National March for Life brings widespread diocesan support

WASHINGTON, D.C. — “I am grateful to see so many from our diocese here today in prayer as we prepare for tomorrow’s March for Life here in our nation’s capital,” said Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades who gathered with diocesan pilgrims Jan. 21 at St. Matthew Cathedral in Washington, D.C. for Mass.

“I am proud of your witness to Christ and the Gospel of Life,” Bishop Rhoades continued. “I am grateful for your dedication to the cause of life and for your steadfast commitment to the right to life of every human person, especially the innocent unborn.”

Families, adults and students from schools throughout the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend bravely weathered the snow and wind to show their united support against legalized abortion and to pray for the conversion of hearts and minds among those who continue to fight against the culture of life.

One of these students, Emma MacDonald, a home-schooled sophomore from Fort Wayne who served as lector at the Mass, reflected on why she chose to come to the national march. “Standing up for the unborn is vitally important,” she said, “and it is very special to be able to stand and walk together with so many other people my age who seek to do the same.”

In his homily, Bishop Rhoades reflected on Blessed Pope John Paul II’s words of “our present social context” as being “marked by a dramatic struggle between the culture of life and the culture of death.”

Bishop Rhoades said, “Even though at times we may feel powerless when we see the powerful resources of the forces promoting the culture of death, like Planned Parenthood, many in the media and Hollywood, and powers in our present government, we must always keep in mind the words of St. Paul to the Corinthians about God choosing the weak and the lowly, vessels of clay, to show His wisdom and power.”

Bishop Rhoades said two decades ago that Pope John Paul II “called upon the Church and all people of good will to activate a great campaign in support of life,” and that this call is rooted in the Church’s mission of evangelization...

Julie Weilbaker, a senior at Bishop Dwenger High School in Fort Wayne, demonstrated an awareness and realization of the pope’s words in responding why she desired to attend the national march. “I am here because...”

Schools of the Gospel

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHOADES

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades delivered this talk at the Light of Learning Luncheon in Fort Wayne and South Bend during Catholic Schools Week.

Every year I look forward to this gathering in which we celebrate our Catholic Schools and honor our great teachers. I wish to congratulate and thank all our Light of Learning Award recipients for your service to the Church, to our schools, and to our children. I wish also to thank all of you present here today for your strong and steadfast support of Catholic education. I thank Quality Dining for generously hosting this luncheon and the awesome Redeemer Radio for broadcasting this event.

These past couple of months I have studied and reflected prayerfully on two documents of our Holy Father, Pope Francis: his encyclical The Light of Faith and his apostolic exhortation The Joy of the Gospel. I highly recommend these documents for your own spiritual reading. I think there are wonderful insights in these works that are connected to the mission of our schools. Pope Francis writes about faith as a light that illuminates our journey through life. He says that it is a light “capable of illuminating every aspect of human existence” (LF 4). It is a supernatural gift that we receive from God. The Pope writes: “In God’s gift of faith…we realize that a great love has been offered us, a good word has been spoken to us, and that when we welcome that word, Jesus Christ the Word made flesh, the Holy Spirit transforms us, lights up our way to the future and enables us joyfully to advance along that way on wings of hope. Thus wonderfully interwoven, faith, hope and charity are the driving force of the Christian life as it advances toward full communion with God” (LF 7).

We have Catholic schools and invest so much in our schools because they are means to an end. They are means to an end of passing on the faith: to provide an excellent education in all these subjects, but also to enlighten our children and young people with knowledge of math, science, social studies, and other subjects. Yes, we work hard to provide an excellent education in all these areas. That is part of the important academic mission of our schools. But our schools exist for more than that. Pope Francis says: “The mission of Catholic schools and educational institutions is above all the mission of evangelizing” (LF 7).

We don’t walk along the journey of faith alone and we don’t serve and support our schools alone. We do so together, with one another, as brothers and sisters in Christ. And we also do so with a woman of great faith throughout life, opening our hearts to faith by the Blessed Virgin Mary “is the missionary who draws near to us and accompanies us throughout life, opening our hearts to faith by her maternal love. As a true mother, she walks at our side, she shares our struggles and she constantly surrounds us with God’s love” (LF 286). Mary Immaculate is the patron of our diocese. May she intercede for us and for all our Catholic school communities that they may truly be schools of the Gospel, vibrant in faith, hope, and charity! May God bless you!
Father Lawrence A. Kramer dies

FORT WAYNE — Father Lawrence A. Kramer, retired diocesan priest of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, died Jan. 23 while in Florida. He was 79.

Born in Fort Wayne to Lawrence and Ethelreda (Garty) Kramer, he grew up with a younger brother, Roger, who resides in California. His family belonged to the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception. He attended Cathedral Grade School and Central Catholic High School in Fort Wayne.

In an article published by Today’s Catholic, Father Kramer described his call to the Priesthood: “About half way through my senior year at Central Catholic High School, I had ruled out the Priesthood as a freshman, convinced that I belonged in the lay apostolate. Suddenly I couldn’t see myself as anything but a parish priest. I immediately made a deal with God. I would assume this was what God wanted of me and not agonize over it and God would be gentle in getting me out of the preparation process if I was wrong. My only doubt was, at age 17, whether I would live long enough to be ordained!”

He attended Our Lady of the Lake Seminary, Wawasee, and St. Meinrad Seminary, St. Meinrad, and was ordained to the Priesthood on May 28, 1960 by Bishop Leo A. Parsley in the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

Father Kramer’s initial appointments were as associate pastor (judicial vicar) at St. Matthew, South Bend (1960), and St. Peter, Fort Wayne (1964). He also was named Fort Wayne deanery rector of the Christian Family Movement (1966) and appointed diocesan director of the Family Life Bureau (1968) while continuing to serve at St. Peter.

In 1969, Father Kramer was appointed chaplain of Catholic students attending Indian Institute of Technology in Fort Wayne. He was a founder of “commuter Campus Ministry” at Indiana Tech and Indiana University-Purdue University at Fort Wayne and Indiana University-South Bend.

Father Kramer’s pastoral assignments included St. Peter (1970), St. Andrew (1971) and Our Lady of Good Hope (1973), all in Fort Wayne; St. Joseph, Bluffton (1997), and St. Paul of the Cross, Columbia City. He also served as associate pastor at St. Vincent de Paul, Elkhart (1973), and was in residence at both the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception (1978) and St. Joseph, Fort Wayne (1979), while continuing his work in campus ministry.

Father Kramer was twice appointed a judge in the diocesan Tribunal and thrice served as an episcopal vicar in a Fort Wayne region of the diocese. He was appointed chaplain (1997), and assistant chaplain (2009) at Bishop Luers High School, Fort Wayne, and he served two, three-year terms on the Presbyteral Council.

“I never looked upon my priesthood as a job — it’s a lifestyle,” Father Kramer said. “I never had trouble moving from one job to another. They all fit the container.”

In retirement, Father Kramer was in residence as a senior priest at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish, Fort Wayne.

In an interview with Today’s Catholic, Father Kramer said, “My favorite activity as a priest is being a sacrament of Reconciliation. Unlike some, I find it to be alive and well, better in fact than in the days when people trooped to Confession in large numbers. Those who use this sacrament today understand it and appreciate it.”

Father Kramer enjoyed lap swimming, train travel, reading periodicals and other nonfiction, listening to music of several kinds and watching TV documentaries.

Among the throngs who mourn Father Kramer’s passing is Sister Rose Clare Ehrlich, a Sister of St. Agnes, director of liturgy and music at St. Joseph, Bluffton, and St. Paul of the Cross in Columbia City, Sister Rose Clare, who worked with Father Kramer at both parishes for 10 years, says of her friend, “I found him one of the most gentle, caring, listening persons that I would ever want to work with. He was always there when you needed him.”

In a tribute to Father Kramer on his 50th jubilee in 2010 she wrote, “We treasure your mild manner, humility, gentle compassion, your ability to see the humor in situations and your Christ-like invitational leadership.”

Upon Father Kramer’s retirement over a year and a half ago, he relocated to Fort Wayne where he took an active role in ministry at St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish. Father Jim Shafer, pastor there, said of his friend, “More than any other priest I’ve met over my years, Father Larry had a very compassionate heart. He never met a person he turned away. … He was the most non-judgmental person I’ve ever met.”

Father Shafer noted that Father Kramer enjoyed conversing with the seminarians that visited or interned at the parish, saying, “He loved to share his wisdom.”

And on a personal note Father Shafer added, “He was a good friend with an absolutely delightful sense of humor. He was the king of one-liners. … He brought a lot of laughter to the rectory, a lot of good conversation. I do miss him already.”

At press time funeral arrangements had not been finalized.

Statement from the diocese regarding Father James Seculoff

Subsequent to the publishing of the announcement regarding the receipt of a credible allegation of sexual abuse of a minor involving Father James Seculoff, the diocese has received additional allegations. Three more persons have separately come forward to report being sexually abused by Father Seculoff when they were children. The diocese, with great care and concern for all involved, initiated preliminary investigations. The results of those investigations were presented to the diocesan review board and to Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades.

The diocesan review board found these allegations, separately presented, to be highly credible and supported by substantial evidence, and so advised Bishop Rhoades. As required by Church law and procedures delineated in the Charter for the Protection of Children and Young People (USCCB 2002, 2005, 2011), Bishop Rhoades directed that these allegations be forwarded to the Indiana civil authorities and the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

Bishop Rhoades asks everyone to please pray for all parties involved, especially for those that have come forward, as well as Father Seculoff, our priests, parishes and all the faithful during these painful and difficult days.

If anyone has been the victim of sexual abuse by a member of the clergy, please contact the diocesan Victim Assistance Coordinator, Mary Glowaski, at (260) 399-1458 or the Vicar General, Msgr. Robert Schulte, at (260) 422-4611.
The Rule of 1221: Confraternity of Penitents grow closer to God

BY TIM JOHNSON

FORT WAYNE — In a small yellow home on Fort Wayne’s eastside live Madeline and James Nugent, founders of the Rule of 1221 and live their lives “privately and quietly” in a “penitent’s lifestyle.” They are involved with activities of the Franciscan Brothers Minor in Fort Wayne, group Bishop Rhodes has appointed Father Jacob Meyer, parochial vicar at St. Charles Borromeo Church, Fort Wayne, and as Confraternity visitor, that is the entire Confraternity’s spiritual guide and representative to the bishop.

When someone comes to inquire. She said that, when she felt called to live this way, she was “positive she wouldn’t be able to do it.”

If an individual feels the Holy Spirit is asking him or her to inquire, then he or she should give the Nugents a call, Madeline said. The number is (260) 739-6882. Or they can email either of the two emails at www.penitents.org.

Today’s Catholic February 2, 2014

The Nugents have five adult children, including one daughter who is a Capuchin Sister of Nazareth in Pennsylvania, and four grandchildren.

None of their children are penitents, but the children accept their parents’ lifestyle. “They didn’t even know I was doing this for a number of years,” Madeline said, even though they lived under the same roof. “They found out about the food part just a couple years ago.”

People interested in adapting to the penitents’ lifestyle will go through four years of formation. “When someone comes to us to join, they go through a three-month process of inquiry,” Madeline said. “Then they have six to 12 months of postulacy where they kind of get into the Rule a little bit.”

They do little parts of the Rule, but not anything too difficult,” she added. “They start to wear a crucifix or crucifix or they will go to Confession once a month. They will do a morning and evening examination of conscience during the month.”

In the years of novice training, the penitents learn the lifestyle “a little bit at a time” and then slowly build the practices over three years.

Madeline said a first-year novice has a prayer option that he or she can select: one is praying a full Liturgy of the Hours — the penitent praying seven times a day from a breviary, a book which many religious use for daily prayer. Or the penitent may pray Morning, Evening and Night Prayer and a 15-decade rosary; or Morning, Evening and Night Prayer and an hour of mental prayer; or in the situation of parents with small children, with their spiritual director’s permission, they can calm themselves down and lift their minds and hearts to God during the day and use that as a prayer option.

“The way you do your prayer option differs according to your state in life,” Madeline said.

Fasting and abstinence are part of Novice 2 formation, which is actually the third year of formation.

“We eat meat only on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Sundays. That is part of the penance, unless it falls on Christmas, an octave or one of the solemnities,” Madeline said.

Meatless days are the other days of the week,” she said. “We have a period of fasting according to the Church fast from the day after the feast of St. Martin (Nov. 11) until Christmas — we observe a Lenten-like fast before Christmas. Then we observe the Lenten fast from Ash Wednesday until Easter, but we fast the way we would on Good Friday all the days of Lent — one full meal, one small meal and, if you need it, a small bite to eat. You don’t eat solids between meals. And the amount that you eat is according to your body weight.”

There are exceptions to the fasting, Madeline noted — for example, if a woman is pregnant or breastfeeding, or if a person has diabetes or a medical condition, “then you can do penance in another way,” she said.

The third year of novice formation is the simplicity of possessions and clothing.

“We follow the original Rule, which talked about un-dyed clothing of humble quality,” she said. “The only fur that you would use is wool.”

Clothing color options would be solids of grays, browns, shades of whites, creams, tans and blacks. Prints are not used.

“We can also wear solid blue clothing in honor of the Blessed Mother.” Madeline said, because “we make a consecration to the Blessed Mother every day.”

“The clothing is not a habit, though,” James emphasized.

“You’re not supposed to wear the same thing every day,” Madeline said, “so people don’t think you are doing penance in that area.”

In the Novice 3 formation, “You’re also supposed to go through the process of trying to simplify the possessions that you have, so you really don’t have more stuff than you really need to have,” Madeline said.

In the Novice 3 formation, “You’re also supposed to go through the process of trying to simplify the possessions that you have, so you really don’t have more stuff than you really need to have,” Madeline said.

Noted historical penitents include St. Elizabeth, Queen of Hungary, King Louis IX and St. Thomas More. Although they had riches and wealth, they were able to simplify their lifestyle.

“They lived the Rule but they did it according to their state in life,” Madeline said.

In Fort Wayne, the local chapter of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel Confraternity of Penitents, has 12 to 15 penitents. They meet on a Sunday once a month from 2-4 p.m. There are also many isolated members throughout the world who stay connected through email, postal mail and telephone. Those two people are needed to start a group.

The Confraternity consists of single and married people worldwide who are joyfully living in their own homes a modern adaptation of the Rule of Life given in the year 1221 to the penitent men and women at the time of St. Francis of Assisi. The Rule eventually became the Rule of the Third Order of St. Francis of Assisi.

Madeline described the penitents’ lifestyle as more prescriptive than the Third Order of Secular Franciscans of today. The penitents following the Rule of 1221 are prescribed what they can wear, what prayers to say and when to say the prayers, for example.

The Nugents will testify that the goal of this Rule of Life is to bring those who live it closer to God and more peacefully conform to God’s will.

“We have people who are living this Rule of Life from all different walks of life,” Madeline told Today’s Catholic in an interview from the Nugents’ Fort Wayne home. “We have single young people to old married people to people that have families with small children, and some people who are caring for elderly people, people who have full-time jobs, people who are retired,” Madeline said. “Each one of them is going to live their life a little differently because they are lay people in the world.”

Madeline is the minister general in the Confraternity. She assembles the newsletter and oversees the administrative aspect of the Confraternity, which is based in Fort Wayne. She has written ten books for Pauline Books and Media, Catholic Book Company and New City Press. In researching the life of St. Anthony of Padua for a book, she found her path to the Rule of 1221.

“So I blame it on St. Anthony,” Madeline quipped. “If I hadn’t done that book on St. Anthony, I wouldn’t have known that that Rule of Life was.” That was in 1994, and since that time, James, a recently retired chemistry professor from Salve Regina University in Rhode Island, also has chosen the penitent’s lifestyle. The couple recently relocated from their home in Rhode Island to Fort Wayne.

The Nugents have five adult children, including one daughter who is a Capuchin Sister of Nazareth in Pennsylvania, and four grandchildren.

None of their children are penitents, but the children accept their parents’ lifestyle. “They didn’t INDIANAPOLIS — State lawmakers hope to further improve child-care standards through a proposal, which passed a House panel Jan. 22. The Indiana Catholic Conference supports the legislation.

Rep. Kevin Mahan, R-Hartford City, author of the proposal HB 1036, spent the past several months studying child-care issues to bring improved safety for children while mitigating any concerns from church ministries that provide child care that tighter standards would infringe upon rights and freedoms.

The legislation addresses issues such as — group sizes of children, food, health, safety and sanitation standards. The Division of Family and Children (DFC) would determine the specific standards. The bill also provides child to adult staff ratios that mirror the requirements for licensure. It also requires reporting of injury to children where a licensed medical professional is involved.

The child-care providers that the bill targets are providers that receive Child Care Development Fund (CCDF) dollars. The CCDF dollars or vouchers are provided to low-income families to use at participating child-care providers.

Glenn Tebbe, executive director for the Indiana Catholic Conference, who testified before the House panel in support of the legislation, said, “The provisions outlined in HB 1036 are reasonable and conform to good practice that ought to be followed by providers whether or not they are in statute. The health and safety of children are vitally important to the wellbeing of the children and for their parents.”

Mahan addressed his fellow lawmakers reminding them of the bipartisan support in the Indiana General Assembly to improve care and early childhood education overall. Last year, lawmakers passed legislation requiring criminal background checks for providers and basic safety for child-care providers that accept the taxpayer-funded CCDF dollars.

“The provisions outlined in 1036

Regarding nutrition and daily activities, Mahan said, “I want to make sure kids aren’t sitting around eating pop tarts and tater tots. There is not a mandated curriculum. Instead I want to make sure kids have a regular routine and are not being put in front of a television all day.”

Eric Miller, executive director and founder of Advance American, who represents 3,400 churches in Indiana, raised numerous concerns with the legislation saying the bill would give too much license to the state agency to regulation what goes on inside the church walls. Responding to some of the bill criticism brought on by Miller, Rep. Gail Riecken, D-Evansville, member of the committee, said of HB 1036, “We are just trying to do what’s right for children.”

Rep. Cindy Ziemke, R-Oldenburg, also a member of the panel said, “As a member of the Catholic Church, they have no problem with compliance over and above the minimum standards. So we’re not picking on churches in this bill.”

Connie Sherman, executive director of St. Mary’s Child Care Center, an agency of the Archdiocese of Indianapolis, testified in support of the bill saying that 90 percent of the children that St. Mary’s serves are in low income situations. Sherman explained that children who are in poverty are up to two years behind.

“The good news is high-quality, early childhood education mitigates the results of the poverty,” said Sherman. “And the best news for the children of Indiana today is this bill provides the research-based benchmarks of high-quality education so desperately needed for our children.”

Tebbe said, “Because many of the providers are religious ministries, following concerns raised by church leaders during the first hearing on the bill, a subcommittee worked on language to clarify that only health and safety and not curriculum and religious activities are involved. This new language was adopted in the bill.”

Indiana law currently allows at least three types of child-care providers: 1) a licensed child-care center; 2) a licensed child-care home; and 3) an unlicensed, registered child-care ministry. Under current law, each type comes with certain requirements.

The amended bill passed the committee, 9-3, on a bipartisan vote. The bill will now move to the full House for further consideration.

Constitutional amendment to protect marriage set back

Monday evening, the Indiana House of Representatives took up the marriage debate focusing on whether the ban would also prohibit civil unions.

Rep. Randy Truitt (R-West Lafayette) offered an amendment to remove language, which would also prohibit Indiana from granting same-sex couples anything that was “identical or substantially similar to that of marriage.” The focus of the debate has centered on the impact the words “identical or substantially similar to that of marriage” would have on businesses and same-sex couples. Some claim the language could prevent employers from granting domestic partner benefits.

Current Indiana law defines marriage as a union between one man and one woman, however, Rep. Eric Turner, R-Cicero, author of the HJR
Kentucky bishop named to Harrisburg; auxiliary named for Sacramento.

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Bishop Ronald W. Gainer of Lexington, Ky., has been named to head the Diocese of Harrisburg, Pa., and the vicar general of the Diocese of Fresno, Calif., has been named auxiliary bishop of Sacramento, Calif. Pope Francis made the appointment Jan. 24. Archbishop Carlo Maria Vigano, apostolic nuncio to the United States, announced them in Washington. Later in the day, the new bishops were introduced at news conferences in the two state capitals. Bishop Gainer, 66, was ordained as bishop of Lexington Feb. 22, 2003. He is a native of Pottsville, Pa., just 55 miles from Harrisburg in the Diocese of Allentown. Ordained for Allentown in 1973, he served in that diocese as a parish priest, campus minister and judicial vicar until his appointment as the second bishop of Lexington. Msgr. Myron J. Cotta, 60, will become an auxiliary bishop of the Sacramento Diocese. He is a native of Dos Palos, Calif., in the Fresno Diocese, and has been a priest since 1987. He will be ordained a bishop March 25 at the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacrament. Bishop Gainer succeeds Bishop Joseph P. McFadden, who died May 2. He will be installed March 19 in a service at the Cathedral of St. Patrick in Harrisburg. At the Harrisburg news conference, Bishop Gainer said he hoped to continue a practice he had in Lexington of holding town hall-style meetings around the diocese.

Relic of Blessed John Paul II reported stolen

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Thieves reportedly stole a relic of Blessed John Paul II from a country chapel 85 miles east of Rome. Italian media reported Jan. 27 that the relic, a polychrome fabric soaked in Blessed John Paul’s blood, had disappeared over the preceding weekend from the church of San Pietro della Ienca. The church is located near the city of L’Aquila, in the mountainous Abruzzo region where the late pope frequently went on brief vacations. One of the volunteers who takes care of the chapel, where Blessed John Paul often prayed, discovered that intruders had cut through bars over the one of the windows and made off with the relic as well as a cross. The local “carabinieri” military police were reportedly searching the surrounding woods with dogs, in case the thieves had discarded the relic there. Polish Cardinal Stanislaw Dziwisz of Krakow, who served as Blessed John Paul’s personal secretary during his pontificate, gave the relic to the chapel in recognition of the late pope’s many visits. The fabric was reportedly soaked in Blessed John Paul’s blood following the attempt to assassinate him in 1981.

Court continues injunction protecting Little Sisters from HHS mandate

WASHINGTON (CNS) — The Supreme Court Jan. 24 issued a three-sentence order affirming — for the time being — an injunction blocking enforcement against the Little Sisters of the Poor and the Christian Brothers of a mandate to provide contraceptive coverage in employee health insurance. The order released late in the afternoon affirmed Justice Sonia Sotomayor’s Dec. 31 in the case. It temporarily blocks the federal government from requiring the Denver-based sisters and their co-plaintiffs at the Christian Brothers from having to meet that requirement of the Affordable Care Act. “If the employer applicants inform the secretary of Health and Human Services in writing that they are nonprofit organizations that hold themselves out as religious and have religious objections to providing coverage for contraceptive services, the respondents are enjoined from enforcing against the applicants the challenged provisions of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and related regulations pending final disposition of the appeal by the United States Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit,” the court said. The requirement to provide coverage for contraceptives in employee health insurance does have an accommodation, or waiver, the government says would keep certain religious organizations from having to comply with the mandate. The Little Sisters and the Christian Brothers had objected to being required to justify to the government that they should be entitled to an exemption from the mandate and that filling out the paperwork for a waiver that would instruct a third party to provide the contraceptive coverage amounts to being part of the mechanism for providing abortion and other morally objectionable types of coverage.

Vatican confirms Obama will visit pope in March

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Pope Francis will meet with U.S. President Barack Obama at the Vatican March 27, the White House announced and the Vatican confirmed. The spring meeting would be Obama’s second visit to the Vatican as president, but his first with Pope Francis, who was elected March 13, 2013. The White House said the Vatican visit would be part of a presidential trip to the Netherlands, Belgium and Italy. “The president looks forward to discussing with Pope Francis their shared commitment to fighting poverty and growing inequality,” said the Jan. 21 White House statement. During the same trip, Obama will participate in a summit in the Netherlands on nuclear security, visit the presidents of the European Council and the European Commission in Brussels, and hold talks in Rome with Italian President Giorgio Napolitano and Prime Minister Enrico Letta.

Opus Dei announces beatification date for Bishop del Portillo

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — The prelate of Opus Dei has announced that Bishop Alvaro del Portillo, the successor to Opus Dei founder St. Josemaria Escriva, will be beatified Sept. 27 in Madrid. In July, Pope Francis approved the miracle needed for the beatification of Bishop del Portillo, who served as the head of Opus Dei from 1975 until his death in 1994. The court accepted as a miracle through his intercession involved a Chilean newborn baby boy, Jose Ignacio Ureta Wilson, who recovered after being in cardiac arrest for 30 minutes and suffering a massive hemorrhage. The prelate of Opus Dei announced Jan. 22 that Pope Francis approved the date of Sept. 27 for the beatification ceremony, which will be presided over by Cardinal Angelo Amato, prefect of the Congregation for Saints’ Causes.

Gov. Cuomo says New York has no room for ‘extreme conservatives’

NEW YORK (CNS) — Pro-life supporters and members of two Republican organizations Jan. 22 urged New York Gov. Andrew Cuomo to issue a formal apology for saying that “extreme conservatives,” in particular those who call for banning gay marriage and same-sex marriage, have “no place in the state of New York.” Cuonno, a Democrat, “is insisting that political and religious conservatives should leave New York state,” said Phil Orenstein, 71, president of Queens Village Republican Club, the nation’s oldest Republican group founded in 1875. “So if you’re pro-life, support the right to bear arms (and) traditional marriage, your opinions and beliefs are too extreme,” for the governor, he said. Orenstein made the comments at a news conference held outside Queens Borough Hall on the steps, despite the bitterly cold weather. He began by quoting Cuomo from a Jan. 17 interview on the public radio show “Capital Pressroom.” In it, the governor criticized some Republican candidates running for office on their opposition to the SAFE Act, a measure that among other things requires universal background checks on gun purchases and bans assault weapons. Cuomo said “moderate Republicans” voted for it but the Republicans who oppose it have a “problem.”

The end is near — for Internet communication as we know it

WASHINGTON (CNS) — When a three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit ruled in Verizon’s favor Jan. 14 on its suit against the Federal Communications Commission, observers in the tech field suggested this could signal the end of the Internet as we know it. The court threw out the FCC’s Internet anti-blocking and anti-discrimination rules, saying the Federal Communications Commission, or FCC, could not regulate Internet service like it does telephone service because the FCC had chosen in 2002 to classify Internet service providers as providing information services, not telecommunications services. The concept is known as net neutrality — short for network neutrality — the principle that all users of the Internet and content providers of the Internet should be treated equally. This happens with telephone service: You pay your bill, and you’re not going to get an advantage or disadvantage for things like how quickly you can get a dial tone or how long it takes to make your connection. The U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops has supported net neutrality since 2006. “Unless Congress requires telephone and cable companies to act as neutral carriers, like providers of Internet services, as they had been required to do since the birth and through the spectacular growth of the Internet, those companies will use their control over Internet access to speed up or down connections to Web sites to benefit themselves financially,” said Bishop Gerald M. Kicanas of Tucson, Ariz., then chairman of the USCCB Committee on Communications, in a letter that year to members of Congress.

USF receives grant to host Stand Against Racism

FORT WAYNE — Dr. Karen Monique Gregg, a sociology professor at the University of Saint Francis, has been awarded the Indiana Campus Compact grant for Service Engagement through the Lilly Endowment.

Gregg will work with Katrina Boedecker, director of the USF Center for Service Engagement, and Deborah Beckman, president and CEO of the YWCA Northeast Indiana, to coordinate the funds in the design and implementation of a project for two courses regularly taught at USF — Comparative Race and Ethnic Relations and Introduction to Peace and Ethnic Relations.

For the project, students will plan, implement and host an on-campus event scheduled for April 25 as part of a national initiative called Stand Against Racism.

This will mark the third year USF has partnered with the YWCA Northeast Indiana in this nationwide effort to discourage racism or discrimination in society, and the first for USF students to plan, implement and host the event.

“Students will be reaching out to the community of Fort Wayne, inviting guest speakers who are government and community leaders to join USF in the stand against racism,” Gregg said. “However, all of Fort Wayne is invited to take a stand and participate.”

 MILFORD — Catholic Youth Summer Camp 2014 will be held at Camp Mack in Milford, July 20-25.

This year’s theme, from Luke 24:32-35 “Were Not Our Hearts Burning Within Us?” The week will focus on the account of Jesus walking with the two disciples on the road to Emmaus, opening the Scriptures to them and breaking bread with them.

St. Jude Parish, South Bend, Sacred Heart Parish, LaPorte, and St. Vincent de Paul Parish, Fort Wayne, are camp sponsors this year.

Eligible campers are youth going into the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

The cost will be $350 per camper, scholarships are being offered. Information and updates can be accessed at the www.stjudeparish.net.

my brothers and sisters in Christ can’t be here, and I am walking for them,” she said.

Bishop Rhoades further emphasized the necessity for prayer and liturgy to accompany the activities of the March. The prayer from the diocesan gathering, as well as the Mass the following day at the Verizon Center, he said, “arises from our hearts and thousands of others here in Washington today and tomorrow. Yes, we will march, but we will also pray. We offer our petitions to our Creator, and lovers of life.”

He remarked that “throughout human history, ever since the fall, there has been a struggle between the forces of good and evil, life and death.”

Speaking of the battle that raged at the beginning of the fourth century against the Body of Christ, he said, “The atrocious cruelty against Christians revealed the prevailing culture of death at that time. Yet, so many Christians refused to deny the faith and accepted martyrdom for the sake of Christ.”

One of these martyrs was a 13-year-old virgin, St. Agnes, whose feast day was celebrated on Jan. 21.

“St. Agnes was a beautiful young teenager who pledged her life to virginity, choosing Jesus as her only spouse,” Bishop Rhoades said. “Because she resisted the many young men who wanted to marry her, they turned her over to the governor for being a Christian. Agnes would not offer sacrifice to the false gods of the Romans nor forsake her virginity.”

“She stood up to the culture of death and suffered martyrdom for her faith,” Bishop Rhoades said. “She is a model for us today of faith, purity and courage. St. Agnes and all the martyrs teach us the power of love over hate and of life over death.”

Bishop Rhoades reminded all that God chooses the weak and lowly of this world, and “He chooses us today to have the love and courage of St. Agnes, to stand up for our faith, and yes, to march for life,” Bishop Rhoades said. “We cannot sit on the sidelines in the battle between the culture of life and the culture of death.”

“We must pray. We must vote. We must assist pregnant women,” he emphasized. “We must bring healing to women who have had abortions. And in all we do, we must have faith in the One who conquers death, faith in Christ whose blood reveals to us that man’s great vocation ‘consists in the gift of self.’ Christ’s Blood poured out as the gift of life, no longer a sign of death. … In the Eucharist, we drink the Blood of Christ and draw the strength to commit ourselves to the service of life.”

Bishop Rhoades also remarked that it is good to heed the words of Pope Francis in his apostolic exhortation, “The Joy of the Gospel” where he wrote, “Among the vulnerable for whom the Church wishes to care with particular love and concern are unborn children, the most defenseless and innocent among us.”

Bishop Rhoades also recognized the Franciscan Brothers Minor and Sisters Minor for their attendance, as well as thanking the diocesan seminarians from the Pontifical College Josephinum for their service at the Mass.

He then concluded the liturgy by reflecting on the Blessed Virgin Mary’s openness to life. “The Annunciation,” he said, “was the greatest ‘yes’ to life in human history, when Mary said ‘yes’ to conceive and bear the Savior of the world. And as patroness of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, under the title The Immaculate Conception, we ask her blessings upon us through our prayers today.”

The Catholic community from northern Indiana was well represented this year in the March for Life walk, which takes place annually in protest of the Supreme Court’s decision on Jan. 22, 1973 that legalized abortion in the United States. Over 400 members of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend and 320 students and faculty from the University of Notre Dame, Holy Cross College and Saint Mary’s College were able to attend the event. In total, more than 500,000 participants were estimated to have made the walk from the National Mall to the steps of the U. S. Supreme Court Building.

Unfortunately, even more participants would have been able to attend had it not been for the blizzard-like conditions that kept thousands throughout the country, including more than 200 from the University of Notre Dame, from traveling to Washington.

Those who were able to assemble to show their commitment for the Gospel of Life were greatly encouraged by the positive messages of hope and support offered by the leaders of the march. New President of the March for Life Jeanne Monahan led the demonstration with a revitalized focus on changing the culture of abortion through the use of social media, promoting active citizen involvement in local government and continued grassroots movements, and by emphasizing the beautiful gift available to women in offering their unwanted child for adoption.

Unlike recent years, the political speeches were shorter in length and fewer in number, but remained energizing and uplifting throughout.

Catholic musician Matt Maher was also added to this year’s lineup to play songs of inspiration for those in attendance.

As well as introducing new websites and apps to keep supporters actively involved in the cause throughout the year, the social media aspect of the march received a boost from none other than Pope Francis himself, who tweeted, “I join the March for Life in Washington with my prayers. May God help us respect all life, especially the most vulnerable.”

This proclamation was greeted with loud cheers and gracious thanks at his public support for the pro-life ministry all Catholics are called to share in together.

Father Steve Colchin, pastor of St. Louis Besancon Parish, New Haven, passes out an empty baby bottle to parishioner Dan Fink after Mass on Sunday. St. Louis Besancon is one of 17 parishes across the diocese participating in the Christ Child Society’s current fundraiser asking families to fill up over 5,500 bottles with their loose change. The Christ Child Society of Fort Wayne is a charitable organization of volunteers from many denominations devoted to serving at-risk children regardless of race or creed and has been devoted to improving the lives of children in need for over 100 years. Chairperson, Amy Urban, is hopeful the baby bottle fundraiser will be a huge success. “The need in our community is great,” she said.

Catholics invited to Reconciliation

BY TIM JOHNSON

“The Light Is On For You” is an initiative of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend to allow all Catholics to avail themselves of the sacrament of Reconciliation. Confession is a wonderful opportunity to set aside one’s sinful ways and to draw closer to our Lord. Confessions will be held on Wednesday, March 12, from 6-8 p.m. in every Catholic church in the diocese.

Pope Francis, in his weekly audience in St. Peter’s Square, Nov. 20, 2013, said that God never tires of forgiving those who repent and that having a priest say “I absolve you” reinforces belief in God’s mercy.

The pope said he knows some people are embarrassed to confess their sins to a priest, but it is the best path to spiritual healing and health.

Pope Francis reflected on the forgiveness of sins as one of the missions Jesus entrusted to His apostles and their successors. In a world often dominated by “individualism and subjectivism,” he said, many people — including many Catholics — say that God will forgive their sins and they have no need of the sacrament of Confession and the ministry of a priest.

“Certainly, God forgives every repentant sinner, but the Christian is bound to Christ and Christ is united to His Church,” the pope said. “God, in His sovereign mercy, forgives everyone, but He wanted those who belong to Christ and His Church to receive forgiveness through the community’s ministers.”

“Priests, too, need Confession, even bishops. We are all sinners. Even the pope goes to confession every two weeks because the pope, too, is a sinner,” the pope said. “My confessor hears what I say, offers me advice and forgives me. We all need this.”

Through the presence and words of a priest, he said, penitents have “the certainty of forgiveness in the name of the Church.”

The Church, he said, is not the “master” of forgiveness of sins, but is its servant and “rejoices every time it can offer this gift.”

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades has written, “The Light Is On For You is an invitation to all Catholics of a diocese to stop in church for prayer and the opportunity for Confession.”

The program began in the Archdiocese of Washington and has been adopted by other dioceses with much success. With this program, all parishes in a diocese open their churches on a particular evening for Confessions. The U.S. bishops endorse “The Light Is On For You” campaign.

Last year, priests of the diocese called “The Light Is On For You” a “time of grace.” It was very well received at the parishes.

Celebrate the Sacrament of Reconciliation

Rekindle the Fire diocesan men’s conference slated Feb. 22

BY TIM JOHNSON

Rekindle the Fire will host the Fourth Annual Diocesan Men’s Conference on Feb. 22, at the Allen County War Memorial Coliseum Exposition Center in Fort Wayne from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The roster of Catholic speakers includes Msgr. Michael Heintz, Hector Molina, John Leonetti and Doug Barry. Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades will conclude the conference with the celebration of Mass.

Msgr. Michael Heintz is a well-known teacher and pastor in the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, and his gifts as a profound thinker and relevant preacher are regularly on display in South Bend — whether at the University of Notre Dame, where he is director of the Master of Divinity Program, or at St. Matthew Cathedral, where he serves as rector. Ordained in 1993, he was first assigned to St. Charles Parish in Fort Wayne, and to Bishop Dwenger High School as chaplain. He was then assigned by Bishop John M. D’Arcy to St. Matthew Cathedral and further studies at the University of Notre Dame in 1998, eventually moving on to teach at three of the four Catholic high schools in the diocese, before his current work at the University of Notre Dame and St. Matthew Cathedral.

Hector Molina is a lay Catholic speaker and apologist on the staff of “Catholic Answers,” the most well-known Catholic apologetics apostolate in America. With over 20 years of experience in professional pastoral ministry and lay leadership in the Church, Molina also serves as a full-time speaker conducting parish seminars, missions, retreats and conferences throughout the United States and abroad.

Molina is a devoted husband and father of five. He has developed a solid reputation as one of the most passionate and articulate apologists and defenders of the Catholic faith today.

Doug Barry is the founder and director of RADIX, a Catholic apostolate founded in 1992. He has spent the last 20 years touring nationally and internationally, spreading and defending the Catholic faith with a dynamic and explosive style, and is perhaps best known for his powerful one-man performance of the Passion of Christ, seen regularly on EWTN and other Christian television channels around the world.

Barry told Today’s Catholic his topic would be “the necessity of a man being spiritually battle ready to fulfill his duty and to fight, protect and defend the souls of those who have been entrusted to his care.”

“By the grace of God,” Barry said, “I believe that my talks will help make men more aware of the reality of the spiritual fight, and...”

will encourage and strengthen them to engage in it more fully and with a deeper commitment and zeal, having greater recourse to the spiritual wealth that the Church has given us.”

He said every man should come to this conference “because a man needs to know what he is dealing with when it comes to the attacks of the world, the flesh and the devil, and he needs to know what his duty is as a man.”

“A man who uses those lives, those souls that God has entrusted to his care and would fight for them in the physical world, would and should fight for them in the spiritual world,” he stressed. “This conference will help strengthen, embolden and board member for numerous other Catholic apostolates and other subcommittees of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Cost of the conference is $35. Registration is available at rekin- dethefire.net. More information is available from Joe Witulski at (260) 452-6875.

Pope says Internet a ‘gift from God,’ should be used for solidarity

BY CAROL GLATZ

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Like the good Samaritan, who stopped on the road to help a person in need, travelers along today’s communicac- tion highways should offer support to those they encounter there, Pope Francis said.

“The digital world can be an environment rich in humanity; a network not of wires but of people,” he said in his message for World Communications Day.

“Modern means of communica- tion, especially the Internet, offer ‘immense possibilities for encounter and solidarity,’” he said. Because of that, he said, the Internet “is a gift from God.”

“Communication at the service of an authentic culture of encounter” is the theme of this year’s World Communications Day, which most dioceses will mark June 1, the Sunday before Pentecost. The mes- sage, released Jan. 23, was dated Jan. 24, the feast of St. Francis de Sales, the patron saint of journalists.

“Good communication helps us grow closer, to know one another better, and ultimately to grow in unity,” the pope said.

“The walls which divide us can be broken down only if we are prepared to listen to one another,” he said. “A culture of encounter demands that we be ready not only to give, but also to receive.”

Good communicators must take the time necessary to listen to others and, more than just tolerate, truly accept them, he said.

“Engaging in dialogue does not mean renouncing our own identities and traditions, but the claim that they are not valid or absolute,” the pope said in his message.

ArchbishopClaudeCelli, presi- dent of the Pontifical Council for Social Communications, told report- ers that the pope is not proposing “a relativism” of the faith, but is contin- uing his predecessors’ calls for the Church to engage with a multi- cultural and multi-religious world.

“I can’t have an outlook of being the only one and the absolute,” ArchbishopCelli said. “I am just a concrete incarnation of that truth that is Jesus Christ and His Gospel,” which people live out in myriad ways in different cultures and tradi- tions across the world.

Pope Francis, in his message, quoted Pope Benedict XVI’s 2013 World Communications Day text, which says effective Christian wit- ness is about our willingness to be available to others “by patiently and respectfully engaging their questions and doubts as they advance in their search for the truth and the meaningfulness of their existence — not by ‘bombarding people with religious messages.”

Parishes enriched by ARISE process gear up for Season 4

BY KAY COZAD

The Diocese of Fort Wayne- South Bend, partnering with RENEW International, introduced a new initiative in fall of 2013 that has enriched the lives of over 6,000 faith seekers in the area. The initiative, ARISE Together in Christ, is a three-year parish centered process focused on spiritual renewal, evangeliza- tion and adult formation in which groups of eight- to 12-member small Christian communities formed in parishes across the diocese.

Since September of 2012 ARISE participants across the diocese have experienced a renewal of faith and a deeper understanding of their relationship with God and their fellow man in the first three of five six-week sessions of the process.

The sessions, called “seasons,” began with “Encountering Christ Today,” Season II, “Living Our Hearts” and Season III. “In the Footsteps of Christ,” followed closely and currently parish groups are enthusiastically gear- ing up for Season IV, “New Heart, New Spirit,” that will coincide with the Lenten season this year.

These faith-sharing groups have met regularly in homes, parishes, and youth groups to deepen their faith, develop a closer relationship with Christ, grow in community and reach out in service to others.

With the guidance and instruction of trained facilitators who were provided with training and information to prepare for each session utilizing the well-orga- nized materials and available training, the groups studied Scripture and its application to their lives.

Each season has offered materials that guide the faith-sharing group through various styles of prayer, Scripture reading, reflection, faith sharing, creative action and socialization.

In addition to ongoing sup- port and online resources, the RENEW Web-based organiza- tion continues to provide specific training workshops for facilita- tors and parish leaders for each season.

Now as Season III has come to a close RENEW International has gathered survey results of how the process is impacting the faith lives of the 6,000 active ARISE participants in 58 parishes across the diocese. The response shows just how this faith renewal pro- cess has inspired the faithful to Christ-centered action.

In Bremen, one of the ARISE groups at St. Dominic reached out to those tough times by hosting a community Thanksgiving dinner in their parish hall. Leftover food was sent to Hope Ministries in South Bend where a member had a member begin teaching English classes at Hearts and Hands. Another helped with trick- or-treat at the Bremen Healthcare Center and made donations to Kiwanis for needs of local children.

St. Joseph Parish, Fort Wayne, ARISE groups also offered a Thanksgiving meal for their neighborhood in order for the community to come together in Christ. It was a huge success.

Living their faith in Albion, the members of the ARISE group at Blessed Sacrament Parish visits senior citizens and shut-ins, which they find most rewarding. And two par- ticipants from the group at Our Lady of Good Hope in Fort Wayne were edified when they carried out some of the social justice teachings from their group by paying for an elderly woman’s breakfast one morn- ing. When the woman was told of the kindness she began to cry because it was her birthday and she was alone with no one to eat breakfast with.

As these small faith-sharing group members grow in faith, community and service, the lead- ers at Christ the King speak for all saying, “The groups continue to mention that their time together is like time with close friends and family, supporting each other through the ups and downs of life.”

Presentation of the Lord

Presentation also placed the promise of salvation, bestowed by God, beginning with the chosen people. The child was placed within the stream of life among the chosen people. It was to place the infant fully and personally with God. It was more than derived. The feast of the Presentation of the Lord is not intended to consecrate the church. Instead, however, this weekend we see what is happening not in and of the church, but with and through the church.

Barbara’s exclamation is the first reading is from the Book of Malachi. Through this prophecy, God promises the chosen people that they will receive a messenger, divinely sent and empowered. He will be perfect and powerful. He will be perfect and powerful. He will obey God. They saw themselves as members of the chosen people with all the obligations derived.

Tragedies can be severe mercies for individuals or communities, which spur us on to humility, repentance and dependence on God. Sadness and struggles bring with them often the gift of wisdom and discernment, of knowledge and Truth. When we realize we cannot control everything, we learn to rely on our Father.

Come in from the cold: finding mercy in the city

Christian Gapechi

Project Home, the local faith-based program that houses families like Christina’s who are on a waiting list for a more permanent shelter. “It’s one thing to preach the Gospel, but we also have to live it.” That’s the message behind Kerry Weber’s new book published by Loyola Press, “Mercy in the City: How to Feed the Hungry, Give Drink to the Thirsty, Visit the Imprisoned, and Keep Your Day Job.” In it, Kerry, the 31-year-old managing editor of the Jesuit magazine America, chronicles her attempt to practice all the corporal works of mercy while maintaining her regular life.

“Mercy-ing, she says, begins by being present, by looking for little ways you can dignify a stranger or lend a hand. It begins by following the lead of a church that opens its doors and rolls out the cots on the coldest nights.

Sainthood of the Week

Colette of Corbie

February 7

Born Nicolette Boellet in France, this reforming saint Colette, her nickname. She entered and left several religious orders, she discerned that God wanted her to return Franciscan religious to their original rule of strict poverty. She was empowered in her reforms by the schismatic Benedict XIII, recognized in France as pope. Considered the founder of the Colette Poor Clares, Colette also helped inaugurate reforms among Franciscan friars. She spent every Friday fasting and meditating on Christ’s Passion. After reportedly saving the life of a woman dying in childbirth, Colette was considered a patron of expectant mothers.
The death of ‘pro-choice’

Every since Congress first approved the Hyde Amendment in 1976, a nation divided on abortion has generally been able to agree on at least one thing: The government should not force Americans to fund or promote abortion against their will. Such coercion would violate both “life” and “choice,” the paramout values on both sides of this dispute. So for 37 years, Congress has approved (and, in many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) Congress has approved (and, in many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases, annually reaffirmed) numerous provisions to prevent many cases. At a recent subcommittee hearing in Congress, a bill to establish this policy more firmly and consistently in federal law drew hostile reactions that suggest this truce is over.

The legislation is the No Taxpayer Funding for Abortion Act (HR 7, S. 946). It would apply the policy of the Hyde amendment across all government programs, including the new Affordable Care Act (ACA), whose implementation has produced serious eavasions and violations of that policy. The Hyde policy has long enjoyed broad support among Americans, including American women. In one poll taken during Congress’s consideration of the ACA, most respondents opposed measures to make Americans pay for abortion coverage with their taxes or health premiums, and over two-thirds opposed abortion in their own health coverage — and on each question, women were more opposed than men. So one might think a law reflecting this consensus should sail through Congress.

Instead, HR 7 was the subject of loud protests and gross misrepresentations. Supporters of tax-funded abortion in the District of Columbia held a press conference to condemn the hearing, and protested outside the hearing room when the bill was approved — because it simply continues the current ban on publicly funded abortions in D.C. Prostuter revealed “Where are the women?” to protest the subcommittee’s all-male membership — although one of two pro-life witnesses, Helen Alvare, is a female law professor, and all subcommittee members opposing the bill were male. A witness against HR 7, Susan Wood of George Washington University, called it a “mean-spirited” attempt to “interfere” and “meddle” in women’s lives. She and other opponents very simply not interested in the difference between prohibiting something and declining to pay for it.

An abortion movement that once trumpeted privacy — the “right to be let alone” to make their own choices — now wants to inject abortion into all our lives as a public good demanding our support. But it is the height of hypocrisy to cry “Let me alone!” as you pick your neighbor’s pocket. Abraham Lincoln faced a similar problem, as he tried without success to avoid civil war by compromising with those supporting slavery. The slave states rejected his offer to prevent slavery’s expansion, while leaving it alone where it was legal. He asked: What would satisfy his opponents? “This, and this only — cease to call slavery a sin.” And he added: “This would satisfy his opponents? “This, and this only — cease to call slavery a sin.” And he added: “This would satisfy his opponents? “This, and this only: cease to demand a full national recognition of it, as a legal right, and a social blessing.”

Substitute “abortion” for “slavery” and you have a sketch of today’s “abortion rights” agenda. Congress’s consideration of the agenda won’t take a civil war — just pro-life citizens who inform themselves on the issue, and make their voices heard in Congress.

— as a matter of fact. God. And children. Children born are our hope in their innocence and promise. They remind us of the Eden that once was, and the heaven that will be for each of us who choose God. When we focus on them we find a piece of heaven on earth.

There is so much to be thankful for, for the little things, for the joy of raising children, for the love of God, for the grace of life. When we focus on them we find a piece of heaven on earth.

Each day we have the opportunity to help our children grow in grace and knowledge.

Our greatest achievement is not climbing to the corporate top, or running and winning a marathon or attaining any other honorable goal. It is living our vocation with courage, even in the midst of a fallen world. The “magnam opus” of parents, regardless of their profession, is the raising of their children to know, love and serve God in this world, to be happy with Him in the next. And the wonderful thing about that is that not only do we have the graces to do so well because of our Baptism, but this job, this vocation is overflowing with joy. The joy of raising children well is not only supernatural “up there” joy but also common, simple every day, “down here” joy.

The same eight-year-old daughter I referenced at the beginning of this column spontaneously informed me moments ago that the dog’s legs are four inches long, her head is three inches and her back is nine. … I turned to see a tolerant puppy on my daughter’s lap, being “tape-measured” patiently. The puppy looked up at me with an expression of wonder, that should it be put into human words most likely would be, “Really?”

And I laughed. How could I not?

This little girl invited me to dance with her yesterday. She shared a half a cookie with me the day before. She asked me if I had God’s favorite foods. She performed a magic show with her sister (making that patient puppy disappear).

Children are such hopes and gifts for the world.

We cannot focus only on the tragedies, sadness and other grim realities, because once upon a time, there was a banana in the kitchen, and that’s reality too.

MINNESOTA HOCKEY OLYMPIAN CONNECTS FAITH AND COMPETITION

In the midst of final preparations for the Olympics, U.S. women’s hockey player Anne Schleper said faith definitely plays a role in her games. In an interview three weeks before the opening ceremony of the Winter Games in Sochi, Russia, Schleper, a Catholic who is a native of St. Cloud, Minn., said it would be easy to idolize the evaluation of her coaches or a potential medal around her neck. But she is humbled to remind herself that she plays to glorify God. Schleper, who was named to the U.S. women’s Olympic hockey team roster Jan. 1, began playing hockey at age 4 in the pre-kindergarten program at the St. Cloud Municipal Athletic Complex.

St. Jude Eagles gearing up for CYO tournament

FORT WAYNE — Despite the polar vortex wreaking havoc on the practice schedule and cancelling games this season, Coach Josh Blauvelt’s St. Jude Eagles have about a .500 record right now and his team is gearing up for the year-end Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) tournament in less than a month.

The Eagles finished in the middle of the pack at both the preseason Thanksgiving tournament and Queen of Angels Invitational over the Christmas break.

“We had a slow start, but are finally headed in the right direction,” Blauvelt said.

He continued, “We play a lot of city middle schools on our schedule, so we have been taking it on the chin, but I think it is paying off.”

According to the Department of Health assistant director, every team’s goal this season is to get a second- or third-place seed so as not to meet powerhouse St. Vincent until the final game of the CYO championship. And St. Jude is off to a good start with wins over St. Charles and St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth for a 2-0-conference record.

The Eagles are 12-strong and are led by Grant Richardson in scoring. Drew Deiser and Alex Campbell both top six foot and are the backbone of the defense, while guards Eric Doyle and Greg Lapan round out the starting lineup for St. Jude.

“We are really good when we are pressing and pushing the ball up the court. We also have a nice half-court defense,” Blauvelt detailed.

His father-in-law volunteer Blauvelt, who played CYO ball when he attended St. Rose, a year ago when St. Jude was in need of a seventh-grade coach and moved up with the squad this season.

Winter weather woes cancel ICCL games

SOUTH BEND — Mother Nature was the big winner in the Inter-City Catholic League schedule as the schools, roads and gyms closed because of severe weather this past weekend.

“Without question, the conditions were not safe due to drifting and blowing snow,” explained Tony Violi, president of the Inter-City Catholic League (ICCL).

“We were in contact with the high schools and host schools for our younger athletes and we couldn’t be assured safe places to play.”

“This is the second complete weekend we have lost this season and rescheduling is a concern,” added Violi. “We will try to play all of the games, but unfortunately time and availability of the gyms may not cooperate.”

The tables at right are the up to date standings for the varsity teams of Notre Dame Right to Life Group.

WASHINGTON (CNS) —
Braving near-record low temperatures and Arctic-type wind chills, thousands of young people from across the Archdiocese of Washington and the United States gathered in Washington for a rally and Mass prior to the annual Jan. 22 March for Life.

“We can help the world understand that no one is an accident, all have a purpose and are loved because each person has the face of Jesus Christ,” Father Michael Paris, a parochial vicar at St. Patrick Parish in Rockville, Md., told more than 10,000 youth who gathered for the Archdiocese of Washington’s Youth Rally and Mass for Life at the Verizon Center in downtown Washington.

The priest was the homilist at the Mass, which was celebrated by Cardinal Donald W. Wuerl of Washington. Concelebrants included several bishops, including Washington Auxiliary Bishop Martin D. Holley, and more than 160 priests.

“I believe God wants to use us to end abortion,” Father Paris said. “If people believed that, they would never think that killing a child could be an option. ... Abortion cannot stand if each person believes this.”

The Mass and Rally for Life is traditionally held on the morning of the annual March for Life, which this year marks the 41st anniversary of the Supreme Court’s 1973 Roe v. Wade decision that legalized abortion on demand in the United States. The same day the archdiocese also sponsored a pro-life Youth Rally and Mass for Life that drew thousands of mostly out-of-town marchers to the Stadium Armory in Washington. Washington Auxiliary Bishop Barry C. Knestout was the main celebrant of that Mass.

Cardinal Wuerl, in speaking with young people at the Verizon Center before the Mass, remarked: “Considering its freezing outside, the thousands of youth here (at the rally and Mass) shows how much value they place on human life.”

“The basis of all respect is recognizing the right to life,” he said.

“The young people here are the voices of life. They are the future.”

Among the “voices of life” at the rally and Mass was William Bolin, a member of St. Andrew Apostle Parish in Silver Spring, Md. He said the frigid temperatures would not deter young people who defend life.

“Snow or no snow, no matter what, we are pro-life, and it is crucial to show the world that youth are pro-life,” he said. “Despite all the obstacles, we will be here.”

The inclement weather did not keep a group of young pro-lifers from St. Martin of Tours Parish in Gaithersburg, Md., from attending the event.

“Because of the weather, our buses were canceled and we had to be creative to get here,” said Theresa Mondoa, a youth leader from the parish. “We checked because the kids are very committed to this and look forward to this day when they stand up for life.”

During his homily, Father Paris encouraged young people to be proud to “protect life (and) ... stand up for our unborn brothers and sisters.”

“He (God) loves each unborn child and has a plan for their life, no matter how hard a situation they might come from,” the priest said.

“But before we can help anyone else believe this, we have to know this ourselves.”

Father Paris told young not to be discouraged in sharing the pro-life message with others.

“How can we help the world around us understand? We are so young, so weak, the culture of death is so strong,” he said. “Say not, ‘I am too young.’ ... The Holy Spirit will give us everything we need to make this happen.”

Cardinal Wuerl said the rally and Mass and participation in the March for Life offer ways “to renew our commitment to recognize and value the dignity of each human life. We recognize the warmth of your commitment in contrast to what is going on outside.”

Also during the Mass, Archbishop Carlo Maria Viganò, apostolic nuncio to the United States, read a message of support to the pro-lifers from Pope Francis. He said the pope was “most grateful to all those who take part in this outstanding public witness to the right to life.” Participants at the Verizon Center rally offered Pope Francis a thunderous standing ovation.

Father William Byrne, pastor of St. Peter Parish on Capitol Hill and the Archdiocese of Washington’s secretary for pastoral ministry and social concerns, opened the rally with a prayer.

“We come here to praise and worship God and to defend life,” he said. “Today is dedicated to the dignity of the human person.”

Young people in attendance said they were committed to seeing an end to abortion.

“I am motivated to see this terrible thing called abortion stopped,” said Kaycie Willard, a junior at St. Andrew of Mechernich High School in Festerville, Md., and a member of St. Joseph Parish in Beltsville, Md.

Susan Lea, a member of St. Francis of Assisi Parish in Derwood, Md., said that young people have an important role to play in defining life.

“This is the generation that is going to change the culture of death,” she told the Catholic Standard, Washington’s archdiocesan newspaper. “The message that everybody has a right to life is a message that young people will pass on to their peers.”

More than 400 people from the Diocese of Wichita, Kan., made a 24-hour bus journey through snow and ice to attend the youth rally, Mass and March for Life.

“Despite the chill, we have pledged to stand for life,” said Cheryl Greer, a member of the group. “This is our pilgrimage, and we offer it as penance, a prayer to end abortion.”

Cleopatre Thelus and Amande Cholodewitsch, Cleveland college students from Cleveland, traveled to Washington by themselves. “I just wanted to be with my fellow Catholics and stand for life,” Thelus said.

Cholodewitsch noted that this was her fourth year attending the rally and Mass.

“I’m glad that it’s cold and there is snow — that is more suffering we can offer up to end abortion,” she said. “I keep coming back because I’m not going until Roe v. Wade is gone.”
