Apostolic exhortation can help church model mercy to families

BY DENNIS SADOWSKI

WASHINGTON (CNS) — Pope Francis’ apostolic exhortation on love and the family invites the church to see the daily struggles of families as an opportunity to encounter people the way Jesus encountered people with mercy throughout his life, Catholic observers said.

Because of its length — 256 pages — and the depth to which the pope explores love, marriage and church teaching on the family, the document deserves to be unpacked with patience and careful discernment for mercy to take root in the Church’s response to real human needs, Catholic leaders told Catholic News Service.

The exhortation, “Amoris Laetitia’ (The Joy of Love), on Love in the Family,” was Pope Francis’ reflection on the discussion, debate and suggestions raised during the 2014 and 2015 meetings of the Synod of Bishops on the family.

Archbishop Joseph E. Kurtz of Louisville, Kentucky, president of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, noted Pope Francis’ repeated calls of the importance of clergy taking time to get to know individual circumstance and discuss with people how they can discern God’s teaching for their lives.

The pope points to “dialogue, which requires both speaking and listening, and discerning to help people see what their next step is” as key to his call for mercy. Archbishop Kurtz, a member of both synods, said in an interview after participating in an online news conference at USCCB headquarters.

The archbishop said the pope is attempting to...
The Lamb Shepherds Us

IN TRUTH AND CHARITY
BISHOP KEVIN C. RHoades

This Sunday, the Fourth Sunday of Easter, is popularly called “Good Shepherd Sunday” since the Gospel reading is always about Jesus as the Good Shepherd. In this Sunday’s Gospel, Jesus speaks about giving His sheep eternal life and promises that they shall never perish. We see this image of Jesus as shepherd connected to the image of Jesus as the Lamb in the second reading this Sunday from the Book of Revelation. In his vision of heaven, Saint John writes about a great multitude from every nation, race, people and tongue standing before the throne of God and before the Lamb. He writes that the Lamb who is in the center of the throne will shepherd them and lead them to springs of life-giving water, and God will wipe away every tear from their eyes.

Jesus is the Lamb and the Shepherd. He is the Victim and the Priest. We are reminded of this at every Mass. He is the Lamb of God who offered Himself in sacrifice for us. He is the Shepherd who leads us, His sheep, to springs of life-giving water.

Saint John’s vision in chapter 7 of the book of Revelation shows us a great multitude of people worshipping God. They are wearing white robes and holding palm branches in their hands. White is the color of victory and resurrection. That is why we clothe the newly baptized with a white garment. Palm branches are also symbols of victory.

One of the elders worshipping God in this vision explained to Saint John who these people are: “These are the ones who have washed their robes and made palm branches: These are the ones who have washed their robes and made palm branches by the blood of the Lamb.”

The words about washing their robes and making them white in the blood of the Lamb seem odd. How can clothes be made white by washing them in blood? Clearly, this is referring to the blood of Christ that cleanses us from the dirt of sin. We wash our robes in the blood of the Lamb by accepting the Gospel, believing in Jesus, and being baptized. We survive the time of great distress; we have washed our robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

It is good to remember on Good Shepherd Sunday that the Good Shepherd is also the Lamb, the Lamb that was slain, the Lamb-Shepherd that leads us to springs of life-giving water. He leads us to the sources of life, including Baptism and the Holy Eucharist. We are not worthy to receive Him, but we ask that He only say “I am the bread of life. We are not worthy to receive Him, but we ask that He only say “I am the bread of life. We are not worthy to receive Him, but we ask that He only say “I am the bread of life.

That God will wipe away every tear from our eyes.

When we read the book of Revelation, we are reminded of things in the Catholic liturgy. The Church, especially in her liturgy, is a sign of the heavenly gathering. Saint John’s vision of heaven is a great liturgy, the center of which is Christ the Lamb, seated on a throne, worshipped by an assembly who sing, offer incense, and pray. Our liturgy is really an anticipation of the heavenly liturgy. In fact, at every liturgy, the saints and angels in heaven worship with us.

At the beginning of the Eucharistic Prayer at Mass, we sing the Sanctus, the words sung by the heavenly host in Revelation, chapter 4: “Holy, holy, holy is the Lord God of hosts. Saint John sees a throne before which burned seven flaming torches. At every Mass, we look forward to sharing in Christ’s glory when every tear will be wiped away. Most importantly, at every Mass, we receive the medicine of immortality, Jesus, the bread of life. We are not worthy to receive Him, but we ask that He only say “I am the bread of life. We are not worthy to receive Him, but we ask that He only say “I am the bread of life.

The Holy Eucharist is the pledge of the glory to come. May the Good Shepherd lead us to the life-giving water and to the glory of heaven! May our robes be washed and made white in His Blood, the Blood of the Lamb!
The Notre Dame Evangelium Vitae Award goes to Little Sisters of the Poor

BY ANN CAREY

NOTRE DAME — A standing ovation in a packed Basilica of the Sacred Heart greeted the Little Sisters of the Poor who were on campus April 9 to receive the Evangelium Vitae Award for outstanding service to human life. The Little Sisters operate 30 homes in the United States that offer health care and assisted living for more than 13,000 low-income seniors.

The award has been presented annually since 2011 by the University of Notre Dame’s Center for Ethics and Culture. Awardees are announced on Respect Life Sunday in October, with the honor being conferred the following spring.

The 2016 award event took place about two weeks after the Little Sisters had appeared before the United States Supreme Court, where they are challenging a government mandate that requires employers to offer contraceptives to their employees.

The unusual standing ovation erupted early in the homily of Fort Wayne-South Bend Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades at the Mass preceding the award banquet. He alluded to the First Reading from the Acts of the Apostles, comparing the witness of the sisters to the witness of the apostles who were called before the Sanhedrin and told to stop teaching in the name of Jesus:

“At this Mass, there is a community of sisters with us who, in the face of a terribly unjust mandate of our federal government, have stood up, and by their actions have said what Saint Peter and the apostles said to their government in the earliest years of the Church: ‘We must obey God rather than men,’” the bishop observed.

“I wish to say to the Little Sisters of the Poor who will receive the Evangelium Vitae medal this evening, thank you for your courageous witness!”

The enthusiastic ovation then erupted in the congregation heavy with Notre Dame students. Bishop Rhoades went on to encourage the rest of those in attendance. “When human laws contradict God’s laws, believers are called to obey God even if disobeying human authority will cost them social advancement, their livelihood, or their lives.” Bishop Rhoades drew connections between the words in the Acts of the Apostles to life today. “St. Peter’s words in today’s reading are a rallying cry in many situations in which people are pressured to violate their consciences by human laws or commands.” He continued, “It is good to ask ourselves: where did the first disciples find the strength to bear witness to Christ? What was the source of their joy and courage to preach and live the Gospel in the midst of so many obstacles and even violent persecution? We learn from St. Peter that the only explanation is the presence of the Risen Lord with them and the action of the Holy Spirit in their lives. They were enabled to follow in the footsteps of Jesus, to witness to Him with their lives, and to share in His sufferings with joy.”

At the banquet after the Mass, the Evangelium Vitae Medal was conferred on Little Sister of the Poor Loraine Marie Maguire, who as United States mother provincial in the international order, represented the sisters. Over a dozen Little Sisters of the Poor and some residents from several of the sisters’ homes also attended.

Conferring the medal was Director of the Center for Ethics and Culture, Carter Sned, who recently was named to the Pontifical Academy for Life, which advises the pope on life issues. Sned also is a Notre Dame law professor.

Sister Loraine Marie said the Little Sisters were “honored beyond words” to receive the award, and she thanked the sisters’ ministers for making the sisters’ homes possible.

She related that the sisters had faced many challenges in their legal battle, but also had “received many graces and an outpouring of love and support” and had come to “a new level of Providence over us.”

Sister Loraine Marie credited the power of prayer for helping the Little Sisters through the recent difficult months, saying that prayer is essential for being able to show acceptance and respect for others with a different belief system, while also witnessing to the truth.

She urged supporters at the banquet to consider “our common commitment to the Gospel of Life in this Year of Mercy” by following Pope Francis’s encouragement to “gaze even more attentively on mercy so that we may become a more effective sign of the Father’s action in our lives.”

The Evangelium Vitae medal is accompanied by a $10,000 prize. Past winners include the Knights of Columbus and the Sisters of Life.

“My favorite Christmas movie is “It’s a Wonderful Life”. I appreciate the scene where George Bailey (Jimmy Stewart) hugs his home’s creaky old staircase banister, giving thanks and gratitude for the home’s beautiful imperfections and for his life. And this is where my story begins…

From the late 70’s into the 80’s, a priest from the Ft. Wayne diocese sexually abused me, starting at age 12. To my shame, this went on for 10 years. The abuse occurred in the church rectory, school residence, camping trips, and gym clubs. He knew this innocent boy was anxious, depressed, and afraid. He analyzed my family and mental state and then proceeded to systematically groom me. He took me to movies, Komet games (he knew my parents, family, co-workers, management, and friends) and did everything I could to look perfect and “normal”. He lived his whole life afraid of authority and conflict. This fear permeated to my adult life in the workplace, where I struggled for years to deal directly with people who didn’t treat me well or bullied me, real or perceived. I ran away from every tough discussion and conflict. I did everything in my power to perform at the highest standards of perfection. My goal was to look good at all costs. I tried to please everyone (my parents, family, co-workers, management, and friends) and did everything I could to look perfect and “normal”. I lived a compulsive life, constantly cleaning the house, garage, and yard (picking leaves off the lawn one by one), an illusion to gain control and mask myself from the outside world. I wanted no one to see the real me. Most shamefully…

I turned to addictive behaviors like pornography and alcohol to comfort myself, and drown my sorrow and deep sadness, further isolating me from reality. I was very angry with the Church. In 2006, my wife, with grace and love, held my hand and encouraged me to seek help—her insight revealed to me my addictive behavior and anxiety was linked to my sexual abuse. With courage, I finally admitted that I had serious problems and went into intense therapy, where I began to realize the lasting impact of the abuse. I was hurting myself and hurting those that I loved. With support from my wife, family, wise therapists, men’s recovery group, and 12-Step, I began to embrace the recovery journey and I came alive. I began to understand that I didn’t do anything wrong, it was not my fault, and that the priest was completely accountable. Amen.

In 2008, I made contact with the Diocese (for abuse victims, it does take time to come forward—years in my case), and my wife and I met with Bishop John D’Arcy. I shared my entire life story with the good bishop. He listened with humility and loving care. It was life changing. I asked Bishop D’Arcy if God would ever forgive me, and he said, “God has forgiven you completely, and you let us take care of forgiving the priest. You just focus on recovery and healing.” At that very moment, the weight of my suffering was lifted and I cried in my wife’s arms. My wife and I met with Bishop Kevin Rhoades in 2011, to receive pastoral counsel and support. I remain in contact with Mary Glowaski, from the diocese, for spiritual support.

Today, I am in therapy with a group of men who are survivors of sexual abuse. This recovery work continues to be life changing as I work on shame reduction. Even after ten years, recovery is not a perfect linear line to “fixing” me, but I can see progress. I’m beginning to heal and find peace. I am still afraid, but not as fearful. I still get anxious, but I’m less anxious. I still worry, but I worry less. I still catch myself at work trying to be perfect, but I don’t worry too much about what people think of me! I still have compulsive thoughts, but I can assure you, I have not picked up one leaf off the grass in years! I treasure having fun with my wife and family, being spontaneous and playful. With courage, I am no longer afraid to explore retirement options from the corporate world, and I am currently pursuing plans to follow my heart—to become a teacher.

Recently, I began working on one of the most difficult aspects of recovery—forgiveness. I have finally been able to quietly say in my heart to the priest, “I forgive you.” This doesn’t mean I won’t hold him accountable. This is a breakthrough in my recovery work—to forgive, heal and let go.

So…when I come downstairs in the morning to start each day, I touch the bottom of our stair-case banister (just like George Bailey), reminding myself— in all my imperfections, how grateful I am for my life. I love God and I still love my Catholic faith. To me, this profoundly symbolizes my progress and healing.

Note: I went back and forth whether to sign my name. Though I would like to sign my name, out of respect to some members of my family, who do not know my story yet, I chose not to sign my name. Patience in recovery is key. Some day, on my timeline, I will sign my name…
help people encounter Jesus and through that encounter feel the love of God. “There is that sense of being very intentional because we carry with us the capacity to walk with people to Christ. And he’s saying husbands and wives, you also have that potential,” Archbishop Kurtz said.

“We all share that responsibility to conversion about what does it mean to deepen our sense and let Christ shine more clearly through so many people don’t see the rule (of the Church), they see the person of Jesus coming through,” he explained.

During the final news conference, Archbishop Kurtz described the exhortation as a “love letter to families” that invites all people to “never stop growing in love.”

“It is also a love letter calling the Church, the family of God, to realize more and more her mission to live and love as a family,” said Bishop Richard J. Malone of Buffalo, New York, chairman of the bishops’ Committee on Laity, Marriage, Family, Life and Youth, said the exhortation invites the Church to heal wounds that families experience because of poverty, human trafficking, immigration, domestic violence and pornography.

“We also have room to grow and improve and we welcome the pope’s encouragement for the renewed witness to the truth and beauty of marriage of a more tender closeness and families who are experiencing difficulties,” Bishop Malone said.

Both prelates said the exhortation builds on the teaching of the Second Vatican Council as well as Pope Francis’ post-conciliar successors, Blessed Paul VI, St. John Paul II and Pope Benedict XVI, and invites ministers to welcome people who may have turned away from the Church because they feared their status — as single people, being in same-sex relationships, or being divorced and civilly remarried — would mean they are unwelcome in the Church.

“I think the call is for the whole church, the bishops, the priests, the lay leadership, but also each family to be able to say ‘God has given me such beauty in my family and things with his help can be much more. I think that’s what he is talking about the grace that is at work in each one of our lives.”

Archbishop Kurtz said in response to a question.

Helen Alvare, professor of law at the Antonin Scalia Law School at George Mason University, who was the third news conference participant, described the document as balancing the natural longing for marriage in society with a “true appreciation for how bad the situation can be on the ground.”

The pope acknowledges misperceptions about Church teaching on sex, that some perceive marriage as evil so avoid it, the fear of raising children, and ideas that marriage has become an “empty ritual.” Alvare said. She also identified the pope’s deep concerns for children, whose rights are often overlooked because of the challenges facing many families.

Father Deck added that he sees the influence of the pope’s Latin American roots in the document. “That means in our dealing with people who we think need to show an ability to step into other people’s shoes, to go where they are instead of immediately requiring them to come where we are,” he said.

Jana Bennett, associate professor of moral theology and ethical leadership at the University of Dayton in Ohio, said she found the document signifies an important shift in how the Church thinks about moral theology. “We are invited to think about pastoral discernment in a way that we’re not just looking at rules,” she said.

At the same time, the pope is calling the Church to be patient in how the exhortation is lived out or implemented in parishes, Bennett explained.

“He’s calling us to be patient with families … that we’re all important,” she said.

While Bennett said that Pope Francis’ immediate predecessors held up an ideal of family, the pontiff is calling the Church to recognize that image, but to realize “that we’re not going to meet that ideal.”

Father Paul Check, executive director of Courage International, which provides support for people who experience same-sex attraction, said the pope is calling the Church to recognize the value of each person.

“It’s only by understanding who people are and who they are created to be by Christ that we can best accompany them,” he told CNS.

He also said Pope Francis’ citation of “Human vitae” (“On Human Life”), which affirms that Catholic moral teaching against artificial contraception, is important to note because it continues to uphold long-standing Church teaching.

Meanwhile, Cardinal Donald W. Wuerl of Washington, a member of both synods, said that with the huge number of references in the document to the two synods, “it’s clear that Pope Francis is trying to insert in the mainstream of Catholic theological thought and tradition the expressions of the challenges that the bishops say they are facing and what the bishops brought to this whole discussion.

“I don’t find anything surprising” in the document, he told CNS in Rome during a break from meetings, “but I welcome its welcome tone addressed to everyone. He’s saying: ‘This is the faith of the Church. Yes, it’s difficult to live. Yes, we know we don’t all live it as fully as we should. But we are still all part of God’s family, God loves us and we have to be making our way together.’

Recognizing the complex variety of reasons why some people cannot and do not fully live up to Church teaching on marriage and family life, Pope Francis provides no new rules for dealing with those situations. Cardinal Wuerl said Catholic theology and pastoral tradition “never had a one-size-fits-all. The idea is that there is an ideal to which we are called, a level of perfection to which we are called — be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect.” How do that? That’s the one size that fits all, but along the way the Church has always said the good pastor goes out in search of the lost sheep and surely that lost sheep is not someone who is following to perfection the Christian ideal.

“Jesús said, ‘Seek first the kingdom and everything else will be given to you.’ He didn’t say, ‘Until you have achieved the fullness of the kingdom, nothing will be given to you.’

On the situation of divorced and civilly remarried Catholics, the document “starts with this beautiful reminder, ‘You’re still part of the family.’

The document, he said, invites the divorced and civilly remarried to acknowledge Church teaching on the indissolubility of marriage and to honestly examine their situation and discover how they can grow closer to Christ.

“I don’t see anything in the document that changes much of what we’re already doing in pastoral practice and that is you meet with people, you try to help them address their lived situation,” he said. “We’re not changing the teaching (in pastoral teaching), but we’re not saying, ‘because you’re not perfect, this is no longer your home.’”

“Amoris Laetitia” offers a theologically compelling vision of marriage and family life for the Church … He deals with divorce and cohabitation pastorally, building the case for a scriptural and theological formation of conscience. It’s a document that will have an influence upon the Church’s theology of marriage and pastoral practice for marriage for the next generation.”

Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades poses with students on his recent visit to St. Rose of Lima School in Monroeville. He was the guest speaker at their Lenten Mission whose theme was ‘Rejoice in God’s Mercy.’ Pope Francis has declared this a ‘Year of Mercy’ and Bishop Rhoades has asked schools to partner with schools in Haiti. Hearing Bishop’s message, St. Rose of Lima took up the challenge and chose to help schools in Haiti as their Lenten project. St. Rose students and staff invited parishioners to join in their work of “Mercy” to help Haitian students in the collection of school supplies making this a parish-wide project.

Created in God’s Image: A Catholic dialogue series on the sin of racism, and the call to conversion

GRANGER — A four-night series “Created in God’s Image,” based on the pastoral letter of Bishop Dale J. Melchek, retired Bishop of the Diocese ofGary, will be April 14, 21, 28, and May 5 at 7 p.m. at St. Pius X Parish, 52553 Fir Rd.

Sponsored by the St. Pius X Catholic social teaching ministry, this event will be an opportunity for soul searching and examination, necessary if we are to rid our communities of all ignorance, insecurity and fear and see God’s image in all we meet. There is no cost for attending the series, but preregistration online at http://stpius.net/created is required.

Gratitude tour makes stop in Fort Wayne

FORT WAYNE — Most Reverend Bishop Joseph Mlola of the Diocese of Kigoma, Tanzania and Father Nicholas Nilema of Our Lady of Victory Parish in Seaside, Oregon are coming to Fort Wayne, April 18-22, as part of a gratitude tour to thank benefactors for 23 years of faithful support. Worldwide Seminarian Support, a non-profit organization founded by Father Nicholas Nilema and St. Vincent de Paul parishioner John Becker, supports seminarians in Africa and India but also aids in the creation of schools and a seminary, wells for clean drinking water, and other necessities.

“It is a gift from God to see the fruits of all the benefactors’ efforts,” said Becker.

On Wednesday, April 20, Bishop Mlola and Father Nilema, both of the Apostolic Life Community of Priests, will be welcomed during an 8 a.m. school Mass at St. Vincent de Paul Parish, 1502 E. Waller Rd.

On Thursday, April 21, there will be a Mass of Thanksgiving at 6:30 p.m. at St. Vincent de Paul Church, with a reception and refreshments to follow from 7:30-9 p.m. in the Msgr. Kuzmich Life Center. The public is welcome.

World Day of Prayer for Vocations

On April 17, 2016, Catholics across the globe will celebrate the 53rd anniversary of the World Day of Prayer for Vocations. The purpose of the day is referenced in Scripture to “pray the Lord of the harvest to send laborers into His harvest” (Mt. 9:38, Lk 10:2). While the Church laborers into His harvest (Mt. 9:38, Lk 10:2), while the Church is referenced in Scripture to “pray for the beloved.”

Vocations. The purpose of the day focuses on vocations to the priestly, religious, and diaconal life. It is an opportunity for all to pray for vocations.

What year of seminarian training are you in?

Deacon Craig Borchard: 6th year. I will be ordained a priest this summer.

Mr. Sam Lyon: 1st year

Mr. Joe Knepper: I was accepted into the seminary by Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades on February 22nd, the feast of the Chair of St. Peter.

Where is your hometown and to what parish do you belong?

Borchard: I grew up in Rochester Hills Michigan, a suburb of Detroit, but I went to the University of Notre Dame as an undergrad for 5 years. That’s how the South Bend area became home for me. When I discerned into seminary, I was actually in Philadelphia, but I felt most called to serve at home, which was the diocese that South Bend was in and in my home parish, St. Flux X.

Lyon: Technically, it’s Leo, but I consider Fort Wayne my hometown. I thought of Fort Wayne as my parish. I went to Pontifical College Josephinum right after high school at Bishop Dwenger.

Knepper: My hometown is Fort Wayne and St. Vincent de Paul is my parish. I graduated from Carroll High School.

How old are you?

Borchard: 29. I will be 30 at the time of ordination.

Lyon: 19

Knepper: 25

When did you first consider becoming a priest?

Borchard: It was in high school, I had just finished a Crisis Retreat in Detroit at Brother Rice High School. It was a 4 day retreat and I had an incredible conversion-type experience. It was technically a ‘reversion’ because I was already Catholic, but just going through the motions with my faith. But on this retreat, I had a really profound encounter with Jesus Christ in the Eucharist, as well as the love of God the Father and the Holy Spirit and it completely changed my life. I went from a lukewarm, psuedo-catholic, almost agnostic to full fledged participating Catholic. I really did a 180 in my life especially in my spiritual life. And all I wanted to do is give that encounter back to other people so that they could have that experience too.

That was the first time that I thought of priesthood because that’s what a priest does — He brings people to Jesus, that’s his job, that’s his calling. And when I had this encounter with Jesus in the Eucharist, I thought of how the priest brings people the Eucharist. That was the first time I thought about the priesthood — I was 18 years old at the time. I continued to consider it in college, but didn’t take it very seriously. It was at the Theology of the Body Institute (a Catholic not-for-profit) that I worked at in Philadelphia after college that I had more beautiful encounters with Our Lord. Because of the work that I was doing and the work of the institute, I was meeting all these amazing, on fire priests and I really fell in love with the priesthood. Coupling that with my experiences in high school, I knew that the Lord was calling me to consider seminary and the priesthood.

I am a cradle Catholic and when I was little, I would see priests up at the altar and thought that it would be pretty cool. But then I learned that priests don’t get married, so I just thought, oh, nevermind.

But it became a much more serious thought when I was in high school and started taking my calling on more seriously. I knew that the Lord was calling me to consider seminary and that with my experiences in high school, I started learning more about the priesthood. Coupling that with my experiences in high school, I knew that the Lord was calling me to consider seminary.

The attraction to the priesthood developed over time. I was first open to it about a year and a half ago that I was first open to it. I studied theology as well as intellectual sort of way—why the Church teaches what she teaches. I studied theology as well as engineering and was helping to put some intellectual meat on the bones. That process continued throughout my time at the Theology of the Body Institute to further my discernment between the vocations of marriage and priesthood, weighing both options. But really, as a person, I was growing up too—when I started I was 18 and now I’m 29, so you just grow up in years of seminarian education, you grow up in your faith with more self mastery and knowledge and having more patience for yourself and others. Your discernment grows up as you do and becomes more precise and defined and ultimately is really the process of having a deeper and deeper peace about where the Lord is calling you to serve.

I’ve been surprised in this process already how much joy comes from trusting God. I’ve never been one to make much plans without having a plan and knowing what the outcome will be. There are things that I’ve had to say “no” to — to say yes to that has forced me to trust God a lot more. There is an unshakable joy as a result of that.

Next week’s issue will feature more questions and answers from these seminarians.

We are men with HOPE to bring.

We followed the call that we received from the Lord, and in return we found joy and hope. We pray that the Lord will call many other men to help bring His mercy to the world.

April 17, 2016
August 18, 2015 marked the day that Bishop John M. D'Arcy would have been 83 years old. On that day, nearly 200 of his friends, family members and former parishioners gathered at Our Lady of Presentation Lecture Hall for a dedication of the new St. John’s Seminary conference room in his name. Msgr. Morony, rector at St. John’s said, “It is fitting that we should dedicate a room to Bishop D’Arcy at St. John’s Seminary, where he taught — in the church where he said his first Mass.”

The Bishop John M. D’Arcy Conference Room at Our Lady of the Presentation Lecture Hall in Brighton, Mass. Bishop D’Arcy grew up in this church, received all his sacraments and said his first Mass there. The church is now part of St. John’s Seminary.

Did you know…?

- The main reason young men do not consider the priesthood is because they have never been personally asked.
- If 3 different people invite a man to consider the priesthood, he is 5 times more likely to apply to be a seminarian.

Vocations are everyone’s business.

Pray for specific men you know to consider the priesthood... ...then personally invite them to do so.

The Prayer for Today’s Servant

God, you are the source of my life and my desire to follow you. At times there is so much noise within and all around me, it is difficult to listen as Mary did.

Quiet my heart, that I may reflect on how much you love me. Help me recognize your presence now.

When I am afraid, help me trust as Mary did. Help me believe NOTHING is impossible for you. Let your Spirit fill me and set my heart on fire. May I, like Mary, respond “YES” to being your servant today.

Guide my heart. Let me share your love with all those I meet, with each neighbor in need.

I rejoice in you and how you love through me. Keep me centered in you as I make daily choices and the bigger decisions of my life. Amen. Scripture: Luke 1: 26-56

Things that can’t change

When the Second Vatican Council was putting the finishing touches on one of its key documents, the Dogmatic Constitution on the Church (Lumen Gentium), Pope Paul VI proposed that it include a statement that the pope is “accountable to the Lord alone.”

The suggestion was referred to the Council’s Theological Commission, which, perhaps to Pope Paul’s surprise, flatly rejected it: the Roman Pontiff, the Theological Commission noted, “is…bound to revelation itself, to the fundamental structure of the Church, to the sacraments, to the definitions of earlier Councils, and other obligations too numerous to mention.” The pope cannot, in other words, change the deposit of faith, of which he is not, in other words, change the custodian.

As for those “other obligations too numerous to mention,” they include the pope’s accountability to papal authority. Well do I remember an academic conference at which a serious philosopher (who thought himself an extremely orthodox Catholic and had, with tongue only partly in cheek, introduced himself to our ecumenical assembly by saying, “I’m the kind of Catholic I still OK to hate”) announced, “If the pope said that 2 + 2 = 5, I’d believe him.” Another philosopher, even more distinguishing, gave the proper, Catholic answer—what-it-would-mean-if-Cardinal-Kasper-were-vindicated-ensued.

What was striking about the s管线ists in this instance was that both the progressives and the conservatives/traditionalists seem to have a false understanding of what popes can do.

By declining Paul VI’s suggestion about a papacy “accountable to the Lord alone,” Vatican II made clear that there are limits to what popes can do. On the bottom-line matters at issue in the two recent Synods, for example, no pope can change the settled teaching of the Church on the indissolubility of marriage, or on the grave danger of receiving holy communion unworthily because these are matters of what the Council’s Theological Commission called “revelation itself.”

It seems inevitable, alas, that the spin is going to continue, no matter how the pope phrases his call for the pastoral accompaniment of the divorced and civilly remarried. We may hope that the articulation is not so ambiguous that the battle of the spinners will continue ad infinitum and ad nauseam. But in all of that spilt ink, and amidst all those flashing pixels, let’s remember that there are things in the Church that don’t change, because they can’t.

Salvation has no limits

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

4th Sunday of Easter
John 10:27-30

The Acts of the Apostles supplies the first reading. It gives a glimpse into the modus vivendi of St. Paul as he moved across Asia Minor in his proclamation of the Gospel of Jesus. Paul evidently first went to synagogues. It is not surprising. After all, he was of Jewish descent and background, and he was well educated in the Jewish culture and religion of the time.

Quite likely, he would have been more comfortable, but also more likely to be heard, in such surroundings as synagogues.

It also is clear that he was not always met by universal acceptance, although it would not be accurate to say that he attracted no converts from among the Jews whom he met. He drew many of them into the ranks of Christians. He also attracted Gentiles.

However, these details are only secondary to the story. The point of this reading is that the word of God, pronounced by Jesus, continued to be spoken, and received, long after the Ascension.

Moreover, it was proclaimed by an Apostle, and by Barnabas, a disciple of an Apostle.

Salvation went on. Through the Apostles, Jesus still spoke. The Book of Revelation furnishes the next reading. It is very symbolic in its terms, but its meaning is clear: Among the sheep saved by Jesus are people from every nation. Their number is great. They are baptized, wearing the white robe of baptism. They carry the palm branches of martyrdom. They have kept their faith despite persecution. Their sins have been washed away from Lord, precisely by the sacrificial blood shed by the Lord on Calvary.

The Good Shepherd leads them. He rescues them from the heat of the day and the dryness of earthly life.

St. John’s Gospel provides the last reading. This Gospel reading, read immediately after the passage from Acts, also presents Jesus as the Good Shepherd. For an audience overwhelmingly agrarian, as was the audience to which Jesus preached, imagery built on sheep and shepherd was very familiar and well understood.

This reading states that the sheep know the shepherd. In turn, the shepherd knows them. It implies a relationship of close-ness and of trust. Moving beyond the symbolism, the readings say that this shepherd gives eternal life. Possessing this life, the sheep will never perish.

Furthermore, no one can snatch them away from the shepherd. The reason is that they belong to the shepherd because of the will of the Father.

Then, in a great testament of self-identity, Jesus proclaims oneness with the Father.

Reflection

This weekend, the Church calls us to celebrate the Resurrection once again. It begins the fourth week of proclaiming the excited news that it first pronounced at Easter. He lives!

With the readings this weekend, and with those of the foregoing weeks of Easter, the Church essentially makes two points.

The first point is that Jesus lives, literally, and that in the sublime act of Resurrection is evidence that Jesus is God, the Son of God, the eternal Father. Clear, among the salvific forces of life, the Church presents us with its unique, among humans. As God, Jesus is the bearer of life, truth, peace, and joy. The Lord has no substitute.

With no substitute, he rescues us from whatever dangers and evil we may face. We are welcome to the grace of faith, God the Father’s great gift of love.

That’s it. That’s all the Church says, and the Church says it all the time. It is the Church’s basic belief, Jesus is God. In Jesus is truth and life. It also reassures us. Jesus is with us still.
