Three deacons ordained

FORT WAYNE — Three deacons from the Archdiocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend were ordained Saturday, May 24, at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception.

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese for the Military Services, USA, made the assignments co-sponsored by the Military Archdiocese. He welcomed Bishop Richard Higgins, auxiliary bishop of the Archdiocese for the Military Services. “Thank you, Bishop Higgins, for all you do to serve our men and women in the military.”

Bishop Rhoades said, and announced, “I am happy that one of our candidates, Jonathan Norton, is being co-sponsored by the Military Archdiocese. I know how much our military services need priests and am happy that our diocese will be helping with this need.”

In his homily, Bishop Rhoades explained why seminarians are ordained deacons before ordination to the Priesthood and the three roles of the deacons.

The mystery of the Ascension

By Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades

This Sunday, we celebrate the Solemnity of the Ascension of the Lord. We profess our faith in this glorious mystery when we say in the Nicene Creed: “He ascended into heaven and is seated at the right hand of the Father.” We believe that Jesus’ earthly life reached its culmination when He passed from this world to the Father. He no longer belongs to the world of corruption and death that conditions our earthly life. He passed into the glorified state in God.

It is important to understand that the Ascension does not mean that Jesus has departed from us. He has not abandoned us or left us orphans. Otherwise, after the Ascension, the disciples would not have returned to Jerusalem with great joy, as Saint Luke tells us (24:52). He is close to each one of us forever. Recall the words of Jesus at the end of Matthew’s Gospel: And lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age (Matthew 28:19).

With His Ascension into heaven, the Lord Jesus is now present to us in a new way. On the eve of His Passion, Jesus had told the apostles that it was to their advantage that He go away. He said: “It is to your advantage that I go away, for if I do not go away, the Counselor will not come to you; but if I go, I will send Him to you” (John 16:7). Though Jesus’ earthly and visible presence in the world ends, He remains with us in an invisible way. He has not left us alone. He is always close to us.

Christ sends us the Holy Spirit. Through the Holy Spirit, Christ continues to be with us, sanctifying us and giving us life. He acts through the Holy Spirit in the Church and in our souls. He guides us and leads us to the Father. Christ, the Head, is never separated from His Body, the Church. He entered heaven as our Head. Pope Saint Leo the Great taught that at the Ascension, the glory of the Head became the hope of the Body. This is very true: because Christ has ascended to the Father and prepared a place for us, we have hope of eternal life with Him in heaven.

Exalted at the right hand of the Father, Christ intercedes for us with the Father. He is our eternal High Priest, our Mediator with the Father. As the letter to the Hebrews says: “He always lives to make intercession for them to the Father.” He communicates to us His Body, the Church, the grace and strength to live in Him. Because of Christ’s intercession with the Father, we are able to grow in holiness. Jesus is present to us in His word and in the sacraments. Jesus is visibly present in the Church in “a sacramental manner.” We think especially of His presence in the Holy Eucharist. In the Eucharist, we participate in the new life of Christ’s Body glorified by the Spirit. Christ’s holy Body and Blood is our food on our journey to the Father’s house.

Jesus is present to us in His word and in the sacraments. Jesus is visibly present in the Church in “a sacramental manner.” We think especially of His presence in the Holy Eucharist. In the Eucharist, we participate in the new life of Christ’s Body glorified by the Spirit. Christ’s holy Body and Blood is our food on our journey to the Father’s house. Another important truth about the mystery of the Ascension concerns our own journey of faith. We have this Advocate who awaits us, who pleads for us.

As we meditate on the mystery of Our Lord’s Ascension, we also remember His words to the disciples immediately before His Ascension. He not only promises the Holy Spirit, He commands the disciples to go forth as missionaries to the world. He gives them the charge of evangelization. He then gives them the power of the Holy Spirit to accomplish this mission.

The Gospel is spread through the power of God, not merely by means of our human wisdom or strength. Our task is to allow ourselves to be led by the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of truth, and to cooperate with His grace as we seek to bring the Gospel to the world. The Holy Spirit keeps us faithful to the deposit of faith, to the teachings of Jesus. He strengthens us to be Christ’s witnesses in word and deed. This is the specific grace we received in the sacrament of Confirmation.

The following words of our Holy Father, Pope Francis, are good for our meditation as we celebrate the Ascension of our Lord:

“The Ascension does not point to Jesus’ absence, but tells us that He is alive in our midst in a new way. He is no longer in a specific place in the world as He was before the Ascension. He is now in the lordship of God, present in every space and time, close to each one of us. In our life we are never alone: we have this Advocate who awaits us, who defends us. We are never alone: the Crucified and Risen Lord guides us. We have with us a multitude of brothers and sisters who, in silence and concealment, in their family life and at work, in their problems and hardships, in their joys and hopes, live daily and together with us bring the world the lordship of God’s love, in the Risen Jesus Christ, ascended into Heaven, our own Advocate who pleads for us.”

oversee the Catholic Schools Office and the Office of Catechesis. In February, a search committee was formed to find a new principal for Marian High School. Bishop Rhoades told Today’s Catholic, “I am very grateful that Mr. Mark Kirzeder accepted the position of principal of Marian High School. Mark’s commitment to Marian, its Catholic identity and mission and its strong academic program has impressed me very much. Mark’s deep faith, his professionalism and his love for Marian will help the school continue to grow and flourish.”

“I express my deep thanks also to the search committee, led by Msgr. Michael Heintz, for their help and their recommendation of Mr. Kirzeder,” Bishop Rhoades added. “And, of course, I thank Mr. Carl Loesch for his outstanding leadership and service as Marian’s principal and I look forward to his leadership of our diocesan Secretariat for Catholic Education.”

“We were most impressed by Mark’s deep commitment to Catholic education, his commitment to the students and his devotion to Marian,” said Msgr. Heintz, rector of St. Matthew Cathedral, director of the Master of Divinity Program at the University of Notre Dame and a Marian High School graduate.

Carl Loesch told Today’s Catholic, “Mark’s faith, intelligence and hard-work permeate everything he does. He is an excellent teacher and an outstanding administrator. Marian is blessed to have someone of Mark’s caliber to lead Marian spiritually and academically. We pray in gratitude for the Good Lord sending the right person to lead Marian.”

Kirzeder has a Bachelor of Science degree in science and math education from the University of Notre Dame, a Master of Education degree through the Alliance for Catholic Education (ACE) at the University of Notre Dame and a Master of Arts degree in educational leadership through the University of Notre Dame.

Kirzeder spoke of his goals for Marian, which can be summarized in a document released by the Congregation for Catholic Education entitled, “The Religious Dimension of Education in a Catholic School” — 1965. The document reads: “The Catholic school finds its true justification in the mission of the Church; it is based on an educational philosophy in which faith, culture and life are brought into harmony.”

“It will be my focus, along with that of my faculty and staff, to find meaningful and innovative ways to continually incorporate the sacramental life of the Church, our rich faith tradition and Catholic culture into every aspect of education at Marian High School,” he said. “I am doing so will prepare Marian students to be successful contributors to our community and our world, and, most importantly, will help them become future citizens of heaven.”

In his application for the position, Kirzeder commented on how he would embody Christ-centered principles within the school: “As principal, I would strive to embody the humility and compassion that Jesus showed to all people by treating all students, parents, teachers and staff with respect and kindness. Christ teaches us to serve one another as He did when He washed His disciples’ feet and to carry on the message of the Gospel in the face of adversity and through our greatest challenges. It will be my task.”

To the Marian High School community, Kirzeder said, “Community is at the heart of the Church,” and it would be his duty “to unveil and nurture the community which God has created for us by providing opportunities for faith formation and encouraging participation in the sacramental life of the Church. The Eucharist will remain central to the life of the school.”

Kirzeder asked the community to “continue to keep Marian, our faculty and staff, our students in your prayers as we undergo this transition in leadership.”

“I also ask the members of the community to pray in a special way for the intercession of Marian’s newly named patron saint, Our Lady of Lourdes, that we may form our students into good men and women of God,” he added.

The Kirzeder’s are members of St. Anthony de Padua Parish in South Bend.

A native of Crosby, Minn., Kirzeder has 12 years experience in Catholic education first as a physical science teacher and wrestling coach for three years at Holy Trinity Catholic Middle School in Charlotte, N.C., and then teaching and serving as assistant principal at Marian High School since 2005. He has also served as the head varsity wrestling coach at Marian.

Kirzeder participated in the Remmick Leadership Program and said it “served as a well-spring for my own growth as a Catholic educator and servant of the Church. The rigorous academic coursework coupled with the intentional focus on faith formation through prayer and celebration of the liturgy steeped participants in the sacramental life of the Church and prepared me for a practical and spiritual leadership role in a school community.

My experience most recently in me a response to the call to serve as an administrator, revealing it, rather, as a call to ministry and the sacred responsibilities accompanying it,” Kirzeder noted. “For me, and for so many who serve in Catholic schools, this is so much more than a job. Educating youth in the Catholic faith is a vocation, a ministry, in response to God’s call more so than a choice of our own making. I can undoubtedly say I am compelled to serve God and the Church in this role, for community is at the heart of the Church, and Christ is at the heart of our community at Marian.”

did the guards of secular power watch over this tomb. In vain did they place a very large stone against the door of the tomb, so that none could roll it away.”

The patriarch said the tomb also encourages Christians to “love the other, the different other, the follow- ers of other faiths and other confes- sions.”

Their prayer service marked the 50th anniversary of an encounter in Jerusalem between Pope Paul VI and Ecumenical Patriarch Athenagoras of Constantinople. The earlier meeting, which led both churches to lift the mutual excommunications that started the East-West schism in 1054, opened the modern period of ecumenical dialogue.

Earlier in the evening, the pope and patriarch met privately at the apostolic delegation, the Vatican’s representative office in Jerusalem, where the pope was to spend the second and final night of his visit to the Holy Land.

The two leaders spent more than an hour together, more than twice as long as scheduled. They emerged with a signed common declaration calling for “communion in legitimate diversity” between their churches.

“We look forward in eager anticipation to the day in which we will finally partake together in the Eucharistic banquet,” the pope and patriarch wrote, calling for continuing “fraternal encounter and true dialogue” to “lead us into all truth.”

Their declaration also called for common efforts in the “service of humanity, especially in defending the dignity of the human person at every stage of life and the sanctity of family based on marriage, in promoting peace and the common good” by struggling against “hunger, poverty, illiteracy (and) the inequitable distribution of resources.”

The leaders also stressed the need to protect the natural environment and defend religious liberty, especially for embattled Christian minorities in the Middle East.

The two leaders, scheduled to meet a total of four times during the visit, whose official logo was an icon of the apostles Peter and Andrew, patron saints of the churches of Rome and Constantinople, joined in a fraternal embrace.

At his first appearance May 26, Pope Francis toured the Dome of the Rock on the Temple Mount, sacred to Muslims as the place from which Mohammed ascended to the Rock on the Temple Mount, representing the country’s Muslim community for Jordan’s King Abdullah II and the Jordanian orphans, the sick and the disabled who shared their stories.

The pope also urged the international community to help Jordan bear the economic burden posed by hosting more than 1 million Syrian — 600,000 registered with the U.N. refugee agency — and 300,000 Iraqis still sheltering in the country.

Celebrating Mass in Bethlehem a few steps from the spot traditionally believed to be the birthplace of Jesus, Pope Francis said that the way society treats its young reveals its moral character.

Children are a “diagnostic sign, a marker indicating the health of fam- ilies, society and the entire world,” the pope said May 25 in Manger Square, outside the Church of the Nativity. “Wherever children are accepted, loved, cared for and pro- tected, the family is healthy, society is more healthy and the world is more human.”

The Bethlehem Mass was the only Mass for local Christians during Pope Francis’ two days in the West Bank and Israel, the second and third legs of a three-day journey to the Holy Land. The Mass was limited to about 10,000 people, but the crowd was enthusiastic, and many arrived while it was still dark to see a spot.

The altar was set up in front of a large mural of the Nativity, but in place of the Wise Men were the three popes who had previously visited the Holy Land — Paul VI, John Paul II and Benedict XVI.

Pope Francis told those gathered in the square that “children who are welcomed and defended, from the moment of their conception.”

After the Mass, the pope met with Palestinian refugees and children from four different camps in the West Bank. He told them not to let the past hinder them, but to always look to the future.

“Remember that violence cannot be defeated by violence; violence can only be defeated with peace — with peace, effort and dignity to move the nation forward,” he told those who greeted him during a 20-minute visit at the Dehisyhe Refugee Camp’s Phoenix Cultural Center.

Pope Francis greets children from the refugee camps of Dehisyhe, Aida and Beit Jibrin at the Phoenix Center of the Dehisyhe Refugee Camp near Bethlehem, West Bank, May 25.

Pope Francis visits the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum in Jerusalem May 26. The pope laid a wreath of flowers at the site, and talked to and kissed the hands of six Holocaust survivors. Also in attendance are Israeli President Shimon Peres and Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Providing pastoral care to immigrants

WASHINGTON (USCCB) — National and local Catholic charitable agencies around the country have long provided services to people in need, regardless of immigration status. However, several states passed laws that forbid what state legislatures consider “harboring” of undocumented immigrants — and what the Church considers Christian charity and pastoral care to those immigrants.

In Alabama, for example, the Catholic bishops, in cooperation with the Episcopal and Methodist bishops of Alabama, filed suit against a law prohibiting “harboring” of undocumented immigrants. Together, they explained that the “law makes illegal the exercise of our Christian religion, which we, as citizens of Alabama, have a right to follow.” They expressed concern that legally prohibited “harboring” (when there is knowledge of reckless disregard of the fact that persons are undocumented immigrants) would substantially burden their churches in their mission to serve undocumented immigrants in Alabama.

The law would have a chilling effect on their ministries — among other things, these church leaders feared that the prohibition on “harboring” would extend to activities like “(encouraging immigrants) to attend Mass (or give a ride to Mass) or (counseling) them in times of difficulty or in preparation for marriage”: and inviting “them to come to Alcoholic Anonymous meetings or other recovery groups at our church.”

Other states have adopted similar laws that threaten the Church’s ministry to undocumented immigrants. In March 2012, the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops and several other Christian denominations filed an amicus brief with the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Arizona v. United States. The brief discussed how the Arizona law and many state immigration laws like it threaten the Catholic mission to provide food, shelter and other care to all. In June 2012, the U.S. Supreme Court issued its decision and found that several of the provisions of the Arizona law were pre-empted by federal immigration law, so these provisions were struck down.

Aside from Alabama and Arizona, Georgia, Oklahoma, South Carolina and Utah have enacted laws that generally make criminal the “harboring” of undocumented immigrants.

What is our most cherished freedom truly under threat? Among many current challenges, these state immigration laws affect the religious liberty of the Church because they have criminalized certain acts of Christian charity and pastoral care. Religious liberty is more than freedom of worship; it includes our ability to make our contribution to the common good of all Americans without having to compromise our faith. Without religious liberty properly understood, all of us suffer, including those who seek a better life here in the United States.

What can you do to ensure the protection of religious freedom at home and abroad?

The U.S. Bishops have called for a Fortnight for Freedom from June 21 to July 4. Visit www.fortnightforfreedom.org for more information on this important time of prayer, education and action in support of religious freedom.

Historic Christian communities under siege in Syria

WASHINGTON (USCCB) — It has been a long and terrible three years for Syria. The violence continues, despite peace talks taking place periodically in Geneva. Christians, who once comprised 10 percent of the population, are caught in the crossfire between President Bashir al Assad’s military and anti-government forces. Christian communities, whose homes have been targeted, threatening their historic presence dating back centuries. Seventy churches and monasteries are reported to have been destroyed by warring parties. Christians have been kidnapped, held for ransom, tortured and often brutally killed. Two Orthodox bishops from Aleppo were kidnapped in April 2013; 13 Greek Orthodox nuns were taken in December 2013. The nuns were released in March 2014 but there is no word on the fate of the bishops. But Christians are not the only ones affected. According to the United Nations, over 130,000 Syrians (mostly civilians and many Muslims) have been killed and over 8 million have fled their homes. 6.5 million inside Syria and 2.3 million into neighboring countries, since the conflict began in 2011.

Fighting continues throughout Syria and threatens to spill into surrounding countries where tensions between Sunni and Shia Muslims remain high. The Syrian opposition remains a fractious group of political dissidents and militia leaders. Significant numbers are extremists, including many foreign fighters with ties to al-Qaeda style ideologies that have entered the fray. The government of Syria is bolstered by Hezbollah, an Iranian-supported Shiite movement whose presence threatens stability in Lebanon and increases the sectarian (Sunni-Shia) nature of the conflict. Both government and opposition forces are accused of having “disappeared” many civilians.

Many Syrian civilians lack the basics of life — food, water and shelter. Humanitarian organizations have had very limited access to internally displaced persons. The United Nations Security Council has passed a resolution calling both sides to allow access to humanitarian aid. It remains to be seen what impact it will have on a conflict where civilians have been cut off from aid in the past.

The large number of refugees places an overwhelming burden on adjoining countries. Catholic Relief Services, through its local Church partners, is assisting vulnerable people in affected countries. Since 2011, the U.S. has provided over $1.7 billion in humanitarian assistance to displaced Syrians.

The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops (USCCB) continues to urge the United States to work with other governments to obtain a ceasefire, initiate serious negotiations, provide impartial humanitarian assistance, and encourage efforts to build an inclusive society in Syria that protects the rights of all its citizens, including Christians and other minorities.

Led by Pope Francis, USCCB vigorously promoted the Day of Prayer and Fasting for Peace in Syria on Sept. 7, 2013 and worked successfully to oppose a Congressional resolution authorizing the use of force in Syria in response to alleged chemical weapons attacks. The bishops of the region were unanimous in opposing outside military intervention, which they feared would simply add fuel to the fire.

Syrian Christians have been frustrated that they have not been invited to participate in peace talks or international negotiations about how to resolve the Syrian conflict. They have reached out through the diaspora in Europe, the United States and other countries to share their stories and seek support. They fear that unless their voice is heard and they receive support from the international community, the Christian presence in Syria will dramatically decline, as it did in Iraq.
BISHOPS OF INDIANA GATHER FOR PROVINCIAL MEETING

Eight Indiana bishops gathered May 13-14 in Lafayette for a provincial meeting and a meeting with the executive director of the Indiana Catholic Conference. They are, from front left, Bishop Timothy L. Doherty of Lafayette, Bishop Charles C. Thompson of Evansville, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades of Fort Wayne-South Bend, Archbishop Joseph W. ABOARD THE PAPAL FLIGHT FROM TEL AVIV (CNS) — Pope Francis will meet with a group of sex abuse victims for the first time in June, he told reporters May 26.

During a wide-ranging inflight news conference on his return to Rome from the Holy Land, the pope also confirmed reports the Vatican is investigating charges its former secretary of state missappropriated some 1,600 accounts held by “perverts.”

The pope answered several questions by the Vatican spokesman, Jesuit Father Federico Lombardi, about what the Vatican is doing to investigate allegations of sex abuse by priests and bishops, in particular the financial scandal involving the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith.

Regarding the two Synods of Bishops on the family he has called for October and November, the pope lamented what he characterized as an overemphasis, by members of the clergy among others, on the right of the family to marry, on the youth unemployment and neglect of the elderly, problems he has cited as crucial in Europe, particularly in Italy and Spain.

The pope said speaking on that topic would be “an exaggerated view of the risk of ‘vulgar- isty,’” which he has defined in the past as the practice of setting general laws on the basis of exceptional cases. He emphasized the synods would consider the pastoral care of the family in its totality.

“Theology, the family is in crisis, it’s a worldwide crisis, the young don’t want to marry or to have children, problems ongoing, the youth unemployment and neglect of the elderly, problems he has cited as crucial in Europe, particularly in Italy and Spain.

Victory Noll Center offers learning opportunities

HUNTINGTON — Victory Noll Center will host the continuing series “Movies & Popcorn,” from 6:30 to 9 p.m. on Friday, June 13, promoting themes with undertones of faith and social justice.

The film “Waiting for Superman,” provides a cogent look at the crisis of public education in the United States told through multiple interlocking stories. Suggested donation is $10. Registration is required one week prior to each event by calling 260-356-0628, ext. 174, or contact the center by e-mail at victorynollcenter@olvm.org.

The popular program “Butterfly Workshop: Metamorphosis in Your Own Backyard” returns to Victory Noll Center on Tuesday, June 24. Two sessions will be held, the first begins at 10 a.m. and the second at 4 p.m. There is no cost to participate.

Leader Karen Hinshaw, Huntington County Purdue Extension Educator, will present a program about Monarch butterflies and how to raise the butterflies to release. Participants will discover the butterfly’s lifecycle and what to plant in yards to attract them.

To register for the butterfly workshop, contact the Purdue Extension at 260-358-4826.

Redeemer Radio’s In His Glory Sharathon a success

FORT WAYNE — Redeemer Radio, AM 1450 WLYV Fort Wayne and 89.9 FM WRRO Edon/Angola, raised $231,900, a new record, during its semi-annual sharathon recently. During the three-day, 24-hour event, the station received 1,318 pledges from individuals and businesses via phone, mail and even walk-ins to the station. The funds will help assist with operating expenses for the listener-supported station that serves the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, as well as the northwest corner of the Diocese of Toledo. The sharathon also makes it possible for listener-supported Redeemer Radio to continue to serve the community by means of Catholic radio and sharing the truth and beauty of the Catholic Faith.

Over 500 volunteers and studio guests made the sharathon successful by giving their time and talent during the three-day fund raiser. Tim and Janet Didier, chair couple for the event, commented: “Amazed. Fulfilled. Catholic family.

Our diocese is so fortunate to have this Catholic radio station. The knowledge and spirituality of the staff and volunteers as they give endlessly of themselves, both personally and financially, and share their stories and faith traditions is inspiring. Needless to say, we are truly moved and feel blessed to have been asked to play this role!”

Redeemer Radio has some exciting changes coming in June as announced during sharathon with the launch of “Redeemer Mornings,” a local morning show featuring host Deacon Jim Tighe, a switch in the Fort Wayne area on June 12 from AM 1450 to 106.3 FM as a result of a station swap, and Redeemer recently entered into an agreement to purchase of 95.7 FM in Michiana.

Scheiber Family Fund awards scholarships and grants

HUNTINGTON — The Huntington County Community Foundation announced that Stuart Elmore, Kyle Jolas, Grant Meese, Marie Scott and Sara Smith have been awarded 2014 Donald E. and Lou Rayne Scheiber Catholic Education scholarships. Each recipient is a graduating senior from Huntington North High School.

Elmore will be attending the Ball State University majoring in entrepreneurial management/law. He is the son of Donald and Kathy Elmore of Huntington.

Jolas will be attending Lindenwood University majoring in secondary education and exercise science. He is the son of Kevin and Michelle Jolas of Huntington.

Meese will be attending Indiana University majoring in finance. He is the son of Bill and Sheila Meese of Huntington.

Scott will be attending Indiana University majoring in elementary education. She is the daughter of Jeffery and Tammy Scott of Huntington.

Smith will be attending the University of Saint Francis majoring in nursing. She is the daughter of Tod and Joyce Smith of Huntington.

Also awarded were grants to support the Huntington Catholic Schools’ Run for the Rams and Bishop Luers High School’s Luers Knight.

The Scheiber Huntington Catholic School Fund was created in 1997. It was modified in 2010 and renamed as the Donald E. and Lou Rayne Scheiber Catholic Education and Charity Fund to allow for the awarding of scholarships. Trip by Pope Francis to Holy Land bears fruit

Pope Francis prays at the Western Wall in Jerusalem May 26. The pope stood for more than a minute and a half with his right hand against the wall, most of the time in silent prayer, before reciting the Our Father. Then he followed custom by leaving a written message inside a crack between two blocks.

Rite of Ordination to the Diaconate

The Rite of Ordination itself is rich with meaning and symbolism. After the chanting of the Gospel, came the Election of the Candidate, whereby the candidates are formally chosen for ordination and become referred to as the elect. From left are deacon candidates Meininger, Norton and Soberalski.

The candidates were presented to the bishop by Msgr. Bernard Galic, diocesan vocation director and pastor of St. Aloysius, Yoder. Msgr. Galic testified to their worthiness, after which Bishop Rhoades formally accepted them to be ordained as deacons.

With the elect kneeling and with hands outstretched, Bishop Rhoades solemnly recited the Prayer of Ordination over Meininger, Norton and Soberalski.

During the Litany of Supplication, the candidates laid prostrate on the sanctuary floor of the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception while the intercession of the saints and angels was invoked.

The deacons were each handed the Book of the Gospels, symbolizing the task of the deacon to proclaim the Gospel in liturgical celebrations and to preach the faith of the Church in word and deed.

After the litany, Bishop Rhoades laid his hands on the head of the elect, Jonathan Norton, in accordance with the apostolic tradition.
Deacon Zachary Barry brings trusting, open spirit to Priesthood

BY KAY COZAD

FORT WAYNE — Deacon Zak Barry has been preparing for the day of his Ordination to the Priesthood for many years with prayer and study. But he knows Jesus is in charge. “Only Jesus knows what I need in preparation for ordination, so my prayer has been opening myself up to Him and asking that He work in me so that I will be able to receive the graces I need in ordination,” he says.

A Fort Wayne native, Zachary David Barry is the eldest of the six children of Vincent and Rebecca Barry, parishioners of Our Lady of Good Hope Parish. He received his elementary education at St. Charles Borromeo School and graduated from Bishop Dwenger High School in 2006.

Growing up in a close-knit Catholic family, Deacon Barry credited his parents for his deep, enduring faith. “The first and grounding influence on my formation in the faith came from my parents. They formed my prayer habits early in life, taught me the importance of attending Mass, and gave me countless examples and lessons on living a life focused on the Lord,” he says. He holds dear the memories of attending Confession with his father on Saturday mornings, and the early morning bike rides he and his mom took to attend daily Mass together.

He notes, “And throughout school, as I learned more about the faith and grew closer to the Lord in prayer, my relationship with my parents — both the love and support they had shown me and the way I had seen them interact with each other — helped my understanding of the mysterious love, which God has for us, and the way in which we are called to return that love.”

He also merits the indispensable role of the priests of his youth and his religion teachers in his faith formation and spiritual growth. Deacon Barry recalls while in grade school his call to the Priesthood. “I first heard the Lord’s call in sixth grade, during a talk one of the parish priests was giving to the class on vocations. His words, ‘Some of the men in this room may be called to be priests,’ sank deep into my heart and took root there,” he says, adding, “My response to the call was to be open, to continue sharing and asking and listening in prayer, with trust that He would see to it that I found the right path — a trust that kept me from worrying about what my future would be and freed me to focus on growing in holiness not in the future but in the present.”

Deacon Barry was accepted into the seminary by Bishop John M. D’Arcy after high school graduation and spent the next four years studying philosophy at Immaculate Heart of Mary Seminary in Winona, Minn. Following graduation from seminary college in 2010, Deacon Barry transitioned to Mount St. Mary’s Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md., to study theology.

Seminary life has been a lesson in balance for this soon-to-be ordained shepherd of the Church. “Study is a large part of seminary life, but so is spiritual growth — especially prayer and the sacraments. Human formation also plays a key role, meaning seminary recognizes and teaches the value of being a good Christian man,” he says, noting that fraternity is important as well. “We are helped to develop our human virtues and encouraged to spend time together rather than burying ourselves in books and prayer all day, as important as they are.

Seminary life provides opportunities to understand and practice service as well. “Seminary forms men to have a pastor’s heart, ministering to needs in the community by making visits to nursing homes and helping in the schools, visiting prisons and helping in a parish,” he says.

Deacon Barry’s summer assignment experiences have been invaluable to his future ministry as priest. “The summers I’ve spent in the parishes (St. Elizabeth Ann Seton, Fort Wayne, St. Vincent de Paul, Elkhart, and St. Michael, Plymouth) were crucial points of my formation and discernment, because it was there that the Lord was able to confirm His call in my heart,” he says, adding, “I haven’t been more happy than I have been working in a parish.”

Deacon Barry was ordained into the diaconate by Bishop Kevin C. Rhodes on May 25, 2013, at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne. Now, a year later, as he waits the glorious day of Ordination to the Priesthood he cherishes his family’s support. “My family has been amazingly supportive! They are all excited for me, and my youngest sister Gianna is especially excited to make her first Communion at my first Mass of thanksgiving,” he says enthusiastically.

As for his priesthood ministry, Barry offers a spirit of openness and says, “What am I bringing to the Priesthood? Myself, whole and entire, my gifts and my weaknesses. I’m bringing a spirit open to guidance and correction and a heart seeking the Lord and to draw others closer to Him.”

Following ordination, Deacon Barry looks forward to celebrating the sacraments, especially the holy sacrifice of the Mass and Confession. And as he looks forward to “being in the parish, surrounded by the people of God and ministering to them,” where he knows he will “need God’s grace the most,” this humble servant of God says he is most excited about “being Christ to others — something I’m not worthy of and not capable of without extreme grace. But that is exactly what He’s offering me.”

Once a Saint, Always a Saint!

God’s Blessings upon Zachary Barry, Bishop Dwenger Alum ‘06, as you enter the Order of the Priesthood through the Sacrament of Holy Orders!

“You did not choose Me but I chose you, and appointed you that you would go and bear fruit… so that whatever you ask of the Father in My name He may give to you.” — John 15:16

Barry family will rejoice in God’s blessings as son is ordained

FORT WAYNE — When Zachary Barry is ordained a priest by Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades on Saturday, June 7, at Immaculate Conception Cathedral in downtown Fort Wayne, his loving family will witness the culmination of years of study, prayer and discernment.

Zak’s mother Rebecca told Today’s Catholic, “We first sensed Zak had a vocation to the Priesthood when he started talking! He is a born philosopher; when he was young, all his teachers said he was a deep thinker.”

And when he requested a breviary, a book containing the divine office of the Catholic Church, for his 18th birthday, so that he could pray the Liturgy of the Hours each morning, they were convinced he would pursue a religious vocation.

Zak’s parents are “cradle Catholics” and provided loving support for his decision, along with brother Greg, sisters Victoria, Madeline, Miriam and Gianna and extended family members, which include at least one priest and a religious sister. A large and joyful family contingent is expected to be in attendance for his ordination.

The Barry family attends Our Lady of Good Hope Parish in Fort Wayne where Zak was a faithful altar boy throughout his years at St. Charles Borromeo School and Bishop Dwenger High School.

Those encouraging and inspiring him during those formative years included Msgr. Edward Hession and other priests at St. Charles, as well as teachers and lay people who “lived their Christian vocation joyfully,” said Rebecca.

The oldest of the Barry children, Zak entered seminary training immediately after high school and obtained an undergraduate degree in philosophy from Immaculate Heart of Mary Seminary in Winona, Minn., then graduate degrees in divinity and theology from Mount St. Mary’s Seminary in Emmitsburg, Md.

It’s all about Catholic family for the Barrys. Zak’s father Vince said, “I want all of my children to find their true vocation and to develop and use their God-given gifts to serve His Church and thereby to achieve happiness. Zak’s ordination is the gateway to him fully living his vocation. It certainly will be a more unique blessing to our family than a child’s wedding and affect our family celebrations in ways we have yet to discover.”

Rebecca shared a mother’s perspective. “A priest in the family will be a special blessing, as well as a special cross for us. We have the happy burden, all of us as Catholics, to pray for our priests, bishops and Holy Father, as they lead us in our culture that is so hostile to Christ and His teachings. Our family will have an ‘extra’ share in that support of priests.”

“I feel privileged to have Zak for a son,” she said, “and feel he will be a blessing for his ‘new’ parish family, as he has been in our own family.”

As Zachary Barry receives the sacrament of Holy Orders from Bishop Rhoades on the day of his ordination, he will surely sense the love of family that surrounds and envelops him and, along with God’s divine presence, strengthens him for his priestly journey.

In and through the Church, Jesus acts

Feast of the Ascension of the Lord
Mt 28:16-20

In many dioceses in the United States this weekend is the liturgical celebration of the Feast of the Ascension of the Lord. Other dioceses observe this weekend as the Seventh Sunday of Easter. These reflections will refer to the biblical readings for the Feast of the Ascension.

The first reading, from the Acts of the Apostles, is from the beginning of Acts. As with the Gospel of Luke, the author addresses Theophils. The identity of Theophils is unclear. Was Theophils his actual name? Perhaps so. It was perhaps not. Theophils also is a title, meaning “friend of God.”

In any case, this initial form of address makes clear that Luke’s Gospel and the Acts of the Apostles are inseparably linked. Acts simply continues the story first given in the Gospel. It is important to remember this.

As the New Testament was compiled into one set of Scriptures, and especially as the Church accepted John’s Gospel as the authentic Word of God, the Gospel of John was inserted between Luke and Acts so as not to divide the four Gospels.

However, this process upsets the perception of seeing Acts as the continuation of Luke.

Important in this reading is the identification given the Apostles, 11 in number since the defection and then suicide of Judas. Acts clearly states that the Lord chose the Apostles. His selection was not insignificant or casual. It was done with the very power of the Holy Spirit.

They still need the wisdom of Jesus. They are confused about salvation and about the Savior. Will Jesus restore Israel to its old earthly might? Jesus clarifies what salvation means.

He also clarified the place of baptism in the mission and the sowing of the kingdom of God. The story ends on an evangelistic note. An angel tells the Apostles, “starting into the sky, to look around them and carry onward the Gospel.”

For its second reading, the Church offers a passage from the Epistle to the Ephesians. This reading is a prayer that all Christians might find true wisdom in Christ, the only source of truth. St. Matthew’s Gospel provides the last reading. This reading too identifies the dignity of the Apostles. They are with Jesus. Seeing Jesus, gloriﬁed body and face after the Cruciﬁxion, the Apostles believe. Doubts are gone.

The Lord then commissions the Apostles into the world. Here we see, first of all, the authority of Jesus without any place or anyone, and to bring all into God’s family by baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit. This passage is a declaration of the role of the Apostles, and of the task of the Apostles to continue to proclaim God’s mercy, but it also refers to the Ascension.

Reflection
For weeks the Church, with great joy and conﬁdence, has proclaimed to us the reality of the Lord’s victory over death in the resurrection. It has led us through weeks of rejoicing in the resurrection by revealing to us the response long ago of the first Christians to the fact that Jesus overcame death.

The link between Luke’s Gospel and Acts is important. Salvation in Christ continued after the Ascension. Jesus did not depart the earth in any ﬁnal sense in the Ascension. The most important divine plan of salvation is seen. Jesus chose the Apostles so that they would continue to preach the Gospel and reconcile humans with God. The Church gave, and still gives, the message of the Lord. In, and through, the Church the Lord acts.

We are able to encounter Jesus — just as the ﬁrst Christians encountered Jesus. Jesus still is with us. He bonds with us in Baptism. In Baptism, we enter the Church and meet the Lord, forever alive, forever redeeming, forever healing, forever forgiving, forever strengthening, forever loving.

The danger of soft atheism

A very instructive exchange between Gary Gutting, a philosophy professor at Notre Dame, and Philip Kitcher, a philosophy professor at Columbia, just appeared in the pages of The New York Times. Kitcher describes himself as a proponent of “soft atheism,” which is to say an atheism distinct from the polemical variety espoused by Richard Dawkins and Christopher Hitchens. Unlike his harsher colleagues, Kitcher is willing to admit that religion can play an ethically useful role in a predominantly secular society. I won’t get into this feature of Kitcher’s thought, for I have explored the Kantian reduction of religion to ethics elsewhere, but I would like to draw attention to one particular move made in this interview, since it shows, with remarkable clarity, one of the fundamental misunderstandings of religion common among atheists.

Prompted by Gutting, Kitcher admits that he finds all religious doctrine incredible. Pressed for an explanation of this rather extreme position, he points to the fact of the extraordinary plurality of religious doctrines: Christians, Jews, Hindus, Muslims, animists, etc. hold to radically different accounts of reality, the divine, human purpose, etc. And since all religions rely fundamentally on the same ground, the revelation offered to distant ancestors — there is no rational way to adjudicate these differences. Indeed, the only real reason that I am a Christian, he would maintain, is that I was born to Christian parents who passed the founding stories onto me. If you, as a Jew or Muslim or Hindu, have different foundational stories, there is no reasonable way I can convince you or you can convince me. It’s just your cockamamie myth against my cockamamie myth. This is, of course, a variation on the standard Enlightenment view that positive evidence of God is useless because it is subject to personal verification, and hence inevitably ineffectual, force being the only way that one religion can supersede another.

The fundamental problem here is that Kitcher completely overlooks the decisively important role that a religious tradition plays in the development and ratification of doctrine. It is true that religion is usually grounded in some foundational stories, but those experiences are not simply passed on dumbly like a football from generation to generation. On the contrary, they are sifted and tested through a complex process. On the contrary, they are sifted and tested through a complex process of reception and assimilation. They are compared and contrasted to other similar experiences; they are analyzed rationally; they are set in dialogue with what we know of the world on other grounds, they are subjected to philosophical investigation; their layers of meaning are uncovered through conversations that have unfolded across hundreds, even thousands of years; their behavioral and ethical implications are teased out and assessed.

Let us take just one example from the Bible in order to illustrate how this process happens. The book of Genesis tells us that the patriarch Jacob one night had a dream of...
The Anglican Wannabe fallacy

Prior to April 27’s canonization-doubleheader, I taped a length interview with the Australian Broadcasting Corporation, discussing both John XXIII and John Paul II. The ABC was kind enough to send transcripts of the programs it did on these giants of modern Catholicism, so I was able to read what others had to say about the Church’s two newest saints. Much of it was interesting, but some comments verged on the bizarre.

Dr. Lavinia Byrne (for those unfamiliar with the higher echelons of the British Catholic commentator) is a former nun whose book, and is now really taking off with her college classes in an excellent program. This all started with the interest, environment, materials and encouragement.

Something similar occurred when my son was in the fifth grade. We had been reading about electricity in our homeschool and studying electrical current. Out of the blue, one afternoon my son gave me a list of parts he wanted: a nine-volt battery, some wire, some metal and other things I can’t remember. Apparently he had started independently reading an electric circuitry book I had on our shelves and he wanted to make a burglar alarm. Instead of trying to control the project, I gave him the materials, some encouraging words and let him at it. In a day he had made, completely by himself, a working burglar alarm. I doubt he would have done so well had I tried to micromanage him.

It occurred to me recently that this formula, which I’ve seen time and again at work in our family, can be applied to helping our children develop a relationship with God too.

As parents we can spark an interest in our children to communicate with God. Beginning when they are very young we read them Bible stories, Saints stories and talk about God frequently, daily. As they grow older we feed the interest by supplying the right environment. This is accomplished by making a truly Catholic home, teaching them knowledge of the faith and frequenting the sacraments with them. Next, we provide the materials, (prayer books, saints books, statues and artwork in their rooms and our homes to uplift and inspire). We offer genuine enthusiasm (including our own example.) Then, geared with the necessary tools, they figure out themselves how they are going to make their own personal relationship with God. Like a plant in rich soil nourished by the sun and watered, they grow, amazingly.

Royal Reds win CYO softball championship

BY MICHELLE CASTLEMAN

FORT WAYNE — It took over two decades, but Coach Denny Jamison’s Royal Reds finally won the year-end Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) softball tournament. According to Jamison, the CYO softball league has been around nearly a quarter of a century.

Back then his wife, Barb, was the head coach for nine years. The league started as slow pitch, but soon switched to fast pitch and Denny was the assistant. “So, technically, 2014 was my rookie season as head coach,” Jamison quipped.

Most recently, the small-school program, made up of girls from both Queen of Angels and Most Precious Blood, has grown into a championship team under the direction of Beth Peters — until she took the head job at Bishop Dwenger High School this season.

Now Jamison is assisted by Brian Brown and the pair had an all-star lineup of talent. “We had outstanding pitching and catching this season and all of the girls were solid with the basics,” Jamison detailed.

Also encouraging for the future of their program, of the 11 listed on their roster, the Royal Reds two pitchers were seventh graders (Olivia Dickerson and Sandy Freistroffer), they started two fifth graders in the championship game, the Cardinals out-hitting the Royal Reds in the championship game, the Cardinals came up just short. Lefty pitcher, Isabella McGillycuddy also had nine strikeouts in the loss. Assistant coach Karen Bougher summarized, “I was so proud of our girls. They never gave up. They were a great bunch who all got along and love the game.”

The Royal Reds beat a strong team from St. Joseph-St. Elizabeth (who list five fifth graders) in the opening round of the tournament, then downed St. Jude to get to the championship round. They finished with an impressive 9-1 overall record.

Their lone loss came early in the season to the newcomers from St. Rose/St. Louis who went unbeaten in their first CYO regular season, but lost in a 1-0 nail-biter to St. Charles in the semifinals of the tournament. The two did not meet in the regular season.

The Royal Reds finished with a 5-2 record overall. Despite mounting a huge comeback driving in five runs off of two triples and two singles in the seventh inning and out-hitting the Royal Reds in the championship game, the Cardinals came up just short. Lefty pitcher, Isabella McGillycuddy also had nine strikeouts in the loss. Assistant coach Karen Bougher summarized, “I was so proud of our girls. They never gave up. They were a great bunch who all got along and love the game.”

ST. JUDE EAGLES CROWNED CYO SOCCER CHAMPIONS

In the boys’ Catholic Youth Organization (CYO) soccer championship, the St. Jude Eagles were crowned the 2014 champions after defeating St. Vincent, 4-1, on May 20. Led by Justin Baeten’s two goals, the Eagles avenged a regular season loss to the Panthers. In the win, Chino Eke and Lucas Harkenrider had the other two goals for the Eagles. Thom Obergfell and Ron Harkenrider coach the Eagles.

thing permanent,” Bishop Rhoades said. “Deacons are icons or images of Christ the Servant — the configuration to Christ the Servant through diaconal ordination is permanent.”

“That’s why the Church requires us to be ordained deacons first,” Bishop Rhoades further explained. “We don’t leave one Order behind when we assume a different one. The sacramental effects of the three grades of Orders are cumulative, not exclusive.”

“You won’t be icons of Christ the Servant for just a year, but for a lifetime,” he continued. “No one is admitted to the higher degrees of Holy Orders without first being configured to Christ with the indelible character of the diaconate.”

He noted, “When you are priests, God-willing, the diaconal dimension of your ministry must also be visible. What is this dimension? It is the dimension of service, ‘diakonia.’”

Bishop Rhoades spoke of the threefold ministry of the deacon. The first was the diaconia of the liturgy, ministers of the altar. “You will prepare the altar for the Eucharistic Sacrifice and you will give the Body and Blood of the Lord to His people,” he said. This ministry also includes taking Holy Communion to the sick, the suffering and the homebound.

The second was to exercise the diakonia of the Word. “This is the first duty of all the ordained, the first duty of our priests and bishops as well,” Bishop Rhoades said. “We share a common responsibility to proclaim and explain the Gospel. Remember always that it is the Word of God we preach, not our word.”

The bishop said through preaching and teaching, “we are called to lead people to grace, to an encounter with Christ. To do this task well, you must, (I repeat) you must be men who contemplate the Gospel with love. You can’t give what you don’t have. I urge you as preachers to first linger over the pages of the Gospel and read them with your hearts as well as your minds. Prayer, spiritual reading and meditation must be part of our daily routine as ministers of the Word of God.”

The third aspect of the ministry of deacon is charity. Bishop Rhoades recalled the first deacons in the Acts of the Apostles were ministers of the Word. “And remember also that besides material poverty, there is much spiritual and cultural poverty.”

At the end of the Mass, Bishop Rhoades reminded all that the family is the seedbed of vocations. “All the people in this congregation are now my family,” he said, “and I am willing to lay down my life for any of them. I look forward to getting to know all of my new family and all of my spiritual children. It’s very exciting.”

His expectations for his diaconate are to continue to “experience the grace of Our Lord and to experience the grace from Holy Orders for the first time.”

He also noted the importance of the Blessed Mother. “No matter where you go, she is always there beside you,” he said. “I expect to experience her hugs for the rest of my life.”
