TODAY'S CATHOLIC
The Third Option builds better marriages

BY TIM JOHNSON

FORT WAYNE — Four Fort Wayne parishes — Our Lady of Good Hope, St. Charles Borromeo, St. Jude and St. Vincent de Paul — have combined efforts to offer a ministry of hope, healing and help for married couples. And those married from other area parishes are invited to participate as well.

“The goal of The Third Option is to build better marriages by promoting growth and reconciliation,” said Natalie Kohrman, the coordinator of The Third Option and member of Our Lady of Good Hope Parish.

“Each 14-session cycle,” she said, “covers a comprehensive set of tools that couples can use to develop better levels of understanding, conflict-resolution, and trust while also learning more effective communication skills.”

Kohrman works with Scott and Cathy McLeish of St. Vincent de Paul Parish as a trained couple at the meetings.

The sessions are held at Bishop Dwenger High School in Fort Wayne on Monday evenings from 7-9 p.m. and attendees enter through Door No. 1, the main office.

“While this is not a counseling program, it does provide a peer-to-peer ministry in which couples can learn from other couples who have overcome marital difficulties,” Kohrman said.

Kohrman told Today’s Catholic the program is intended to help married couples whether they have been married a few years or many; whether both are Catholic or not; whether they are looking to build on a strong foundation or are in crisis.

“We are often asked if couples who are engaged or couples living together but not married can attend,” she noted. “Unfortunately, out of respect for the sanctity of Marriage and the spirit in which the ministry was created, this ministry is available only to those who are married.”

In explaining what happens at a meeting, Kohrman began with the second hour of the meeting. “During this time, a 25-minute workshop on one of 14 topics is given by trained volunteers,” she said.

The workshop offers tools and suggestions for how to deal with the common problems encountered in marriage. In addition, a trained couple also gives a witness on the same topic.

The witness aims to connect with people on an emotional level. People can see themselves in the situations that the couples describe and may think, “Wow, if they can get through that, then maybe we can work through this.”

Kohrman said the witness provides hope — a glimpse of what it looks like on the other side of a marital struggle. “At the end of this hour, those in attendance are challenged to set a goal that they can work on in the two weeks between meetings,” she said.

“This is the heart of the ministry — offering people a chance to focus in on their marriage by putting it first and really working at it,” Kohrman said. “Goal-setting is always geared toward self-change which is one of the main premises of the program.”

Kohrman said the first hour of the meeting depends on whether it’s an attendee’s first meeting or not. Any newcomers are welcomed by volunteers and provided with a 50-minute orientation, which covers the basic premises of the program such as confidentiality and self-change. At the same time, those who have attended a meeting before quickly review the previous meeting’s topic in another room.

“Although no one is ever forced to speak, this is an opportunity for the group to share.”

POPE FRANCIS TO VISIT HOLY LAND

BY CHRISTOPHER LUSHIS

WARSAW — Congregation of Marian’s of the Immaculate Conception priest Father Michael Gaitley, a prominent author, theologian and retreat leader best known for his book “33 Days to Morning Glory,” spoke to an assembly of priests and offered a personal interview on the purpose and meaning of consecrating oneself “to Jesus through Mary,” on Thursday, May 8, at Sacred Heart Parish in Warsaw.

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades, who was in attendance for Father Gaitley’s speech, is planning to renew the consecration the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend to the Blessed Mother on Aug. 15, the feast of the Assumption. Bishop Rhoades is encouraging all members of the diocese to complete Marian consecrations using the method of “33 Days to Morning Glory.”

St. Louis de Montfort formally established the most traditional method of Marian consecration, which seeks to bring men and women into deeper union with both Mary and Jesus. Father Gaitley explained, “St. Louis was the first to take all the threads of Marian consecration, popularize them and synthesize them. The way I look at it, ‘33 Days to Morning Glory’ is written in the same spirit, meant to combine and promote the main streams of Marian devotion that have
Embrace the Pope Francis challenge

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY

BY BISHOP KEVIN C. RHOADES

In the Commencement Speech at Mount Saint Mary’s University and at Baccalaureate Masses at Holy Cross College, Saint Mary’s College, the University of Saint Francis, and the University of Notre Dame, Bishop Rhoades exhorted the graduates to “embrace the Pope Francis challenge.” The bishop incorporated and adapted the following thoughts in the talks and homilies to the new graduates:

My message to you today is inspired by our Holy Father, Pope Francis. He is challenging the whole Church, and especially young people like you, to be missionary disciples. Pope Francis doesn’t want us to be a self-referential Church, one that is comfortable and turned in on itself. He is calling us to go out, to go forth, like the first disciples of Jesus, to bring the joy of the Gospel to others, especially to those on the edges or peripheries of society: the poor, the needy, the suffering, the weak, and the vulnerable. I like to call this the “Pope Francis challenge.”

You have been equipped here at this Catholic university to accept the Pope Francis challenge: to go forth as Christ’s disciples with the joy and courage of faith. This means being men and women of hope, not pessimistic or indifferent, not mere observers of life, but involved, protagonists of the Gospel. True disciples are witnesses of hope: hope in the triumph of love over hate, of grace over sin, and of life over death. This hope is not self-focused. It is not founded in a person, not founded in a political or an economic system. It is a hope founded in a person, a Divine Person, who assumed our human nature. It is hope in the Incarnate Son of God, Jesus of Nazareth, the crucified and risen Christ.

Graduates: the Church, the Body of Christ, needs you. We need your talents, your enthusiasm, and your energy. The Pope is asking you to swim against the tide and to rebel against a culture that sees everything as temporary and that ultimately believes that you are incapable of responsibility and that you are incapable of true love. They’re wrong. Reject this false belief. You are capable of responsibility, commitment, and true love. The Lord is calling you to be His disciples, disciples with a mission: to bring His mercy and love into the world, to bring the Gospel that breaks down evil and violence and overcomes selfishness and hatred. I encourage you to embrace the Pope Francis challenge, to be generous with Christ and His Church, to bear witness to the truth of the Gospel, the truth that sets us free.

You go forth from a place that honors (by its name) the holy Mother of God. Mary was the perfect disciple of the Lord. “She let herself be guided by the Holy Spirit on a journey of faith toward a destiny of service and fruitfulness” (Evangelii Gaudium 287). She teaches us so much about how to live life with faith and courage. Mary teaches us the revolutionary nature of love and that “humility and tenderness are not virtues of the weak but of the strong” (EG 288).

Graduates: I invite you to say a little prayer to our Lady before you leave this university. All of us who call Mary our Mother can be confident that, like the beloved disciple to whom Jesus entrusted His mother from the cross, we are all disciples equally beloved. May you go forth with that confidence and act on it with generosity and courage as missionary disciples! I pray that you leave here with Mary, your loving Mother, always at your side, surrounding you with God’s love! Congratulations, graduates! We’re proud of you! May God bless you always!
Redeemer Radio buys Michiana FM station

SOUTH BEND — Redeemer Radio, a nonprofit Catholic Radio apostolate in the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, is pleased to announce that it has entered into an agreement to purchase 95.7 FM a regional station covering the entire Michiana area. Redeemer is purchasing WAOR, 95.7 FM licensed to Bremen from Talking Stick Communications for an undisclosed price.

In announcing the purchase Dave Stevens, executive director of Redeemer Radio, said, “Redeemer Radio Michiana will be a local Catholic radio apostolate. We will have local offices and staff, and focus on serving the greater Michiana area — explaining and promoting the Catholic faith and thus seek to change lives. Listeners will hear about events and information from their parishes and area priests, and they will be able to listen to local and national speakers who inspire and teach about the faith. As a 501(c)3 nonprofit, we’ll promote other Catholic nonprofits and many pro-life organizations free of charge.”

Talking Stick Communications CFO John Lapehn said of the agreement, “as hard as the decision was to sell 95.7FM, we are so pleased that the station will be owned by such a local community oriented organization. In the last several months we’ve learned of the effective work and tremendous growth that Redeemer Radio has had in the Fort Wayne area over the last eight years and we are glad we can help them expand their footprint throughout the entire diocese.”

Mike Landrigan, Redeemer Radio board chair said of the purchase, “Many in the Michiana area have been praying for permanent Catholic Radio for years. As early as 2006 members of a local organization, the St. Thomas More Foundation were broadcasting Catholic Radio on an AM station. In 2010, four members of the foundation joined the Redeemer Radio board with the specific goal we’ve announced today. Since May of 2013 there has been no Catholic Radio in the South Bend area. We are grateful for the prayers and hard work of so many, now that we can bring local Catholic Radio – Redeemer Radio to a large regional audience in the middle of the FM dial Michiana.”

Talking Stick Communications will retain the call letters WAOR. The sale is subject to FCC approval, which is expected in 90 to 120 days. Both organizations have also signed a local operating agreement, which would allow Redeemer Radio to begin operating 95.7 FM prior to formal regulatory approval. Future operating plans under that agreement will be announced soon.

Come since St. Louis’ model. The way it is written also provides an easier to use and updated version from the traditional method.” He elaborated, “It is easier because the traditional model uses lots of litanes and prayers that at times can distract or overwhelm the reader. This version actually has more prayer, but it involves heart-pounding prayer that reflects upon the various teachings of Marian consecration and how to incorporate them into daily life.

This consecration seeks to engage all people, encompassing those at various stages of spiritual- and theological knowledge. “Each day there is only a few pages reading, which allows for deeper reflection as you ponder the teachings of the saints, leading you to formally acknowledging and accepting Mary as your Spiritual Mother. While it is true that she already is our spiritual Mother, in her gentleness, she does not force her spiritual maternity on us. We have to give her our ‘yes,’ and she knows what the power of a ‘yes’ can do. When we say ‘yes’ to her as our Mother, it unleashes the full power of her motherly care, mediation and tenderness in our lives.” He continued, “According to St. Louis, total consecration to Mary is the quickest, easiest, surest way to holiness. While some might argue that this is not the easiest way to holiness, mothers have a way of making even the most challenging of life’s monthly trials and challenges of car- rying the cross into something sweet. For example, when you have to take a bitter pill, your mother puts honey on it to make it taste better or when you scrape your knee, mothers kiss it to make it feel better.”

Father Gaitley describes his book as an updated version because “it takes the consecration and puts it squarely in the teaching of the mind of the Church.” In addition to incorporating the teaching of St. Louis de Montfort, Father Gaitley dedicates the first two months of meditation to the Marian thoughts of St. Maximilian Kolbe, Blessed Mother Teresa, and St. John Paul, followed by a summation and incantation of the month-long reflections. These additions include a more Scripture based awareness of Mary as an instrument of God’s grace, which seeks to transfix the focus on Christ in order to come to a greater understanding of His thirst from the cross and on accepting His mercy.

Franciscans make history as they establish new province in US

ELLIOTT CITY, Md. — The Provincial Chapter of the Franciscan Friars Conventual of the eastern United States convened in Buffalo, N.Y., May 5-9. Held every four years, the Provincial Chapter of 2014 made history as it united the former Provinces of Immaculate Conception (founded in 1872) and St. Anthony of Padua (founded in 1906) into the new Our Lady of the Angels Province.

Formally established on May 5, the territory of the new Our Lady of the Angels Province stretches from Ontario, Canada, to the eastern United States, from New England to Florida. The Province also includes Costa Rica and custodies in Brazil, Great Britain and Ireland. In the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, the friars serve at St. Francis of Assisi Novitiate in Mishawaka.

Conventual Franciscan Father James McCurry, the first minister provincial of the new Our Lady of the Angels Province, was installed on May 7. The following friars were elected to serve in the new provincial administration: Father Brad Milunski, vicar provincial, Father Richard-Jacob Forcier, secretary, Father Mitchell Sawicki, treasurer, Father Anthony Kall, definitor, Father Jude Surowiec, definitor, Brother James Moore, definitor, Father Donald Gryzynski, definitor, and Father Michael Heine, definitor.

Former minister provincial of the Immaculate Conception Province, Father Justin Biase, and former dean of St. Mary’s Seminary School of Theology, Father Timothy Kulbicki, were elected delegates to the general chapter of the order.

Numbering over 200 friars, the Our Lady of the Angels Province will assemble again in the second session of Chapter 2014, Aug. 4-8.

Over 170 Franciscan Friars Conventual assembled in Buffalo, N.Y., May 5-9, to form the new Our Lady of the Angels Province.

Current threats to religious liberty

A fact sheet

WASHINGTON (USCCB) — Pope Benedict XVI spoke in 2012 about his worry that religious liberty in the United States is being weakened. He called religious liberty the “most cherished of American freedoms.” Unfortunately, our most cherished freedom is under threat:

HHS mandate for sterilization, contraception and abortion-inducing drugs

The mandate of the Department of Health and Human Services forces religious institutions to facilitate and/or fund a product contrary to their own moral teaching. Further, the federal government tries to define which religious institutions are “religious enough” to merit protection of their religious liberty.

Catholic foster care and adoption services

Boston, San Francisco, the District of Columbia and the State of Illinois have driven local Catholic Charities out of the business of providing adoption or foster care services — by revoking their licenses, by ending their government contracts, or both — because those charities refused to place children with same-sex couples or unmarried opposite-sex couples who cohabit.

State immigration laws

Several states have passed laws that forbid what they deem as “harboring” of undocumented immigrants — and what the Church deems Christian charity and pastoral care to these immigrants.

Discrimination against small church congregations

New York City adopted a policy that barred the Bronx Household of Faith and other churches from renting public schools on weekends for worship services, even though non-religious groups could rent the same schools for many other uses. Litigation in this case continues.

Discrimination against Catholic humanitarian services

After years of excellent performance by the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops’ Migration and Refugee Services (MRS) in administering contract services for victims of human trafficking, the federal government changed its contract specifications to require MRS to provide or refer for contraceptive and abortion services in violation of Catholic teaching.

Christian students on campus

In its over-100-year history, the University of California Hastings College of Law has denied student organization status to only one group, the Christian Legal Society, because it required its leaders to be Christian and to abstain from sexual activity outside of marriage. Is our most cherished freedom truly under threat?

Yes. Pope Benedict XVI recognized just two years ago that various attempts to limit the freedom of religion in the U.S. are particularly concerning. The threat to religious freedom is larger than any single case or issue and has its roots in secularism in our culture. The Holy Father has asked for the laity to have courage to counter secularism that would “delegitimize the Church’s participation in public debate about the issues which are determining the future of American society.”

What can you do to ensure the protection of religious freedom at home and abroad?

The U.S. Bishops have called for a Fortnight for Freedom from June 21 to July 4. Visit www.fortnight4freedom.org for more information on this important time of prayer, education and action in support of religious freedom.

Boko Haram ramps up Nigeria violence

WASHINGTON (USCCB) — In 2013, the U.S. State Department designated Boko Haram and its more radical splinter group, Ansaru, as Foreign Terrorist Organizations. Both extremist movements claim ties to Islam that are repudiated by mainstream Muslim organizations. Boko Haram, whose name translates into “Western education is sinful,” aims to establish an Islamic state in Nigeria. To do so, they have stepped up their attacks against Nigerian government offices, media, educational and religious institutions, both Muslim and Christian. Ansaru seems to target Christian churches. The Nigerian government appears unable to control the violence and is slow to address the underlying issues feeding it.

2013 was a particularly bloody year. Boko Haram militants murdered scores of students and teachers, including some sleeping in an infantry barracks. Armed with powerful weapons, riding in trucks, and sometimes wearing military garb, some 500 militants overran a military base in December. In February 2014, Boko Haram militants killed over 120 people in a predominantly Christian village in northeastern Nigeria.

Possible ties to al Qaeda in the Islamic Maghreb (AQIM) mean that violence is likely to escalate and spread to neighboring countries. In the past, a number of Christian churches have been targeted, including bombings of a Catholic church on Christmas Day and a Protestant church at Easter, killing many parishioners and wounding dozens. Boko Haram has also targeted Nigerian Muslims who accuse of being too secular or moderate. Religious institutions are not their only targets. In 2012, the movement attacked a building housing Nigeria’s major daily newspaper and two other newspapers, ostensibly because of what they viewed as inaccuracy in media reporting. With gunshots and blasts directed at schools, students are afraid to continue their education. Police and military have also been targeted. It is estimated that Boko Haram is responsible for the deaths of over 1,200 people since 2009.

Nigeria is the most populous nation in Africa and the seventh most populous in the world. It over 170 million people are roughly evenly divided between Christians and Muslims. Emerging from a colonial past in 1960, ethnic and religious allegiances remain strong, and have been exploited to provoke violence and conflict. Nigeria is the 12th largest producer of oil in the world, but disputes, sometimes violent, over who controls and benefits from the sale of oil have increased tensions. Although Nigeria has a per capita income of more than $2,700, 70 percent of the population lives below the poverty line. In fact, oil wealth has fueled rampant corruption. Inequality and corruption are exploited by extremists in gaining sympathizers and recruits. The government struggles to take action, but is often seen as unresponsive. The targeted attacks by Boko Haram aim to fuel sectarian sentiments and provoke religious conflict.

The Catholic Church is a major public presence in Nigeria and has worked to calm religious tensions. The president of the Nigerian Bishops’ Conference decried the violence, saying the “authorities have so far failed to fulfill their task of ensuring peace and security to Nigerians in every area of the country.” He called for policymakers and the military to “go to the root of the phenomenon.”

Christian and Muslim religious leaders have a strong history of working together for mutual respect and tolerance. The Church in Nigeria is working with the Muslim community to strengthen governance, reduce corruption and marginalize extremists.
Diocese’s first married deacon retires
Deacon Ervin Kuspa honored at Mass of thanksgiving

BY KAREN CLIFFORD

SOUTH BEND — Deacon Ervin Kuspa was honored at a Mass of thanksgiving at Our Lady of Hungary Parish for 43 years of service on May 18.

Deacon Kuspa’s retirement celebration was honored by many in attendance including celebrant Archbishop Michael Blume, apostolic nuncio of the Holy See for Uganda, who is also an alumnus of Our Lady of Hungary School.

Kuspa was the first married deacon of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend. In an Our Sunday Visitor newspaper article dated May 23, 1971, Bishop Leo A. Pursey commented on the importance of deacons in the Church.

“It is clear that the early Christian community recognized the need of helpers, of qualified men, to assist the apostles in their mission. They helped bring the good news of salvation to the world and helped establish communities of the faithful and ministered to their needs as the number of disciples increased. They were called ‘deacon’ — a word from the Greek ‘diakonia,’ meaning one who serves,” said Bishop Pursey.

Following his ordination, Deacon Kuspa was assigned in South Bend to St. Adalbert Parish followed by St. Anthony de Padua, with the remaining years serving at Our Lady of Hungary.

Deacon Kuspa recalls that being the first married deacon included its share of challenges and rewards.

“Following the path of the Apostle St. Paul, my diacoonate had a rough start, primarily because the clergy did not accept the program. Several of our local priests advised me to drop out of it,” says Deacon Kuspa.

But his perseverance to stay bore fruit. “Now I feel that my calling to stay in the program,” Deacon Kuspa said, “invariably when we, as a group, are with us and support us nurtures an atmosphere of hope.”

Deacon Kuspa’s retirement was attended by Archbishop Michael Blume, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades, and Our Lady of Hungary Parish pastor, Father Kevin Bauman, at Mass of thanksgiving on May 18 for Deacon Kuspa’s service as deacon to the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend.

South Bend to St. Adalbert Parish

Deacon Kuspa noted that Jesus “Himself saw faith in the Father and it was the most energizing, for-tifying, challenging thought that He could lay hold of the human mind.”

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades, who was unable to attend the Mass for Deacon Kuspa, sent a letter that was read by Our Lady of Hungary Parish pastor, Father Kevin Bauman. In his letter of gratitude for Deacon Kuspa’s service, Bishop Rhoades spoke of the many lives touched by Deacon Kuspa.

“Thank you for the mercy and compassion of Jesus the Good Shepherd. As you begin your retirement I pray the Lord will bless you, your wife Verna and your family with His abundant grace. May our Blessed Mother watch over you always with her maternal love and care,” Bishop Rhoades’ letter concluded.

At the end of Mass, Father Bauman thanked Archbishop Blume and the five area deacons that participated in the day’s festivities. And he gave special appreciation for Deacon Kuspa’s service and prayer for the congregation and all parish ministries during the deacon’s tenure.

The topics explored:
May 5 — Building a climate of respect
May 19 — Ending the blame game
June 2 — Understanding expectations
June 16 — Redefining the power struggle
June 30 — Coping with control issues
July 14 — Listening beyond the words
July 28 — Appreciating personality differences
Aug. 11 — Recognizing childhood/emotional baggage
Aug. 25 — Handling anger constructively
Sept. 8 — Speaking the truth in love
Sept. 22 — Learning to fight fair
Oct. 6 — Breaking the hurt cycle
Oct. 20 — Practicing forgiveness and repair
Nov. 3 — Rebuilding trust

As you begin your retirement I pray the Lord will bless you, your wife Verna and your family with His abundant grace. May our Blessed Mother watch over you always with her maternal love and care,” Bishop Rhoades’ letter concluded.

Cardinal Toppo visits St. Patrick, Arcola

Cardinal Telesphore Toppo, from the Archdiocese of Ranchi, India, visited Arcola in 2008 and 2010 when Father Cyril Fernandes was pastor of St. Patrick Parish. Cardinal Toppo surprised staff and parishioners with a visit while he was in the United States for meetings on May 12. Msgr. Thadeus Balinda, pastor of St. Patrick Parish, and the parishioners welcomed Cardinal Toppo to celebrate Mass in their church and bless the new crucifix in the sanctuary. Above, Holli, Lydia and Levi Strack visit with Cardinal Toppo during the reception following the Mass on May 12. When the cardinal visited in 2010 Holli asked him for a blessing, because she had not been able to conceive. Cardinal Toppo blessed her and said she would have children. Lydia and Levi are her two blessings.

St. Pius X Church breaks ground on new rectory

GRANGER — The St. Pius X Catholic Church community broke ground for a new rectory on Sunday, May 18. It will be the first visible outcome of a $20 million Behold, I Make All Things New campaign to expand and renovate facilities and build a new church. The current priests’ residence sits where the new church and additional parking will be built on Fire Road, south of State Road 23. The rectory groundbreaking took place on recently purchased property near the athletic fields on Santa Monica Drive across the street from the Parish Education Center.

“The groundbreaking for the new rectory is the first step in our major facilities project planned for the renovation and expansion of St. Pius,” said Msgr. William C. Schooler, pastor.

“This first step sets the stage for many to follow — including the major, celebratory groundbreaking for our new church home, which we anticipate will take place about a year from now,” he said.

Architect Patrick Hess and contractor Dave Salela, both parishioners, along with other parishioners whose professions are related to home construction, are donating their gifts of time and service to build the new rectory. The current rectory will then be demolished to make room for the new church and additional parking.

The present church was built in 1992 to accommodate 1,400 families. St. Pius X now serves more than 3,150 families. The new church will comfortably seat over 1,300 people, nearly doubling the size of the current church. This will allow more parishioners to attend Mass together each weekend. The current church will be renovated to include a baptistry, library and meeting rooms, and parts of the Parish Education Center will be expanded.

St. Pius X Church announced the Behold, I Make All Things New campaign in February. The expansion plans came at the recommendation of St. Pius’ Facilities Study Committee, Parish Council and Finance Council, and approval from Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades and the Diocesan Finance Committee. Since the start of the campaign, more than $10 million in pledges and donations have been made by parishioners and friends of the parish.

Those interested in learning more about the Behold, I Make All Things New capital campaign may contact the parish campaign office at 574-272-8462, ext. 115 or behold@stpius.net or go to StPiusCampaign.com.

Saint Joseph High School named Volunteer Group of the Year

SOUTH BEND — Saint Joseph High School was named the Volunteer Group of the Year at the Age of Excellence Luncheon sponsored by REAL Services, an agency that serves older adults, disabled individuals and low-income people in Northern Indiana.

Saint Joseph High School was chosen for dedication and commitment to volunteerism in service to the elderly. “I think winning this award really shows how special Saint Joseph High School is,” said Tim Greci, a sophomore. “The Saint Joseph High School family really follows Christ’s example by leading a life of service to others.”

Junior Kristen Pascual “was very surprised to see so many people doing service here in South Bend. I didn’t know about so many groups being involved in our own community. Some of the awards given were to really amazing people.”

Derek Gloudemans named Bishop Dwenger valedictorian

FORT WAYNE — Derek Gloudemans will lead the Class of 2014 at Bishop Dwenger High School as valedictorian this spring. This parishioner of St. Vincent de Paul Parish in Fort Wayne values the firm foundation his education at Bishop Dwenger has laid in his faith formation and value system.

As his contemporaries there encourage him to live his faith in the service of others, “By going to school with other Catholics whom I consider good people, I have been challenged to match their faith in my own life… I hope that through my actions I have set a decent example of what it means to be Catholic for others,” Gloudemans says.

Gloudemans believes that his strong Catholic education at Bishop Dwenger has given him a firm basis in faith by which to make life decisions.

“A Catholic education helps give students a firm basis in faith and morals that they can use to help make decisions later in life. Ultimately students must make their own decisions about how to follow the faith, but a Catholic education at least helps to get them headed in the right direction by learning about the faith and how to live it out,” he says.

In addition to his academics Gloudemans also finds time to participate in running cross-country and track for the school, writing for the school newspaper, competing in the Science Olympiad and the Math Academic Team. He also has been a four-year member and current president of the Key Club.

The busy Gloudemans also holds a part-time job at Electrical Motor Power where he works on weekends during the academic year and increased hours during summers. In his free time this academic scholar and athlete enjoys running, playing guitar and piano, baking, playing soccer and reading. And he says, “Of course I like to hang out with my friends as well.”

Gloudemans holds fond memories of his years at Dwenger, including attending state twice with the cross-country team, and hanging out at Pizza Forum with the team, attending Mass after the Great Catholic Country Championships, dressing up as the Olympic rings for junior year homecoming and signing the Declaration of Independence with his friends in U.S. history class.

Gloudemans plans to attend Vanderbilt University in the fall to study engineering. He is considering architecture or development of biodegradable plastics as his career path.

Bishop Dwenger salutatorian is Matthew Krach

FORT WAYNE — Matthew Krach has earned his spot as Bishop Dwenger High School’s salutatorian for the class of 2014 with great finesse.

“The Fort Wayne native attends St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish and believes his Catholic education is priceless. “It enables students to grow deeper in their faith and learn Catholic values, morals and teachings, which can be applied over a lifetime,” he says.

He is grateful to have had the opportunity to talk openly about his faith with his peers both in school and at extracurricular events. He also values the service opportunities that were available to him during high school. “Bishop Dwenger has provided me with so many extra opportunities to perform service outside of school and to become involved in my faith, by helping with Mass and retreats,” he says.

Krach holds a gymnastics instructor position at Summit Academy of Gymnastics as well as acting as a soccer referee. He says, “These jobs are very flexible; I am able to choose games that I want to referee and that fit in my schedule, and I work on Mondays and Wednesdays and after track practice, at Summit.”

The academic scholar and outdoorsman relishes canoeing, hiking, water skiing, swimming, wakeboarding and sledding during his free time. He also enjoys traveling to national parks and viewing the wildlife. Other interests include a number of scientific fields, most especially chemistry and marine biology.

Of his time at Bishop Dwenger, Krach says, “My school career has been filled with a number of amazing memories, but some of the most cherished have included time spent in undergraduate science labs, winning track meets with my team, participating as a Russian dancer/chorus member in ‘Fiddler on the Roof’, traversing the tunnels under the school and friendships made on mission trips and retreats.”

Krach will attend the University of Notre Dame in the fall and study biology with the hope of becoming a medical doctor.

FORT WAYNE — Nathan Grabner has been named valedictorian at Bishop Luers for the class of 2014 and finds his Catholic education as much as just religion classes and school Mass.

“It is knowing that I am surrounded by people who exhibit Christ’s teachings and whom I can depend on,” he says.

With the exemplary academic education he has received at Bishop Luers Grabner, who attends St. John the Baptist Parish in Fort Wayne, feels his faith has been developed and formed through his education.

“Through high school, I have been able to better develop my morals through religious classes and then act on those morals through volunteer organizations like the school-sponsored Key Club as well as Big Brothers, Big Sisters and tutoring at Bloomington elementary,” he says, adding, “Luers has allowed me the opportunity to not just improve myself, but follow Christ’s teachings and help those around me.”

His well-rounded valedictorian, who played football through his junior year, has been co-president of Student Council, president of Key Club, president of FBLA, captain of the Science Academic Superbowl Team, captain of the lacrosse team and treasurer of National Honor Society.

Grabner has also been involved in Eagle Scouts, Model UN, Ukulele Society, World Culture Club, Student Ambassadors, Big Brothers, Big Sisters, tennis, swim and drama, and he works at Textbook Painting.

And even with all of that, “his passion lies, he admits, in Adam Baker named Bishop Luers’ salutatorian

FORT WAYNE — Adam Baker has been named Bishop Luers High School’s salutatorian for the class of 2014. This parishioner of St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish and Columbia City resident feels his Catholic education at Bishop Luers has deepened his faith and strengthened his character.

“My Catholic education allowed me to gain a deeper understanding of my faith, which is sometimes difficult to achieve elsewhere. The insightful lessons from my everyday religion classes really helped strengthen my moral character and answer my questions about life in general,” he says.

In the many ways he put his faith into action he feels his main efforts benefited his Scout troop. “The single biggest place I put my faith into action was my Catholic Scout troop. We participated in many enjoyable service projects and camporees, and it was always great to have the enthusiastic support of Bishop Rhoades himself,” he says.

In addition to his academic life Baker notes some favorite high school activities. “My favorite high school activities included Boy Scouts of America, Lego Robotics and journalism,” he says, adding, “I was also a member of Key Club and Students Against Destructive Decisions.”

He is also active in his parish as an usher and with children’s religious education.

Claire Jilek earns spot as salutatorian for Saint Joseph’s class of 2014

SOUTH BEND — Claire Jilek has been named salutatorian for the class of 2014 for Saint Joseph High School. She is a parishioner of St. Mary Parish in Niles, Mich., where she resides. Throughout her four-year academic experience at Saint Joseph High School, Jilek has learned that serving is the key to life. “I think that through our school’s dedication to faith, prayer and service to others, Catholic education has taught me that life is not solely about what you get but what you can give,” she says, adding, “My high school experience has allowed me to put my faith into action because we focus on selfless service, retreats and the community.”

In addition to her focus on extracurricular activities, Jilek has participated in cross-country, tennis, the winter musical, Right to Life Club, SOUL Team, altar serving and volunteer work at Lakeland Community Hospital in Niles, Mich. She also holds a weekly position cleaning an office, finding it “a minimal but satisfying commitment to incorporate into my schedule.”

This academic scholar enjoys reading, spending time with family and friends and playing piano.

Of the many cherished memories Jilek holds of her high school years two that stand out include sing-along cross-country bus rides and the March for Life trips to Washington, D.C. Jilek will attend the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, where she hopes to study either mathematics or business.
SOUTH BEND — Anna Boll has been named one of three valedictorians for Saint Joseph High School’s class of 2014. Grateful for the atmosphere of love nurtured at Saint Joseph, Boll says, “Teachers and faculty are very aware of the call to love and they, in turn, pass this on to the student body.”

Residing in Granger with membership at St. Pius X Parish, Boll has felt encouraged by her teachers to put her faith into action. “Through an emphasis on service work and unique opportunities like traveling to Washington, D.C., for the March for Life, my high school experience has been one in which my faith was encouraged and helped by the guidance of teachers and peers passionate about bringing God to every day life,” she says.

A member of several clubs at Saint Joseph High School, Boll was instrumental in establishing the St. Vincent de Paul Club at school with the help of her anatomy teacher, Mrs. Gergely. She also tutored at St. Vincent de Paul.

This academic scholar uses her time wisely, working out and studying before school. A self-proclaimed note-taker, Boll says, “I use them to study when I have a minute while out and about.”

Outside of academia Boll’s interest lies in children and health and nutrition. Of her high school years the valedictorian says, “I have found a great group of friends and have had some incredible teachers.”

Boll plans to major in psychology and minor in nutrition at New York University in the fall in hopes of eventually working in research and the treatment of eating disorders.

Chelsea Suppinger named co-valedictorian of Saint Joseph High School

SOUTH BEND — As one of three valedictorians named for the class of 2014 at Saint Joseph High School, Chelsea Suppinger values the academic environment as well as the supportive community of the South Bend high school. “Saint Joseph is not just a learning environment, but a community that supports one another, especially during difficult times,” she says.

Suppinger attends St. John Kanty Parish in Rolling Prairie and resides in New Carlisle. After attending public grade and middle schools, she has found new meaning to service through her experience at Saint Joseph. “Attending Saint Joseph helped me realize the various injustices and inequities that exist not only worldwide, but also locally. I found great satisfaction serving for various organizations, such as El Camplito, the Food Bank of Northern Indiana, Goodwill and our annual Thanksgiving Food Drive,” she says.

Putting her leadership skills to good use, Suppinger has participated in positions with One Book, One School Discussion Leader, Chamber of Commerce Leadership Program representative and student representative on Counseling Gold Star Committee. She also has served as a Student Ambassador since her sophomore year and was secretary during senior year. She is a member of National Honor Society, serving as a tutoring coordinator and tutor, and she participated in h.o.p.e. (Helping Other People Endure) and their Thanksgiving Food Drive for three years.

Suppinger served as a retreat team leader engaging underclassmen in retreat activities and she played volleyball all four years as the starting libero and was all-conference and first team her senior year.

In addition to her extracurriculars, this scholar works at the Dunes Volleyball Center where she plays club volleyball, assisting at summer camps and on weekends. She also has tutored students with time management, organizational skills and providing specific help in several subjects. This busy valedictorian enjoys reading for pleasure, water skiing, vacationing and hanging out at her grandparent’s lake cottage with her cousins when she finds the time.

Memories of her high school years that will be held dear include going to the final four in volleyball her sophomore year, as well as going down to state to watch football her freshman and sophomore year, the mid-winter dances with her friends and, “obviously, graduating!” she says.

Suppinger plans to attend the University of Mississippi to major in pharmacy.

Greg Monnin co-valedictorian for Saint Joseph’s class of 2014

SOUTH BEND — Greg Monnin has been named co-valedictorian for the class of 2014 at Saint Joseph High School. This St. Matthew Cathedral parishioner resides in South Bend and values the moral foundation Catholic education has afforded him. “I believe that Catholic education helps to bring morals to subjects that have recently seemed to lose morals. I think this is really important for today’s society to have a good moral base before diving deep into the real world,” he says.

Included in the exemplary education at Saint Joseph, Monnin feels the service opportunities there have been rewarding and informative. “Through doing service hours, I have definitely lived out my faith. I have volunteered at Healthwin and found it to be very eye opening. Caring for people who cannot care for themselves is incredibly rewarding as well,” he says.

In addition to his stellar academic performance, Monnin has participated in running cross-country for four years and track for three. He was also part of SOUL Team, h.o.p.e., the National Honor Society and the French National Honor Society. At St. Matthew Parish, Monnin participated in many church-sanctioned events, including the annual fish fry and feeding the local neighborhood people on Thanksgiving.

In his free time Monnin’s hobbies are varied. “My hobbies include watching Netflix or reading BuzzFeed, one of my favorite news websites. I also enjoy spending time with my friends, doing random spur-of-the-moment things like walking around Wal-Mart with close to no purpose,” he says, adding, “Another of my hobbies is music. I love listening to music, especially terrible songs and electronic music.”

As varied as his hobbies are, so are his treasured memories of his high school career. He says, “One of my treasured memories is when we, as a school, moved to the new building last year and were given laptops to use for school purposes. These laptops opened a whole new way of working at school and at home.”

Monnin also enjoyed going to all the school-sanctioned dances throughout his four years of high school. He notes, “Although the music wasn’t always the best, it was always nice to have a great night with all my friends at Saint Joe.”

Monnin plans to attend IUPUI in Indianapolis where he will study pre-biology with the hope to advance to medical school and study pathology.
Justin Skycak leads Marian class of 2014 as valedictorian

MISHAWAKA — Justin Skycak will lead Marian High School’s class of 2014 as valedictorian this year. He values peace and justice and the opportunity Marian High School has given him to develop his ability to “think about the moral and ethical consequences of choices.” He is grateful for the sense of wonder his education there nurtured. “…Religion opens one up to questions that our feeble minds cannot ever hope to handle, and it teaches one to appreciate the mystery of what one does not know,” he says.

In addition to his academic and religious education Skycak was involved in hockey, track and tennis. And for the past two years he has been involved in Science Olympiad and physics research at Indiana University, South Bend, and the University of Notre Dame. Recently Skycak has become involved in a genetic engineering project with Penn High School’s iGEM team as well.

Skycak, a member of St. Pius X Parish in Granger, works as a part-time learning center instructor at Mathnasium, a mathematics tutoring center, and he’s also begun independent mathematics research and says, “I have a few useful theorems I hope to publish during my years as an undergraduate.”

Music has found its way into this academic scholar’s life as well. “After playing guitar for Marian’s production of the play ‘Godspell’ and performing at the fine arts festival, I have become very interested in music as well — not only performing music, but also researching its connections to neuroscience and mathematics,” Skycak says.

And his music has taken center stage in his cherished memories of high school. “If you asked me this question a month ago, I would say traveling to Phoenix, Ariz., with Eddie Hunckler and Mr. Andrzejewski to present my research (on improving sound sensors in a dark matter detector) at the Intel International Science and Engineering Fair was my fondest memory. However, after playing guitar in Marian’s production of ‘Godspell,’ I must say that sharing music with others and getting to know all the theater kids at the ‘Godspell’ performances was my most treasured memory at Marian. I’ve always enjoyed playing guitar, but I never had an opportunity to play in any kind of venue. Playing for ‘Godspell’ has really motivated me to continue writing and learning songs and has inspired me to develop further as a musician. I never realized there was a whole group of people at Marian who share my passion for writing and performing music.”

Skycak plans to attend the University of Notre Dame in the fall and will major in honors mathematics and neuroscience. His career path involves becoming an applied mathematician who specializes in computational neuroscience.

Sarah Bueter salutatorian for Marian Class of 2014

MISHAWAKA — Marian High School has named Sarah Bueter as salutatorian for the class of 2014. Bueter is grateful for her exemplary academic and spiritual education at Marian and says, “Attending Marian has allowed me to explore my faith deeper, search for truth harder and develop a more meaningful relationship with Our Lord.”

Her teachers, she says, have been extraordinary models of Christian life. “Through the witness of Marian’s teachers, I’ve come to a better understanding of Christian discipleship,” she says.

Walk With God
DIRECTED RETREAT

5 p.m. Monday, June 16 to 2:30 p.m. Friday, June 20

Directed retreats offer extended time to slow down and tend the Holy. It is a time to refresh one’s spirit walking with God and responding to that relationship through solitude, silence, and prayer. The beautiful campus of Victory Noll offers sacred spaces outside to walk with God including the labyrinth, nature trails, and Stations of the Cross.

Retreat Leader: Sue Wilhelm, D.Min.

Cost: $350 single occupancy with meals included.
Early registration encouraged.

Full payment is required seven days before the beginning of the retreat.

For more information, contact Victory Noll Center at (260)356-0628, ext. 174 or by e-mail at victorynollcenter@olvm.org

No one is ever turned away from a program because of inability to pay.

From here to there

It has long been known that many times well-meaning but unwitting supporters of those in mourning have offered some rather rough and unpardonable clichés in their attempt to console. We’ve all heard (and perhaps even offered at one time ourselves) heartfelt, albeit naive, condolences such as “God must have needed him/her,” or “Ain’t you glad he/she is in heaven now?”

I well remember a time when those words rocked me to my core. Following the untimely death of my husband, Trent, my painfully bold response was, “I am glad he’s in heaven, but I’d much rather him be here beside me where he belongs.” (May I publicly apologize to anyone I offended in those very raw and confusing days.)

Of course, our greatest desire is to know our loved one is face to face with our Maker in heaven. However, losing the physical presence of someone we hold dear can be a mind-numbing affair.

How do we cope? Cognitively, we know that in loss our beloved is gone. But in our grief we must turn inward to our hearts and learn that nothing we have loved can ever be lost. We take those we have loved into our very being and carry them with us forever.

We move slowly in our grief from the physical relationship that we enjoyed with our loved one to one of a spiritual nature — from here to there.

I have learned that over time we learn to adjust our lives slowly around the gap the death of our loved ones creates. We begin to fill the space with what is left yet to live and, of course, the memory of what we still hold dear — our loved one.

It was well over a year that my internal clock adjusted to the fact that Trent was not going to walk through our door at 6 p.m. and call out his cheerful daily greeting. I knew when I finally stopped looking toward the door at dinnertime that I was moving toward healing.

Missing the physical presence of our loved one can sometimes be immobilizing with its aching loneliness. Moving through those early days without just one more chance to work, rest, play, dance, talk, laugh and cry with our loved one becomes a matter of simple survival.

But out of the ashes God creates gems. If we do the hard work of mourning — that is, listening to our hearts, minds and bodies when they speak and responding with gentle kindness and care — we can move from here to there, giving toward healing.

Missing the presence of our loved one can sometimes be immobilizing with its aching loneliness. Moving through those early days without just one more chance to work, rest, play, dance, talk, laugh and cry with our loved one becomes a matter of simple survival.

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

6th Sunday of Easter

Jn 14:15-21

he Acts of the Apostles this season furnishes the first reading. In the readings of the weekends earlier in this season, the identity of the Apostles has clearly been given.

The Apostles, absent Judas of course, had exercised the very power of Jesus in naming a new member of their group, Matthias, who succeeded the dead Judas. Peter healed the sick. In behalf of the Apostles, Peter spoke as Jesus had spoken.

It was not just simply that the Apostles had been with Jesus as specially selected students and followers, but they discharged the divine power that had belonged to Jesus, and they continued the mission of Jesus the Redeemer.

In this reading, announcement of this identity continues. While Acts already has clearly established that Peter was the head of the Apostles, the character of Apostleship belonged not just to him. It was also with the others.

Thus, in this reading, the central figures are Philip and John. They performed miracles, as Jesus had performed miracles.

However, they were not on their own. They were part of the community of believers in Jerusalem, that had Peter as its head, and around Peter were the other Apostles.

This group of Apostles in Jerusalem sent Philip and John to Samaria. So the Apostles together had authority, and each within the group recognized the authority. They looked to the salvation of all people, even of Samaritans, who were so despised by the Jews. Finally, they bore within themselves the Holy Spirit, and they could give the Holy Spirit to others.

The second reading is from the First Epistle of Peter. This reading is a strong, joyful and encouraging proclamation of Jesus as Lord. It calls believers to hear the Lord and to follow the Lord. The Lord should be in their hearts and minds.

St. John’s Gospel furnishes the last reading. Not a Resurrection Narrative, it nonetheless serves the Church’s purpose as it teaches us this weekend. After celebrating the Resurrection for these weeks since Easter, the Church gently is summing us to look at our lives.

This reading is our blueprint for life. Our task as disciples is to love others as Jesus loved all. It is clear. In God’s love, we look to us in the Lord, is our salvation.

Indeed, the very act of giving us a blueprint for living is a vitally important gift given in love to us by God.

Reflection

The next major liturgical event for us will be the celebration of the feast of the Ascension of Jesus. Soon after this feast, we celebrate the Feast of Pentecost. With Pentecost within sight now is the close of the Easter season.

For these weeks the Church has informed us of the Resurrection of Jesus, gloriously occurring after the dreadful events of Good Friday. It has shared with us its joy, capping the joy of the first Christians. It has told us again and again of the Risen Lord’s appearances and admonitions.

Gently, gradually, but definitely the Church has begun the process of leading us to ask what the Resurrection truly means for each of us individually. It is an anniversariness — or for each of us a personal experience.

The Church reassures us. Contact with Jesus was not lost with the Ascension, when Jesus returned to the Father. Contact remains, and it remains very clearly in the visible, institutional Church. The Church stands on the Apostles. It offers us the service of the modem successors of Peter and the other Apostles.

Through them we still hear the words of Christ. In the sacraments they give us, we still access the power of Christ’s eternal life.

Finally, in the splendid reading from John’s Gospel, the Church tells us how to live. We must love others.

John Paul II’s heroic soul

CHRISTOPHER STEFANIK

Real Life Catholic

John Paul II’s chief exotic shared in a 2011 interview that invoking the intercession of St. John Paul has proven particularly effective during exorcisms. “I have asked the demon more than once, ‘Are you the soul of John Paul II?’ And I have had two different responses…One, ‘Because he disrupted my plans.’…Another response that he gave me was, ‘Because he pulled so many young people from my hands.’”

St. John Paul joined his fellow Pole in the full darkness of the 20th century and of our frail human condition at a young age. The words of Isaiah the prophet apply to our Lord as well. He was “a man of suffering, acquainted with grief” (53:3).

His big sister died before he was born. Growing up, he loved his mom like any little boy does. He would later call her, “the soul of home.” She died when he was eight. Karol loved and looked up to his older brother. Four years after his mother’s death, his mother’s big brother died. People described him in sixth- and seventh-grade as being withdrawn and quiet (If you have a depressed pre-teen at home, he might become pope some day!).

His father became everything to him. He filled the role of dad, mom, mentor and friend. He not only helped guide Karol through the turbulent teenage years, but through the Nazi occupation of Poland when he was in high school, and soon after, the Soviet invasion. When he was 20, his father died. Later in life he reflected, “At 20 I had already lost all the people I loved, and even those I might have loved, like my older sister who, they said, died, six years before I was born.”

But a sad reality of our human condition is that great souls are only chiseled out of the rest of us by great trials. I wish I could be the saint who was best known for sitting on a beach, surfing and sipping Coronas every day after morning Mass, but that saint won’t ever exist. Not that we Catholics shun the enjoyment of life! To the contrary, Catholic cultures are historically the perfectors of good beer, wine, coffee and art. But those aren’t the credentials that forge heroic souls.

John Paul II didn’t become a heroic soul despite his suffering, he became one precisely because of it. His response to personal pain wasn’t to retreat from the world, but to utilize his gifts to help others. His faith in Jesus Himself, whose Sacred Heart is simultaneously the icon of profound pain and perfect charity.

As bishop, Wojtyla’s heart was wide open to his people. He wrote that, as bishop, “Everyone had direct access to me at all times. All were welcome to my home.” His attention to the individual continued into his papacy. “I don’t like the word ‘crowd,’ which seems too anonymous,” he wrote, “I prefer the word, ‘multitude.” To him everyone was important, and somehow his generation knew that. Perhaps that’s why you could be in a crowd a million strong at a World Youth Day, a half-mile away from that little white speck on the stage, and people around you were crying. They felt personally loved, and they were. Throughout his ministry, his heart never recoiled in fear before the mortal evils of the 20th century that threatened to bring the human race to an end. He faced everything from communism to the Cold War, to abortion, to rampant materialism — all aspects of what he referred to as “the culture of death”—with an almost supernatural grin that said, “I know who wins.” His favorite phrase as pope was the one he repeated more than any other in Scripture, “Be not afraid!”

Many things made Pope John Paul II truly great, but at the heart of it all is a man who maintained simple friendship, hope and love in the face of the deepest darkness.

Few will be able to emulate him as a leader on the world stage, but that’s the kind of everyday heroism we’re all called to. It’s that kind of heroism that makes demons tremble in the presence of ordinary Christians.

Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary

first century

feast - May 31

This feast commemorates the three-month visit of Mary with her elderly cousin Elizabeth during Mary’s pregnancy with Jesus and Elizabeth’s with John the Baptist. The story appears in the first chapter of Luke’s Gospel. It recounts Elizabeth’s Spirit-filled greeting, acknowledging Mary as “the mother of my Lord,” and Mary’s beautiful response, the Magnificat, which begins, “My soul proclaims...”

new form to the relationship we cherished with our loved one. We learn to think of our loved one in a different way.

Some may respond by saying, “I don’t want a spiritual relationship, but rather my old physical one.” I couldn’t agree more. However, because death is the ultimate leveler, we simply have but one choice — to move with our grief into healing and live with the joy of memory.

On our journey of grief we learn that we can continue to love that which is no longer physically in our lives. We learn that even though we can’t see or touch someone they are still alive in our hearts. The fond memories of those lives well lived can bring great joy to healing hearts.

I have wondered though of our death avoidant culture and its need for the bereaved to move on with life as quickly as possible. “Leave what’s past in the past” it seems to shout. I believe that we can never forget our past, even if we wanted to. And why must we?

Part of the healing movement of healthy grieving is creating a new normal life step by step in which we carry our loved ones with us. Our hearts will tell us when it’s time to make changes in our lives that will move us from here to here. It was a slow process for me to decide what belongings of Trent’s to share with others as well as when to do it. I was able to recognize as I let go of those tangible things of his, that my relationship with him was shifting and that it was okay.

The memory of Trent’s presence in my life became part of who I am as I followed my path of grief. I was not forgetting my past but keeping what was important to me close to my heart as I moved into the future.

Now almost 24 years later I see how the good work has been made in me and in those I have walked with on their grief journey. Moving on is creating a new normal life step by step in which we carry our loved ones with us. Our hearts will tell us when it’s time to make changes in our lives that will move us from here to here. It was a slow process for me to decide what belongings of Trent’s to share with others as well as when to do it. researchers might be able subtly to improve matters, for example, by rewriting normal genes so that people could better fight off infectious diseases. Would such be an enhancement or therapy?

Even as scientists move forward with the project of rewriting our own genes to cure grave diseases, some will be tempted to go further and use techniques like CRISPR to engineer designer human embryos during in vitro fertilization; genetically modified monkeys have already been produced using this method in China. A prior CDF document called “Donum Vitae” unambiguously describes the grave problems with subjugating embryonic human beings for research purposes: “To use human embryos for purposes from the object or instrument of experimentation constitutes a crime against their dignity as human beings having a right to the same respect that is due to the child already born and to every human person.

The remarkable tools becoming available not only for genetic therapies but also for human enhancement projects and embryonic manipulation raise daunting ethical concerns about the subjugation of man to his own technology, and call for thoughtful measures and vigilance to ensure the proper use of these techniques now and in the future.

Even as scientists move forward with the project of rewriting our own genes to cure grave diseases, some will be tempted to go further and use techniques like CRISPR to engineer designer human embryos during in vitro fertilization; genetically modified monkeys have already been produced using this method in China. A prior CDF document called “Donum Vitae” unambiguously describes the grave problems with subjugating embryonic human beings for research purposes: “To use human embryos for purposes from the object or instrument of experimentation constitutes a crime against their dignity as human beings having a right to the same respect that is due to the child already born and to every human person.

The remarkable tools becoming available not only for genetic therapies but also for human enhancement projects and embryonic manipulation raise daunting ethical concerns about the subjugation of man to his own technology, and call for thoughtful measures and vigilance to ensure the proper use of these techniques now and in the future.

TAMPA BAY ROOKIE KEVIN KIERMAIER GETS FIRST BIG-LEAGUE HIT Called up for the weekend, Tampa Bay rookie Kevin Kiermaier got his first big-League hit on Saturday, May 17, then added his first home run on Sunday. The former Bishop Luers standout also showed off the extraordinary defense he is known for with a spectacular leaping catch at the centerfield wall. “The guy wants to be in the big leagues,” manager Joe Maddon said of Kiermaier. “He’s going to get his opportunity. He’s going to be here for a long time.” — Michelle Castleman
