Recalling a love for the poor at Chrism Masses

BY TIM JOHNSON

FORT WAYNE — Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades ushered in Holy Week with a Mass Palm Sunday at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception and celebration of Chrism Masses in both South Bend and Fort Wayne.

At the Chrism Mass, celebrated Monday in South Bend, and Tuesday in Fort Wayne, the bishop spoke of the renewed hope, in the last few weeks, for the New Evangelization.

“Our new Holy Father chose the name of the poor and humble saint of Assisi, St. Francis, the one called by Jesus to rebuild His Church,” Bishop Rhoades said. “In these past 11 or 12 days, we have all learned of Pope Francis’ simplicity of life as archbishop of Buenos Aires, as well as of his love and compassion for the poor of his former archdiocese.”

Thinking of the poor, the pope thought of Francis of Assisi, the saint of poverty and peace. Pope Francis told journalists that he thought: “How I would like a Church which is poor and for the poor!” And so he chose the name “Francis.”

Bishop Rhoades noted, “The Lord, through Pope Francis, is calling us to follow Christ on the path of the Gospel, to be detached from earthly goods and generous in sharing these goods with others.”

Speaking of the renewed hope for the Church, a renewed hope for the New Evangelization, Bishop Rhoades said, “But we must keep in mind that any genuine renewal requires conversion, as happened...
The Truth of Our Baptism

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHoades

Are you unaware that we who were baptized into Christ Jesus were baptized into his death? We were indeed buried with him through baptism into death, so that just as Christ was raised from the dead by the glory of the Father, we too might live in newness of life (Romans 6:3-4).

These words of Saint Paul are proclaimed in the Epistle at the Easter Vigil, the Mass during which the “elect” (catechumens) receive the sacrament of Baptism. They remind us that the Resurrection of Jesus is not just a past event. In the sacrament of Baptism, the resurrection is actualized in our lives as we are reborn of water and the Spirit. This new life is sustained by the sacrament of Confirmation and nourished by the Holy Eucharist. We rejoice with all the people of our diocese and throughout the world who receive the sacraments of initiation this Easter.

Most of us received the sacrament of Baptism as infants. Every year, however, at Easter, we are called to make the gift of Baptism our own, to enter more and more radically into the truth of our Baptism. We renew our baptismal promises. We re-affirm our Christian identity as members of Christ and temples of the Holy Spirit. In renewing our baptismal promises, we renew our commitment to follow Christ, to build our lives on him and for him, and to live his Gospel.

At Easter, we celebrate that something truly new has happened in human history, an event that has changed the state of humanity and the world. Jesus is risen from the dead! And so, we can put our trust in his teachings. Even more, we can put our trust in Jesus himself, in his person. He is not a distant figure from the past. He is present today. He is alive. He is always with us, with his light and his love. The great explosion of light that is the Resurrection reveals the definitive victory of love, joy, and life over evil, suffering, and death.

The Resurrection of Jesus is the crowning truth of our faith in Christ, a faith believed and lived as the central truth by the first Christian community; handed on as fundamental by Tradition; established by the documents of the New Testament; and preached as an essential part of the Paschal mystery along with the cross’ (CCC 638).

In this Year of Faith, we have been invited to rediscover and study the fundamental content of the faith as contained in the Catechism of the Catholic Church. #638 to #658 of the Catechism treat the Resurrection of Jesus as an historical and transcendent event and a work of the Holy Trinity. It explains the meaning and saving significance of the Resurrection. I recommend this section for your reading during the season of Easter. Or, if you want to delve even more into the theology of the Resurrection, I recommend the rich reflections of our Pope Emeritus, Benedict XVI, in chapter 9 of Jesus of Nazareth – Part Two.

Of course, the Year of Faith is not only about study of the content of our faith, but also living and practicing that faith each day. Believing in the Resurrection of Jesus, we cannot keep the joy of our faith to ourselves. We must pass it on to others. This is the task of evangelization. It was their encounter with the Risen Lord, and the reception of the Holy Spirit, that inspired the first disciples to go forth on mission to bring Christ to others. This is the perennial mission of the Church. It is our mission today. Each of us has a contribution to make to the new evangelization by witnessing to the Gospel with joy: “May the Risen Christ be with you! Happy Easter!”
Pope on Palm Sunday: Christ’s passion leads to joy

BY FRANCIS X ROCCA

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope Francis celebrated his first Palm Sunday Mass as pope March 24, telling an overflow crowd in St. Peter’s Square that Christ’s death on the cross is a source of eternal consolation and joy.

“A Christian can never be sad. Never give way to discouragement,” the pope said in his homily, assuring listeners that with Jesus, “We are never alone, even at difficult moments, even at difficult moments when our life’s journey comes up against problems and obstacles that seem insurmountable, and there are so many of them.”

As he has done with striking frequency since his election March 13, Pope Francis warned against the action of the devil, who he said comes to discourage believers in times of trouble, “often disguised as an angel who seductively tells us his word. Do not listen to him.”

Recalling Jesus’ triumphant arrival in Jerusalem, acclaimed as a king only days before His crucifixion, the pope stressed the other-worldly nature of Christ’s reign.

“Jesus does not enter the Holy City to receive the honors reserved to earthly kings, to the powerful, to rulers; He enters to be scourged, insulted and abused,” Pope Francis said.

“He is the sovereign King of the world who loves us children, ‘No shroud has pock- ets.’”

“Jesus takes upon Himself the sin of greed, adding that money is something ‘no one can bring with him. My grandmother would say to us children, ‘No shroud has pockets.’”

Noting that “for 28 years Palm Sunday has been World Youth Day,” the pope told young people in the congregation that “you bring us the joy of faith, and you tell us that we must live the faith with a young heart, always, even at the age of 70 or 80.”

Pope Francis confirmed that he would attend the July 2013 World Youth Day celebrations in Rio de Janeiro, saying, “I will see you in that great city in Brazil.” Though the announcement was widely expected, it drew applause from the crowd in the square and the avenue beyond.

Before the Mass, young people carrying woven palm fronds led a procession that included bishops, cardinals and Pope Francis in the popemobile. They processed to the ancient Egyptian obelisk in the center of the square, where the pope blessed palm and olive branches held up by members of the congregation.

Pope Francis meets retired Pope Benedict, says ‘we’re brothers’

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy (CNS) — With a warm embrace, a helping hand, shared prayer, a long discussion and lunch together, Pope Francis spent several hours with retired Pope Benedict XVI March 23 at the papal summer villa.

Pope Francis gave Pope Benedict an icon of Mary and Jesus that the Russian Orthodox delegation to his inauguration had given him just a few days earlier. “They told me this was Our Lady of Humility. If I may say, I thought of you,” Pope Francis said. Pope Benedict, obviously moved, grasped his successor’s hand.

Pope Francis told Pope Benedict, “You gave us so many examples of humility and tender- ness.”

The meeting took place in Castel Gandolfo, where Pope Benedict is staying while a Vatican monastery is being remodeled as a residence for him.

The retired pope moved with much greater difficulty than he did a month ago. Walking with a cane, he took smaller and slower steps.

When the two went into the chapel of the papal villa to pray, Pope Benedict indicated that Pope Francis should take the front pew, but Pope Francis, reaching out to help his predecessor walk, said, “We’re brothers,” and they knelt side by side.

Traveling by helicopter from the Vatican, Pope Francis arrived shortly after noon. While the two have spoken by telephone at least twice, this was their first meet- ing since Pope Francis’ March 13 election.

Pope Benedict, wearing a quilted white jacket over a simple white cassock — without a short cape or white sash — was driven to the garden heliport to greet his successor.

Jesuit Father Federico Lombardi, Vatican spokesman, said the two rode in the same car to the villa. Pope Francis sat on WASHINGTON (CNS) — New proposed regulations governing the contraceptive mandate under the Affordable Care Act continue to violate basic principles of religious freedom, said the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

In comments filed March 20 with the Department of Health and Human Services, the USCCB raised a series of concerns, among them being that the new proposals keep in place “an unjust and unlawful mandate” regarding the provision of contraceptive and other pregnancy services and that the rules provide no exemption, or accommodation, for “most stakeholders in the health insurance process, such as individual employees and for-profit employers,” who are morally opposed to such coverage.

Other objections raised in the comments include:

• An “unreasonable and unlawfully narrow” exemption for some nonprofit religious organizations, primarily houses of worship.

• Limited accommodation for religious employers that continues to require those employers falling outside of the government’s definition to “fund or facilitate objectionable coverage.”

The comments state that the concerns being raised are the same as those addressed when the rules governing the Affordable Care Act were first proposed in 2011.

The 24-page statement was filed during the 60-day comment period established by the Health and Human Services after it introduced the new proposed rules Feb. 1. The deadline for comments is April 8.

The comments were filed on behalf of the USCCB by Anthony R. Picarello, associate general secretary and general counsel, and Michael F. Moses, associate general counsel.

The rules are expected to be finalized this summer. Institutions are required to provide coverage by August.

The USCCB position is built around a series of legal arguments stemming largely from decisions in earlier court cases.

The document said that the contraceptive mandate remains unchanged and presented the USCCB’s position again that it should be rescinded.

“Contraceptives and sterilization procedures, unlike other mandated ‘preventive services,’ do not ‘prevent disease,’ the document said. “Instead they disrupt the healthy functioning of the human reproductive system.”

The USCCB argued that the contraceptive mandate requires the coverage of abortifacients drugs and devices in violation of various aspects of the Affordable Care Act dealing with abortion coverage and the non-pre-emption of state law as well as other laws. Such concerns are separate from religious freedom issues, the comments said.

The document also contended the new proposed rules offer no exemptions, or accommodation, for “the overwhelming majority” of individuals and institutions who object to contraceptive coverage on religious or moral grounds.

Other objections raised in the comments include:

• “An unreasonable and unlawfully narrow” exemption for some nonprofit religious organizations, primarily houses of worship.

• Limited accommodation for religious employers that continues to require those employers falling outside of the government’s definition to “fund or facilitate objectionable coverage.”

Other objections raised in the comments include:

• The new proposed rules “improved slightly” in one area, but were “worsened” in another.

The first version of proposed rules exempted only religious organizations whose main purpose is the inculcation of faith and who employ and serve members of the faith. A later accommodation said the contraceptive mandate could be met by non-exempt organizations through third-party insurers.

Under the new proposed rules for exempt religious organizations HHS eliminated standards governing inculcation of the faith and who the organization serves, which the USCCB welcomed.

The USCCB raised concerns, however, that the new proposed rules exclude from the definition of religious employer various organizations that “unambiguously are religious” and undeniably ‘employ’ people, such as Catholic hospitals, charities and schools.

“The government’s proposed definition of religious employer still reduces religious freedom to freedom of worship by limiting the exemption almost exclusively to houses of worship,” the USCCB argued.

The document also questioned the accommodation to nonprofit religious organizations in the rules that fall outside the definition of religious employer, saying the accommodation is based on a number of “questionable factual assumptions.”

Other objections raised in the comments include:

• The USCCB also maintained that the contraceptive mandate “continues to represent an unprecedented (and now sustained) violation of religious liberty by the federal government.”

• “As applied to individuals and organizations with a religious objection to contraceptive coverage, the mandate violates the First Amendment, the Religious Freedom Restoration Act and the Administrative Procedure Act.”

Redeemer Radio makes reasonable, good faith efforts to recruit and hire applicants without regard to race, color, national origin or gender, among those who are qualified for employment based on their religious belief or affiliation.

As a religious broadcaster, Fort Wayne Catholic Radio Group (Redeemer Radio) has established a religious qualification for all employee positions. In accordance with all FCC rules and EEO Program compliance measures, the religious belief or affiliation of the employee is considered a term and condition of employment as well as other aspects of the Affordable Care Act and devices in violation of various aspects of the Affordable Care Act dealing with abortion coverage and the non-pre-emption of state law as well as other laws. INDIANAPOLIS — Should people who are convicted of a crime be marked for life even if they have served their sentence and reformed their lives? State Rep. Jud McMillin, (R-Brookfield) author of a bill to address the problem, believes some individuals deserve a second chance at living a productive life. And Church officials agree.

McMillin’s bill, House Bill 1492, as proposed would allow expungement of some misdemeanor and nonviolent felony records after a 10 year period of no criminal activity.

The proposal passed the House 82-17. During a March 20, meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee, panel members heard testimony, but held the bill over another week to consider additional amendments.

The bill’s author said, “What the bill would allow is for certain felons, excluding sexual offenses and felonies where people are harmed, to be expunged 10 years after the date of conviction. It does provide for prosecutors to reopen an expunged record for purposes of subsequent convictions.”

McMillin said the bill was “the final step” in recognizing that it might not be the best public policy to label people as felons for life, and not give them the opportunity to become productive members of society. “Especially when they have demonstrated that they have cleaned-up their act and are ready to get back to being tax paying members of society,” said McMillin.

State Rep. Eric Turner, R-Cicero, said he worked for eight years with Rep. Bill Crawford to get a bill passed to seal the records of persons whom committed Class D felonies, or misdemeanor, nonssexual and non-violent offenders, and who had no further convictions. Eight years after they had completed all their sentencing, their records could be sealed.

Turner said he’s had “countless individuals” contact him and Rep. Crawford to say “thank you”, for giving them the opportunity to provide for their families. “These crimes should not be a life time sentence. We do have crimes that should be for life, but not these,” said Turner. “These individuals have made a determined effort to put what’s in the past, in the past, and provide for their families. I don’t think we can ask any more of them.”

After their visit to the chapel, the two spent 45 minutes talking alone, Father Lombardi said. He would not release details of the conversation and would not explain what was in the large box and two large envelopes seen on the table between the two.

The two had lunch together at Castel Gandolfo, then reportedly went for a short walk. Pope Francis returned to the Vatican about two-and-a-half hours after he arrived.

Hundreds of people who were gathered in the main square outside the papal villa were left disappointed. They had hoped the two popes — one reigning, one emeritus — would come to the balcony together.

Father Lombardi told reporters, “Remember that the retired pope had already expressed his unconditional reverence and obedience to his successor at his farewell meeting with the cardinals, Feb. 28, and certainly in this meeting — which was a moment of profound and elevated communion — he will have had the opportunity to renew this act of reverence and obedience to his successor.”

He also said, “Certainly Pope Francis renewed his gratitude and that of the whole Church for Pope Benedict’s ministry during his pontificate.”

Religious liberty threats: no longer a unifying idea of what they are

WASHINGTON (CNS) — In what now seem to have been the heady days of the 1990s, Baptists, Catholics, the American Civil Liberties Union and People for the American Way were among the members of a philosophically diverse coalition that stood together in pursuit of a federal law protecting the free exercise of religion. Today, among those same organizations, there may be as many ideas about what the chief threats are to religious liberty as there once were members of the group that produced a single-minded legislative focus.

“When the same words are used to describe conflicting or competing terms,” for how to apply the religious freedom protections of the First Amendment, “something is wrong,” said the Rev. Welton Gaddy, a Baptist minister who heads the Interfaith Alliance. He moderated the first panel of a March 17 conference, “Defining Religious Freedom in America,” with the observation that the “free exercise coalition is no more, amid controversies over many subjects.” As Wendy Kaminer, a civil liberties attorney and correspondent at theatlantic.com, noted during the conference sponsored by the Freedom Forum and Moment magazine, “it’s very easy to find consensus in general definitions” of religious freedom. “It becomes a benchmarking exercise,” agreed Mark Chopko, a partner and chair of the nonprofit and religious institutions practice group at Stradley Ronon, Stevens & Young. “We all agree on what the principles are.” But when it comes to practical application to contemporary situations, the consensus falls apart, panelists agreed.

Lawyer says judge’s order affects religious liberty of all Missourians

ST. LOUIS (CNS) — A federal judge’s decision to strike down portions of a Missouri law protecting conscience rights of those who object to coverage of contraceptives and abortifacients in their health plans attacks the conscience rights and religious liberty of all Missouri citizens, said the state’s Catholic conference. Judge Audrey Fleissig of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Missouri in St. Louis issued her order March 14. The Missouri Catholic Conference, public policy arm of the state’s bishops, expressed dismay over her decision. Tyler McClay, the conference’s general counsel, said no one should be forced to pay for contraceptives, abortion drugs or sterilization procedures in their health plans. Elsewhere in the country, a federal judge in Michigan granted a preliminary injunction against enforcement of the federal contraceptive mandate in a suit brought against the Department of Health and Human Services by Tom Monaghan, founder and former owner of Domino’s Pizza, and his property management company. In Minnesota, the state Catholic conference filed a friend-of-court brief with the appeals court in support of Catholic employers who are challenging the HHS mandate and “to stand in solidarity with (the) appellants, who are bravely contesting the legality of an unwise and unjust policy.

North Dakota lawmakers OK bill defining life starts at conception

BISMARCK, N.D. (CNS) — A personhood bill that defines life as starting at conception passed the North Dakota House March 22 in a 57-35 vote. The state Senate in February approved the measure to outlaw abortion in the state. The House’s action now sends it to the desk of Gov. Jack Dalrymple for his signature. The Associated Press said he has not indicated whether he will sign it. Passage of the personhood bill follows the Senate’s passage March 15 of a bill to ban abortions for the purpose of sex selection or genetic abnormality and another bill to ban abortion after the detection of a fetal heartbeat, which could be as early as six weeks. Those bills already were approved by the House and also have been sent to Dalrymple. In a statement about the fetal heartbeat and sex-selection bills, the North Dakota Catholic Conference urged the governor to sign the measures. By late in the day March 22, the conference had not yet issued a statement on the personhood bill. After a failed attempt to strip the genetic abnormality portion from H.B. 1305, the Senate passed the bill 27-15, H.B. 1456, the fetal heartbeat bill, passed, 26-17, with no debate. The bill to prohibit abortions when the heartbeat of the unborn child is detected “does raise some new legal questions,” but the questions are without merit, said Christopher T. Dodson, executive director of the Catholic conference. “Currently, the U.S. Supreme Court only allows states to protect unborn life after the point of viability, which is when an unborn child can survive outside the womb,” he said in March 12 testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Pope Francis to diplomats: Moral relativism endangers peace

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Moral relativism “endangers the coexistence of peoples,” Pope Francis told diplomats March 22, and said a common ethics based on human nature is an indispensable criterion for world peace. The pope made his remarks to the Vatican diplomatic corps in the Apostolic Palace’s Sala Regia, the vast “royal hall” where popes traditionally received Catholic monarchs. Recalling the love of the poor practiced by his namesake, St. Francis of Assisi, the pope lamented both material poverty and the “spiritual poverty of our time, which afflicts the so-called richer countries particularly severely. It is what my much-loved predecessor, Benedict XVI, called the ‘dictatorship of relativism,’ which makes everyone his own criterion and endangers the coexistence of peoples. Francis of Assisi tells us we should work to build peace.” Pope Francis said. “But there is no peace without truth! There cannot be true peace if everyone is his own criterion, if everyone can always claim exclusivity in his own rights, with the same time caring for the good of others, of everyone, on the basis of the nature that unites every human being on this earth.” The pope paid tribute the Church’s charitable and social services around the world, and acknowl- edged his particular responsibility for peacemaking, noting that his title of pontiff means a “builder of bridges with God and between people.”
University of Notre Dame and Holy Cross College unite to observe World Down Syndrome Day

NOTRE DAME — The communities of the University of Notre Dame and Holy Cross College united on Thursday, March 21, in celebration of World Down Syndrome Day. World Down Syndrome Day is annually observed on March 21 to symbolize a third copy of the 21st chromosome found in people with Down syndrome. The day publicly celebrates the courage, competence and inclusion of people with Down syndrome.

To commemorate World Down Syndrome Day, a Mass was celebrated at the Basilica of the Sacred Heart on the campus of Notre Dame, followed by a reception in the atrium of Vincent Hall, located on the campus of Holy Cross.

“It’s an honor and delight to help offer hospitality to the wonderful families that will experience World Down Syndrome Day with us,” said Joyce Johnstone, Ph.D., the Ryan Director of Educational Outreach, Notre Dame’s Institute for Educational Initiatives and one of the leaders in this second annual partnership among faculty and students.

“Along with Holy Cross College, we at Notre Dame look forward to joining these families in prayer and in a celebration of solidarity and love.”

“World Down Syndrome Day is a reminder of the value of life— all life,” Tina Holland, Ph.D., executive vice president/provost at Holy Cross College stated. “Let us be mindful of the courage, contributions and significant voice of those with Down syndrome as we unite on World Down Syndrome Day in celebration, recognition and to foster global awareness.”

The sponsorship of this event is provided by the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE) and the Jacques Maritain Center.

The March 21 marks the eighth anniversary of World Down Syndrome Day, however it has the distinction of being the first time World Down Syndrome Day that was officially observed by the United Nations.

Wall build to be rocked by Holy Cross College

NOTRE DAME — Habitat for Humanity has announced the launching of its sixth Rock the House Build. In partnership with Habitat for Humanity of St. Joseph County, Rock the House Student Build is an annual student-led, student-built house.

Since 2008, nearly 1,000 college and high school students have raised $210,000, and constructed five new homes in St. Joseph County. On March 23, Holy Cross College student-volunteers built the walls for the entire Rock the House home, which is located at 802 7th St., in Mishawaka.

Notre Dame, Catholic Charities USA join forces to reduce poverty

NOTRE DAME — An innovative partnership between the University of Notre Dame, the nation’s preeminent Catholic university, and Catholic Charities USA, one of this country’s most influential social service networks, was announced recently. The formation of the collaboration, called the Alliance, was driven by the two institutions’ common belief that helping those in need is a core element of the Catholic faith.

“I’m so proud of Notre Dame’s partnership with Catholic Charities USA,” said Holy Cross Father John J. Jenkins, president of the University of Notre Dame. “By bringing together one of our nation’s preeminent social service networks with a great Catholic university, we are able to live out our mission of putting learning in service to justice by addressing the root causes of poverty in our country.”

Taking a multifaceted approach, the Alliance will strive to reduce poverty in America through rigorous academic research and evaluation of anti-poverty programs, a focus on methods to increase entrepreneurialship in implementation of poverty relief services and efforts to unite skilled workers from the academic and service provider arenas to ensure enhanced quality of service delivery. In addition, the Alliance will seek to inform, through advocacy and educational outreach, the development of policies that will change the way poverty issues are addressed in the United States.

A key component of the Alliance is Notre Dame’s Lab for Economic Opportunities (LEO), the first domestic poverty lab in the United States. Leveraging the experience of academic experts with a national network of social service providers, LEO will offer researchers and practitioners an opportunity to come together, research and implement scalable best practices across the Catholic Charities network and the social service sector at large.

“We have a moral commitment to not only serve the poor, but to determine the most effective and efficient models for doing so,” said Father Larry Snyder, president of Catholic Charities USA. “Through programs like LEO, the alliance will provide guidance to not only social service providers across the country regarding best practices for poverty relief programs, but will allow us to educate our nation’s policymakers on outcomes of the research enabling them to, in time, alter the way we address poverty as a nation.”

The four core focus areas of the Alliance include:

• Academic: Generating solutions through research by the university’s Lab for Economic Development.

• Business: Applying the problem-solving acumen of the university’s Mendoza College of Business to the social service field.

• Church in Action: Utilizing the university’s Career Center, Alumni Association and Center for Social Concerns to connect its vast network of talent and experience to CCUSA’s local entities across the country.

Policy Development and Advocacy: Leading initiatives that will inform the development of poverty-reduction solutions and policies through advocacy and educational outreach.

FAME artist teaches students at St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School

FORT WAYNE — A visiting artist came to teach the fifth- and sixth-grade students at St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School all about shadow puppets on March 14.

Janice Furtner, a paper-cutting artist and fine arts instructor, gave a presentation on shadow puppets, an art form of the Southeast Asian countries of Indonesia and Thailand. Janice Furtner and T. Irmischer, FAME executive director, helped to put on a shadow puppet play that Furtner wrote called “Westward” for the students.

Classic shadow puppets are made of buffalo hide, intricately cut out, with the arms of the puppets manipulated with sticks. Furtner told the students some of the history of shadow puppets in Southeast Asia. The fifth- and sixth-graders then created paper and stick versions of a shadow puppet.

The local fine arts organization FAME teams up with artists whose work corresponds with that year’s cultural theme, which in 2013 is Southeast Asia. These artists then visit a number of local art classrooms, including at St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School. The art teacher for the fifth through eighth graders at St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth School is Abby Dykhuizen.

Indiana Abolition Coalition plans meeting in Fort Wayne

FORT WAYNE — The Indiana Abolition Coalition, an organization mirroring the consensus around the death penalty in Indiana through education, collaboration and activism, will hold a Fort Wayne area meeting on Saturday, April 13, from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m., in the social hall of the Unitarian Universalist Meeting House located at 5310 Old Mill Rd., Fort Wayne. The meeting will provide information on the status of capital punishment in Indiana. Additional information is available by contacting Sarah Grey at (812) 376-8102 or sarahgrey@att.net.

Diocese sponsors SANKOFA Day of Reflection

The SANKOFA Day of Reflection on Saturday, March 16, at St. Augustine Parish in South Bend, was sponsored by the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend and coordinated by the Secretariat for Evangelization and Special Ministries.
GRANGER — Many of the decisions we make in life as children are made or influenced by our parents. That is why it is remarkable that two young men who responded to the call to become Catholic, did not come from this faith background.

In the fall of 2011, sixth grader Matt Forsey, and eighth grader Jack Buckey, both students at St. Pius X Catholic School, began their extraordinary faith journey, which led to receiving the sacraments of initiation at the 2012 Easter Vigil.

Matt is currently a seventh grade student at St. Pius X, and Jack is now a freshman at Saint Joseph High School in South Bend.

Today’s Catholic recently spoke with these young men, their parents, sponsors, the director of religious education and parish priest in recalling the milestones and memories of their catechetical process.

Matt Forsey

For Matt Forsey, the twice weekly Mass offered by St. Pius X School was a turning point in his journey to Catholicism. “I knew I wanted to become Catholic during the Eucharistic Prayer, watching the priest’s reverence in the Transubstantiation of the Body and Blood of Christ,” he recalls.

Eucharistic Exposition of the Blessed Sacrament was another way for Matt to connect with Christ, he emphasized. Besides reciting the rosary, chaplets and other prayers during his visit at Eucharistic Adoration, Matt would read books such as “Introduction to the Devout Life” by St. Francis De Sales and “Divine Mercy in My Soul” by St. Faustina.

Since his Confirmation in the Catholic Church, Matt’s frequent use of the sacrament of Reconciliation has been a source of strengthening his faith. “I have been giving a stewardship talk at parish Masses, Matt attested to the power of regular Confession.

Jack Buckey

Toward the end of seventh grade at St. Pius X School, Jack Buckey attended Easter Mass with a friend and it had a lasting impact on the young man. “It was a beautiful Mass and seeing all of it made me want to be a part of it,” Jack remembers.

Jack also recalls that the religious education director of St. Pius X, Dan Allen, was instrumental in discussions of the Catholic catechism. Because of Jack’s football practice after school, Dan volunteered to stay after practice concluded and discuss with Jack what he had missed in class.

The sponsors

Both Rite of Christian Initiation of Children (RCIC) sponsors of the two young men recall wonderful milestones of Jack and Matt’s faith journey.

Mary O’Hannigan, who was Matt’s sponsor, recalls his desire for learning about the Catholic faith.

“Matt’s enthusiasm and heart for the Catholic faith is inspiring. He is always questioning, to the point that I was often tempted to swing by the rectory and pick up Father Bill or Father Terry for our daily car rides home from school. Matt’s curiosity about all things Catholic is insatiable. So I did my very best to answer his questions, but there were few times I would respond, ‘I don’t know. Let me find out and get back with you on that one!’” says Mary.

Preparing for the Triduum was a high point for both Matt and Mary. “When we were approaching the Triduum, Matt was planning out his schedule to attend as many events as possible. Wanting to be a good sponsor and knowing he was eager to attend every event, we decided to attend most everything with him. This included the Good Friday service, which I have always avoided because I cry easily and didn’t want to embarrass myself, or embarrass my family!

So there we sat, in a packed church on Good Friday,” Mary remembers.

She continues, “When it came time to approach the Crucifix, which was now lying on the altar instead of hanging above it, I was a wreck. Thankfully, my husband Joe always keeps tissue handy. It was powerful, joyful, sorrowful and there was Matt with our family. His parents have raised a fine son, and I am honored when people ask if he is ours.”

Jack’s sponsor, Kevin Danahay, believes that Jack’s faith journey began prior to RCIC.

“Matt was called to St. Pius X Grade School and through his experiences in school, he was called further and deeper into the Church. Jack transferred to St. Pius X Grade School at an unusual time. He entered in the seventh grade. This was a challenge as most of the students in his grade had been together since the fifth grade. Making new friends and building new relationships might be intimidating for many young men, but Jack knew he was meant to be there,” says Kevin.

Kevin recalls a story that Jack’s mother, Pam, responded to the call to become Catholic.

“On Jack’s first day of school at St. Pius, during mom-saints and history of the Catholic Church.”

Pam recalls that on a recent trip to the Museum of Art in Chicago, Matt shared with his parents the Catholic symbolism in some of the paintings of famous artists. “There were people standing around us and they were listening as Matt spoke,” Pam explains.

Laura and Scott Buckey are equally supportive in Jack’s choice to become Catholic.

“We are encouraging Jack to use his faith in good times and bad. Faith is very important to our family,” says Scott.

“We encourage him to be our spiritual guide in our house and Jack says the prayers at dinner in our home,” Laura emphasizes. “It is nice to see that Jack has taken this as a priority for himself,” Scott adds.

The Parish

St. Pius X director of religious education Dan Allen and pastor Msgr. Bill Schooler both attest to seeing the wonderful growth in faith of these young men in the past two years.

“It seemed like the Holy Spirit blessed me in a special way sending Jack and Matt during my first year teaching the RCIC. It was such an inspiration to me, a lifelong Catholic, to meet two young men so ready, willing and eager to be Catholic,” says Dan. “I keep them in my prayers still as they continue to develop and change, and they give me hope for the future of the Church.”

“Father” Bill, as he is affectionately referred to by his congregation, concludes, “When we opened our Catholic school, we had hoped that the school would help with evangelizing. Although the vast majority of our students are Catholic, those few who are not come to Mass and take religion classes. It was the contact with the Eucharist that first drew Jack and Matt, along with the catechists they received in class.” I am very proud of those young men!”
Getting stronger in faith every day

BY MARY KINDER

FORT WAYNE — For Rachel Dahlman, RCIA was a family affair. It all began with a conversation with her sister, Camille Martin. The two sisters were raised in a loving home by parents who had believed in God but didn’t follow any formal religion.

Now that they were both married and living their own lives, they were searching for their own path. Martin found it when she attended a local Catholic Church. Soon after, she discussed the idea of officially joining the faith with her sister.

Rachel Dahlman says that first conversation was a bit surprising, but she also admits she was intrigued.

While she did not attend church growing up, her husband, Derek, did. She remembers him talking about the peace and comfort he found there as a child.

Peace was something Derek Dahlman could certainly use in his life. As a member of the National Guard, he served three tours of active duty, two in Iraq and one in Afghanistan. Rachel says she thought going back to church could help him heal from those experiences.

So while Rachel Dahlman was open to the idea, she did have a few reservations. She says that much of what she knew of the Catholic church came from the media, which didn’t always paint a flattering picture. She claims she didn’t really know what to expect from Mass and was a bit apprehensive at first.

However, once she began attending St. Jude in Fort Wayne, she says perceptions quickly changed, “I saw what the Church really is.”

“Right away I felt a sense of community,” she explains. “Everyone was very supportive. I feel like I have a family there.”

So, last year, with her sister, brother-in-law and husband by her side, Dahlman began the formal Rite of Christian Initiation at St. Jude Parish.

Dahlman said she felt at home from the beginning, due in large part to Father Tom Shoemaker.

“Father Tom put all of us at ease right away,” she says. “He has an openness and more relaxed way that made us feel accepted.”

Dahlman’s new Church family found sponsors for her and her husband.

“Tony and Jerri Hayes volunteered to be our sponsors. I think it’s great that people volunteer to do that for people who don’t already know someone in the Church,” she says. “There were so many people who helped us along the way.”

Dahlman enjoyed the RCIA classes where she learned about the history of the Church and the reasons behind Catholic beliefs. As the months passed, she began to look forward to the Easter Vigil.

A year later, she describes that night as “beautiful.” She was especially touched by all the people who filled the church to welcome the newest members.

“Someone told me to remember to look back as we walked toward the church with candles in hand. Since I was getting baptized, I was at the front of the line. I can remember taking a moment to look back and seeing all those lights coming into the church. It was a beautiful sight.”

Dahlman’s faith journey didn’t end with that walk. Last month she participated in a Christ Renews His Parish (also known as CRHP) weekend at St. Jude. She says that experience really brought her fully into the Catholic faith.

She explains, “With RCIA, I learned the background of the faith. But through CRHP, I saw how that faith relates to my everyday life.”

She strongly encourages anyone who has gone through RCIA to go on a Christ Renews His Parish weekend, as well.

This year, Dahlman and her family will be attending the Easter Vigil once again. This time her 12-year-old stepson, Noah, will be welcomed into the Church.

“Because my husband and I had such a good experience, we wanted to share that with Noah,” she says.

Again she’s looking forward to the evening, but this time she has a whole new perspective and says she can’t wait to see it from the other side as one of the people who make new members feel welcome.

Much has changed in the last year for Rachel Dahlman. She now attends Mass weekly, which she says helps put everything into perspective.

She also says she is now calmer and more at ease, because her new faith has taught her that things will get better.

Celebrating one year as an official member of the Catholic Church, Rachel Dahlman explains that her faith isn’t something that suddenly happened all at once, “It’s a learning process, but every day my faith is getting stronger.”

Priests renew their promises

At St. Matthew Cathedral in South Bend, priests from the South Bend region of the diocese publicly renew their promises and manifest their communion with the bishop during the Chrism Mass on March 25.
Bishop Rhoades visits Saint Joseph High School on feast day

BY LISA KOCHANOWSKI

SOUTH BEND — “Every year I look forward to coming here to Saint Joseph High School to celebrate the feast of St. Joseph,” said Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades during his recent celebration at the new high school.

The visit began with Mass in the new gymnasium with over 1,000 students, visitors, faculty, staff and parents. Bishop Rhoades started his homily talking about the new chapel and inviting the students to visit the new worship space.

“Joseph is such a great example of faith and faith in God’s word,” said Bishop Rhoades to the crowd. At the end of the Gospel it says that Joseph woke up and did what the angel told him to do and he believed even though he did not understand.

Before heading to the high school, Bishop Rhoades had the chance to watch a portion of the first Mass of Pope Francis.

“What a great day for the pope to begin his ministry on the feast of St. Joseph,” said Bishop Rhoades. He was impressed with the homily and the pope’s love for the people.

“The pope talked about Joseph’s great faith and of his vocation to be the protector and guardian of Mary and Jesus,” said Bishop Rhoades. It is this role that makes him the perfect patron saint of the universal Church and some-one to look up to and pray to for protection.

Bishop Rhoades noted the pope’s homily focused on the importance of our vocation as Christians to protect others and the world around us. He cited examples of how the Church has a duty to protect people, parents have the duty to protect their children and when parents get older the children become the protectors.

“We also have to protect ourselves from hatred, envy and pride. Evil intentions come from the heart and we have to protect ourselves from this evil,” said Bishop Rhoades.

At the end of his homily, Bishop Rhoades told the crowd, “My prayer is that this community reigns Christ’s love in the wider community of South Bend.”

“Listening to bishop’s homily was inspiring and connected our school community to the homily given by Pope Francis at his installation earlier in the day in Rome,” said Principal Susan Richter.

“Bishop’s homily told the story of St. Joseph, the patron saint of the universal Church and our patron saint. I will always remember the message Bishop Rhoades shared with our school — illustrating how we are one Church, bound together in prayer and worship. Bishop is always masterful at teaching the faith to his flock.”

After Mass the students were invited to participate in a question-and-answer session. Many questions started with a hug, ended with a hug and covered a variety of different topics.

“Who do you think will win in basketball?” asked Tim McNamara. Bishop Rhoades responded Gonzaga and a wager was made between the two men with an agreement that if Bishop Rhoades won McNamara would wash his car, and if McNamara won, Bishop Rhoades would pay for a meal at a good restaurant of choice.

“What is your favorite Bible passage,” inquired Dominic Kucela.

“My favorite Bible passage is the Letter of St. Paul to the Romans, Chapter 8. I especially like the end of the passage that says ‘Nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord,’” said Bishop Rhoades.

“The bishop had the chance to spend the afternoon with students talking about their studies, watch them enjoy the new building and get the chance to know the community.”

“A memorable moment was later in the day when bishop spoke with seven of our students who had recently lost a parent. Bishop consoled these young people and prayed with them. His prayer was powerful. He promised to continue prayer for the deceased parents and families. He explained that he has a chapel in his home, and that he would take the list given to him by the students and remember them and their families in his intentions and prayers. This simple pastoral act speaks volumes of bishop’s love for the young people in his diocese,” said Richter.

Bishop Rhoades was presented with gifts during his visit, including a book at St. Kateri Tekakwitha, a painting of St. Kateri and a piece of Saint Joseph High School spirit wear with the new school logo.

“My hope is that Bishop Rhoades believes that Saint Joe students are faith-filled young people committed to serving others in need, as well as being academically excellent. I hope bishop enjoyed his day at Saint Joseph High School. He seemed to appreciate and delight in his conversations during his visit to a theology class, with our student leaders during lunch, and later when the students took bishop on a short tour of the new school. Bishop Rhoades was able to witness this mission being fulfilled; our students being educated in heart and mind,” said Richter.

I spoke about relativism a few weeks ago at a college in the heart of the northeast, one renowned for its commitment to socially progressive values and "open-mindedness." I’ll leave out the name of the college because, frankly, my experience there could have applied to any vast number of colleges. I didn’t feel the warm embrace of their open-mindedness of course. When a group is committed to seeing all opinions as equally valid, orthodoxy rarely escapes to enjoy the status of "equally valid opinion."

One transgendered student posted on a community board that because I represent a worldview that is to blame for the fact that 45 percent of transsexuals attempt suicide, I should not be allowed to speak on campus. He was voicing a gross-oversimplification of the issue of trans-suicides. Sadly, his oversimplification not only fails to help his community, it would have people with a natural law approach to sexual ethics and gender identity labeled a "threat to society." Other students voiced their opposition to any college funds paying for my "hate speech."

The diversity dean decided to cut funding in half. She cited a lack of available funds as the reason. I can only hope she was being honest.

A handful of students showed up with the intent of verbally attacking rather than dialoguing, hoping to poison the atmosphere worthy of the college paper. Thankfully, I think the outcome disappointed them!

The day before my presentation it was relayed to me through the campus minister that a faculty member sternly warned her that I was not to mention "the tyranny of relativism." I could speak about relativism; just not about how it’s mandated by places like universities. How do you spell irony? (Thankfully she apologized to the campus minister for that attempt at censorship the event.)

The cold welcome I received came as no surprise. A few months before my visit I was told about how the Christian group, InterVarsity, had been banned from the campus for removing a gay student from leadership. They had no issue with the student’s orientation. They said she could remain in

REAL LIFE CATHOLIC

This new Francis

I had an excellent vantage point for the presentation of Pope Francis to the world, for I was doing commentary for NBC News from a perch above St. Peter’s Square.

I will confide that my initial impression was negative, not because he was a relative surprise or because he wasn’t from the United States, but because, for more than a minute, he stood ramrod straight, hands at his side, and not smiling. I remember saying to his image on the TV monitor: "Do something!" Then — praise God — the new pope spoke, and he immediately won me over. Asking the people to listen to him, he told them that blessing, promising to work for the evangelization of the city of Rome, pledging to be the Mother of God to God and the Goddess against that, leading the people in the Hail Mary and Our Father, and yes even managing to smile a little — the new pope didn’t make a false move.

But what most impressed me was his first truly significant gesture, the choice of his papal name. Francis of Assisi (and it was confirmed that the pope was honoring the founder of the Franciscans and not his fellow Jesuit, Francis Xavier) was a friend of the poor. So close was his identification with "Lady Poverty" that he was referred to in his own time as "il poverello." (the little poor man).

By all accounts, Cardinal Bergoglio, now Pope Francis, has a similar feel for the spiritual value of poverty, taking the lowly path to work rather than a limousine, eschewing the trappings of power, living in a simple apartment rather than the episcopal palace, juggling flying coach class to Rome, and passionately advocating for social justice on behalf of the underprivileged.

But there was another dimension to this identification with the poor man of Assisi. When Francis was just beginning his spiritual formation, he had an extraordinary encounter with Christ. While praying in the little church of San Damiano, the young man heard a voice coming from Christ: "Francis, rebuild my church."

At first, he thought that the Lord was directing that some work needed to be done on a local church structure that had fallen into disrepair. But what became clear soon enough, both to Francis and others, was that this command of the Lord had a far wider valence. Precisely through his recovery of the radical heart of the Gospel, Francis would help to revitalize a Church that had been compromised by worldliness, ambition and clerical corruption.

This interpretation of the Lord’s words was most dramatically confirmed by a dream that Pope Innocent III had on the eve of meeting "il poverello". In the pope’s dream that a small man, dressed in a brown habit, was walking up the stairs, which was about to collapse. When he saw Francis, he recognized him as the man from his...
I n March, 2013, the British paper The Independent ran an article entitled, “Children in gay adoptions at no disadvantage,” which confirms same-sex couples are just as good as parenting as heterosexuals.” The article, based on a study at Cambridge University, concluded there was “no evidence” to support the claim that children’s masculine or feminine tendencies were affected by having gay or lesbian parents, nor were the quality of their family relationships significantly different.

The studied outcomes, however, were limited to children four to eight years of age, so the latter effects, as they passed through puberty, for example, and “came of age,” were not included. Common sense, however, begs the question: how capable would two men be at helping their adopted daughter with very female matters pertaining to growing up and maturing physically? For daughters this is often an issue requiring ongoing support, communication, and sharing. It’s not something men can just read up on in a book; it can be a delicate, personal matter, closely connected to a young woman’s sense of self-identity, and it’s reasonable to consider what are real advantages to the empathy shared between a mother and her daughter.

Although The Independent claims this was the first study to look at how children in non-traditional families fared when compared with heterosexual households, it is at least two other major studies addressing the question were published during 2012, one by Mark Regnerus, a sociologist at the University of Texas at Austin, and the other by Loren Marks, a researcher at Louisiana State University. Both studies presented compelling evidence countering the claims that a child’s psychosocial growth is equally supported in lesbian and gay environments as it would be in heterosexual parenting environments.

Common sense, instead of common clichés, ought to serve as our starting point in discussions about adopting children. One of the clichés we hear is that adopting children is really just a matter of the “rights of parents.” As Phyllis Wilson noted in an article in the New Woman: “If adoption is going to be debated as a ‘right,’ then the rights of the child (innocent and defenseless) are the rights that must prevail. Adoption exists for the benefit of the child, not for the couple who adopts him.” Same-sex couples who seek to adopt a child can doubtless be motivated by the best of intentions and by genuine compassion for the plight of an orphan. Yet Wilson goes on to explain the deeper reasons that need to motivate adoption: “A child in need of adoption is a child who is in extraordinary and abnormal circumstances: he is a child without parents. Adoption seeks to ‘create,’ from a social and legal point of view, a relationship similar to what could be natural for the child, meaning a family relationship: mother, father, child. This relationship would not be, for example, two fathers and a mother, or three women, or a single man because this does not exist in the natural biological filiation. The love and affection of one, two or five people isn’t enough. In order for a child to develop into a well-balanced and fully mature person, he needs the presence of a father and a mother.”

In recent years, adults who were raised by same-sex couples have started to recount and write about some of their childhood experiences. Robert Oscar Lopez, who has described himself as a “bisexual Latino intellectual, raised by a lesbian, who experienced poverty in the Bronx as a young adult,” now works as a professor at California State University. He described the notable challenges he faced growing up: “Quite simply, growing up with parents was very difficult. … When your home life is so drastically different from everyone around you, in leadership as long as she would agree not to promote an actively gay lifestyle. She declined. As a result she was invited to remain a member of InterVarsity but was told that she couldn’t remain a leader. Apparently, that kind of “tolerance” was intolerable on the campus.

Of course, anyone who knows the actual definition of tolerance is aware that a disagreement needs to occur for tolerance to even be possible. You don’t tolerate a beautiful sunny day. You tolerate a cold rainy day. InterVarsity wasn’t guilty of intolerance any more than Mother Teresa was guilty of intolerance. She disagreed with Hindus but spent her life in their service! Following my talk, one student who embodied the zeitgeist of societies arise. And it takes a few students who were pleasantly surprised that it brought about a healthy dialogue, and I think more than a few students who expected aapist ogre were disarmed by a presenter who obviously didn’t hate those he disagreed with. I couldn’t agree with her more.

The director of equity and diversity at a New Jersey campus (which is not the campus visit described in this article) did an extensive study on her campus to find out which groups felt excluded for their views. Everyone was feeling welcome and included on campus and in the classroom except one group: the Christians. “When the Catholics in New Jersey (where 41 percent of people are Catholic) are afraid to talk about religion, people know who they are,” she said, “we have a problem.”

Not much is known about this hermit who is considered by some historians to be the founder of the order of Carmelite friars. Various legends had him born in Limoges, France, educated at the University of Paris, and participating in the Crusades in Turkey. What is known is that he directed a group of Frankish hermits living on Mount Carmel in Palestine in the second half of the 12th century. The existence on Mount Carmel of a church and hermitage in the spiritual tradition of the prophet Elijah is documented from 1163 on. After Berthold’s death, the hermits were led by another Frenchman, St. Brocard; Carmelite houses became well-established throughout Europe by 1300.

Saints’ wrestlers finish a successful season

BY PHILIP HILGER

FORT WAYNE — The Saints’ wrestling team just completed a very successful season finishing with a record of 8-2. The Saints’ team is composed of fifth-through eighth-grade students from Fort Wayne area Catholic schools, and homeschooled students. This team was coached by the knowledgeable trio of Gary Weilbaker, Shawn McArdle and Daniel Nix.

The season started and ended with a tough loss against Maple Creek and Garrett respectfully, but the Saints dominated in their other meets and tournaments. The meets included first-time victories over Blackhawk, Imagine, and other meets and tournaments. The season concluded with a tough loss against Maple Creek and Garrett.

The Saints’ Wrestling Team took first place at the Concordia Middle School Tournament.

The Saints’ Wrestling Team took first place at the Carroll Tournament, at the Concordia Middle School and St. Peters.

USF’s Amanda Pedro named Newman Civic Fellow

FORT WAYNE — University of Saint Francis (USF) senior nursing major Amanda Pedro has been named a Newman Civic Fellow by Campus Compact in recognition of her demonstrated investment in finding solutions for challenges facing communities.

Campus Compact is the only national higher education association dedicated solely to campus-based civic engagement. It promotes public and community service that develops students’ citizenship skills, helps campuses forge effective community partnerships and provides resources and training for faculty seeking to integrate civic and community-based learning into the curriculum.

Newman Civic Fellows are nominated by college and university presidents to acknowledge their motivation and ability in public leadership. USF President Sister M. Elise Kriss, a Sister of St. Francis of Perpetual Adoration, nominated Pedro on the basis of her pivotal role in raising funds for the construction of the first permanent residential home for the orphans at Our Lady of Perpetual Help Orphanage in Haiti.

In 2011, Pedro, a successful student-athlete, responded to an invitation to travel to Haiti with Formula for Life, a student philanthropic group at USF. Since 2009, this group has coordinated a campus 5K run/walk to raise money to provide nutritional support to Haitian children.

Upon returning to USF, Pedro became a Formula for Life leader, and her passion and compassion for the children of Haiti has motivated the community to respond generously. The April 2012 Formula for Life 5K run/walk was the most successful to date, with $11,000 raised.

Pedro returned to Haiti with the Formula for Life faculty adviser and another student team member to present Father Andre of Our Lady of Perpetual Help Orphanage the money raised through the event. During the visit, she heard Father Andre recount an incident in which a baby girl was turned away because the living space could not accommodate her. After he explained his vision to expand the orphanage from a small rental to a permanent campus on 15 acres of farmland, Pedro told her Formula for Life adviser, “We are going to get father on his new land. We are the ones who are supposed to do it.”

Within six months, the construction campaign led by Pedro, who is a Bishop Luers High School graduate, and other Formula for Life members garnered over $75,000 in monetary contributions and in-kind construction donations for the orphanage-building project. She remained committed to her mission upon her return to Indiana, despite the distance and the distractions in the life of a U.S. college student.

“Amanda is an excellent student, a talented athlete and true campus leader,” President Sister Kriss said. “She communicated the orphans’ plight, reminded us of our blessings, and created the momentum for a campaign to build an earthquake- and hurricane-resistant home for those children. It will be interesting to see what her future holds and how she shapes her nursing career and advocacy for Haitian children into a life plan. Asked about her role in the orphanage project following graduation, she replied, ‘You know — I’m not done yet.’”

Amanda Pedro was named a Newman Civic Fellow by Campus Compact for her fundraising efforts for a Haitian orphanage. Pedro is also a graduate of Bishop Luers High School in Fort Wayne.
