow in the virtue of charity as befits their vocation and their degree of influence” in society, said Cardinal Turkson.

Vesiere Jayabalan, director of Acton Institute’s Rome office, and a former official at the justice and peace council, praised the council’s decision not to dictate policy, but to take a more pastoral approach.

“It’s trying to encourage and inspire business people” and prompt them “to think about how to incorporate their faith more into what they do,” Jayabalan told Catholic News Service.

It shows that “it is possible to be a good Christian and a good businessman; they’re saying there’s no fundamental incompatibility,” he said.

The primer was the brainchild of three business educators: Robert Kennedy and Michael Naughton of the University of St. Thomas and Andre Habisch of the Catholic University of Eichstatt-Ingsstadt, Germany.

They were among the 40 Catholic business leaders and professors who attributed a February 2011 seminar at the Vatican looking at Pope Benedict XVI’s encyclical “Caritas in Veritate” (“Charity in Truth”) and how its framework for a new business ethic could be applied practically.

Papal pronouncements on social justice principles are not rare. But that rich teaching is scattered over the past 12 decades in myriad encyclicals starting with Pope Leo XIII’s “Rerum Novarum” (1891, on capital and labor), which insisted that development must include social progress as well as economic growth.

HOPE

I learned that as we mourn the loss of a dear one in a healthy and appropriate ways, that grief and the memory of our loved one finds their rightful place in our lives. The intensity of grief diminishes as our hearts heal, but our loss is forever. We will never forget them.

Fortunately we are designed to live life to its fullest and the pain of loss does soften over time as we mourn. But I don’t believe to live fully again after loss requires a complete release of our memories or our past. On the contrary, we come to believe complete release in grief is not possible. For me, as fully engaged in life as I am now, there will always be situations that occur even 22 years after his death when I will miss Trent, revisit my grief and readjust my worldview once again. And that’s okay.

I have recently become familiar with the wisdom of the principle of giving over. Shared grief is a lifted burden. I’ll always remember Trent, but my grief over his loss does not drive my life any longer. It only visits occasionally when there is a need. And I can live with that.

“Salmon Fishing in the Yemen” (CBS)

A fish-out-of-water story about a billionaire Arab sheik (Arne Waked) with a seemingly impossible dream: to transport the titular activity — his favorite Scottish pastime — to the Arabian Desert, and thereby build a peace-making bridge between East and West. Helping him in this folly is a glamorous consultant (Emily Blunt) and a skeptical fisheries expert (Ewan McGregor). Lives are transformed along with nature in director Lasse Hallstrom’s screen version of Paul Torday’s novel, a charming blend of comedy and drama that also promotes the value of religious faith. Brief war violence, partial nudity, implied pre-marital sex, occasional profanity and crude language. The Catholic News Service classification is A-III — adults. The Motion Picture Association rating is PG-13.

“We Have a Pope” (“Habemus Papam”) (Sundance Selects)

Gently satiric screwocomedy about a good-hearted but timid cardinal (Michel Piccoli) who reluctantly accepts his election as pope, but then, overcome by the prospectively burden of the office, balks before giving his first public blessing. As the world waits, an eminent but nonbelieving psychiatrist (Nanni Moretti) tries to treat the new pontiff, only to have his patient escape the Vatican and seek some form of guidance by wandering the streets of Rome and mingling with the Eternal City’s ordinary citizens. Moretti, who also directed and co-wrote, avoids any mean-spirited attack on the church, though he does dabble in such silliness as cardinals competing against each other in a volleyball tournament. He garners some amusement from the contrast between the shrink’s secular assumptions and the faith-based attitudes prevailing at the Holy See as well from a range of human foibles. But by the time his protagonist goes on the lam, Moretti has clearly run out of inspiration. In Italian. Subtitles. Much ecclesiastical themed humor that some may find distasteful, at least one use of the F-word, a fleeting reference to sexuality. The Catholic News Service classification is L. Not rated by the Motion Picture Association of America.

Decatur parish digs deep for new parish hall

BY DYLAN MALONE

DECATUR — St. Mary of the Assumption Catholic Church is adding on — still. The process, that started as an idea in 2003, has become more than a reality for the parish now nearly a decade later.

In 2004, as part of the “Legacy of Faith” capital campaign to raise money for the entire Catholic Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, St. Mary’s asked the congregation to donate a little more than usual for the cause in an attempt to raise enough money to start a building project. The goals of the projects: a new gymnasium and a parish hall.

The gymnasium would be an undertaking before the hall simply because it was “easier to take on a stand-alone building,” according to Tony Isch, who has served on St. Mary’s finance committee for 20 years and has been the expansion’s chairman since 2009.

Other members on the committee include Terry Baker, Tim Barkey, Stephanie Bude, Judy Converset, Al Downing, Suzan Downey, Bill Fullenkamp, St. Joseph School Principal Carla Hormann, Ann Isch, Gwen Mies, Wayne Porter, athletic director Butney Schultz, and the current pastor at St. Mary’s, Father David Voors.

Former members of the committee include Ralph Biggs, Art Ehinger, Tom Katen, Les Shultz and Sue Zurcher. St. Mary’s development directors previously involved in the long-range planning and Building on our progress include Ralph Biggs, Art Ehinger, Tom Katen, Les Shultz and Sue Zurcher.
