The gift of three newly ordained Priests

BY JENNIFER MILLER

SOUTH BEND — “The priesthood is a gift: no human being is able to make himself a priest, a mediator for God. As the letter to the Hebrews says: ‘no one takes this honor upon himself, but only when called by God.’”

With these words, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades reminded the faithful of the great gift they were about to receive in the ordination of Deacons Craig Borchard, Bob Garrow and David Violi on June 4th. And to the Deacons, the elect, he spoke of their insertion into the life and mission of Christ, the great High Priest and Good Shepherd, through their priestly ordination. To a packed, joy filled congregation in the Cathedral of St. Matthew, South Bend, Bishop Rhoades reminded all: “How close God is to us, His beloved people, in the gifts He gives us through the ministry of the priests of His Son. And for this gift, we give thanks to God today.”

Stretching down along Miami Street and around the corner, priests and deacons in cream and gold colored vestments lined the outside sidewalk to process into the Cathedral. On a beautiful Saturday morning, the sight itself was a witness to the goodness and rich blessings of God. The same spirit of great joy and gratitude filled the Cathedral inside. Lead by talented musicians and cantors, the faithful’s voices harmoniously sang “O Christ, High Priest Eternal!” People traveled to witness this sacrament from all sides of the Diocese of Fort Wayne-South Bend, and numerous parishes across the city of South Bend itself. This was the first ordination to the priesthood in South Bend in 23 years. The excitement was truly palpable both for the incredible gift
W e gather here in Saint Matthew Cathedral today to celebrate a great gift from God to the Church — the gift of the sacrament of ordination.

The priesthood is a gift: no human being is able to make himself a priest, a mediator for God. As the letter to the Hebrews says: “no one takes this honor upon himself, but only when called by God.” God has called our brothers Craig, Bob and David to the priesthood, the priesthood of His Son. And for this gift we give thanks to God today.

God will enter the life of these three men in a new way through ordination. The Lord will consecrate them so that they will be able to speak and act in the name of His Son. Through this consecration, they will be inserted into the life and mission of Christ, the great High Priest and Good Shepherd, in order to extend His saving mission. They will do things that no men can do by their own power. In Christ’s name, they will speak the words which absolve us of our sins. Over the offerings of bread and wine, they will speak Christ’s words that make His Body and Blood present as food for His people. How close God is to us, His beloved people, in the gifts He gives us through the ministry of the priest of His Son!

Craig, Bob, and David, you were already consecrated to the Lord when you were baptized. You were immersed in Him. Today, you are called to enter into a new way. Through priestly ordination, you will belong to God in a new way as you are configured to His Son, the Head and Shepherd of the Church. This is the truth of the sacrament you are about to receive. With this priestly consecration, you will receive an awesome mission: to be, in and for the Church, a human body and soul, a true and living image of the one eternal Priest who is Jesus.

In contemplating the immensity of this mission, you may feel a bit like Jeremiah when the Lord called him to be His prophet. He was afraid: “Ah, Lord God, I know not how to speak; I am too young.” Jeremiah knew his limitations and felt that he was not up to the task that God entrusted to him. God answered Jeremiah. He told him to have no fear. God was sending him on his mission and assured Jeremiah that He would be with him. He gave the young prophet His very special words and said: “See, I place my words in your mouth!” God gave Jeremiah a heavy responsibility, but He gave him the grace to fulfill it. The Lord does the same through priestly ordination. Deacons Craig, Bob and David, like Jeremiah, know their limitations and unworthiness. They say “yes” to the priestly mission with trust that the Lord will be with them, that His grace will sustain them. They believe in Jesus’ promise of the help of the Holy Spirit in their ministry. And, yes, God will place His words in their mouth — words like “This is my body which is given up for you” and “This is the chalice of my blood which will be poured out for you.”

These, our brothers, are being ordained during the Jubilee Year of Mercy. This has particular relevance for priests since they are called to be a year “steeped in mercy, so that we can go out to every man and woman, bringing the goodness and tenderness of God.”

We offer to you the Eucharist as “the beating heart of the Gospel” and “the very foundation of the Church’s life.” This has particular relevance for priests since they are called to be His ambassadors. In receiving priestly ordination today, you will receive the gift of the Holy Spirit for the forgiveness of sins. In the confessional, you will act as ambassadors of Christ, instruments of God’s merciful love and forgiveness. They will say the powerful words of absolution by means of which God reconciles sinners with Himself and with the Church.

Craig, Bob and David, you will share in the priestly mission of Jesus to pardon and save sinners. As priests ordained during the Jubilee Year of Mercy, you may always be faithful servants and living signs of God the Father’s mercy! I encourage you to be generous with your time and make yourselves readily available for hearing confessions. I pray that as confessors, you will reveal the heart of the Good Shepherd by the manner in which you welcome, listen, counsel, and absolve those who come to you to receive the Lord’s mercy and love.

In the Gospel of this Mass, we hear Jesus ask Peter three times: “do you love me?” Only after Peter’s affirmation of his love did Jesus give him the mission to feed and tend His sheep. Jesus did not ask Peter what his talents, gifts and skills were. He didn’t even ask the one who had denied Him whether he was going to be faithful to Him. Jesus asked Peter only the thing that matters, the one thing that gives his vocation its foundation: “do you love me?” Craig, Bob and David, that’s the question that Jesus asks you today. He is asking you to love. Like Peter, you are being asked to love Him: “Lord, you know that I love you!”

Parochial ministry must be born of love. Jesus says to you today as He said to Peter: “Feed my sheep.” He is asking you to love His Bride, the Church, to love her as He loves her, and to care for her as He cares for her. Jesus is asking you to bring others to know and love His Bride, the Church. He will entrust her into your hands as He said to Peter: “Feed my sheep.”

The Eucharistic Sacrifice is the center of the Church’s life and also of the life of the priest. It is from this sacrament of Christ’s self-giving love that our brothers about to be ordained will receive the spiritual strength to serve God’s people and to fulfill their responsibilities with genuine pastoral charity. The Eucharist is truly the culmination of all the tasks and activities of the priest. Craig, Bob and David, the Church will be built up in love every time you celebrate the Eucharist. May you celebrate Holy Mass prayerfully and fervently, and model your lives on the mystery you celebrate!

Dear brothers, we thank you for having the courage to say with Saint Peter: “Yes, Lord, you know that I love you!” and for accepting the beautiful task of being His ambassadors. We pray that throughout your priestly life you will learn to love Christ and His Church more and more. You have a beautiful teacher of this love for Christ and His Church: the Blessed Virgin Mary. Today is the Feast of her Immaculate Heart.

As the Sacred Heart of Jesus symbolizes the reality of Jesus’ love, so the Immaculate Heart of Mary symbolizes the reality of Mary’s love. Craig, Bob and David, as devoted sons of Mary our mother, I pray that you will experience her maternal love ever more deeply in your priestly lives. May she be close to her Immaculate Heart! May she be an example for you to watch over you and protect your ministry with her love that you may be holy priests after the heart of her Son! of three new priests, as well as a sacrament that many present had never witnessed. For Father Bob Garrow, the special location was especially poignant. A St. Matthew parishioner, he had received all of his sacraments in the Cathedral Parish from Msgr. Michael Heintz, who was in the ordination class of 1993, the last time priestly ordinations were held in South Bend. A spiritual father for him, Msgr. Heintz also vested Father Garrow with the stole and chasuble during the ordination Mass, vestments of the priestly office.

Father Garrow is especially grateful to Bishop Rhodes for this special location for the occasion. The newly ordained priests are from the South Bend area of the Immaculate Heart of Mary Parish, and Father Garrow spoke to them and gave and invested my love Christ and His Church more intensely in the Sacrament of Reconciliation.

June 4 was also the Feast of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The day before the dress rehearsal for the ordination, the Solemnity of the Sacred Heart of Jesus. “As the Sacred Heart of Jesus symbolizes the reality of Mary’s love, so Bishop Rhodes explained. “We pray that throughout your priestly life you will learn to love Christ and His Church more and more. You have a beautiful teacher of this love for you in the Blessed Virgin Mary. May she who is the mother of priests watch over you and protect your ministry with her love that you may be holy priests after the heart of her Son!”

Pastoral ministry must be born of (this) love. The Church will be built up in love every time you celebrate Mass.” He repeated this last sentence twice, emphasizing the way in which God works in our world, through love. The communion songs echoed the theme of love, praising God in the Eucharist.

Father Garrow spoke beautifully of the gift of the priesthood as not just for himself. “It is a gift that has been given to me for my own personal use. It’s to be given to other people. Give it to them and give and invest my whole self. And I do look forward to that.”

In his homily Bishop Rhodes spoke of this same gift as coming from God for the salvation of all people. “They will do things that no one can do by their own power. In Christ’s name, they will speak the words which absolve us of our sins. Over the offerings of bread and wine, they will speak Christ’s words that make His Body and Blood present as food for His people... God will enter the life of these three men in a new way through ordination. The Lord will consecrate them so that they will be able to speak and act in the name of His Son. Through this consecration, they will be inserted into the life and mission of Christ, the great High Priest and Good Shepherd, in order to extend His saving mission.”

Before his ordination, Father Craig Borchardt also spoke of the gift of priesthood given in service for the people of God. On the forefront of his mind, the night before ordination was his future parish assignment. “Those are my people,” he said with a smile. “Those are the people that the bishop and the Lord have called me to minister to. I already have that connection on my heart. How can I best bring Jesus to them? I will learn them and they will learn me.”

All three newly ordained priests were easily filled with such love and excitement for God and His people, that their voices shone with true joy and peace of God’s will. Father Garrow spoke of this calling and choice to respond and affirm as, “It’s not about me. It’s about Jesus Christ. During the Mass, Bishop Rhodes began by thanking Fathers Craig, Bob and David for “saying ‘Yes!’ to God’s call.” He described their “Yes!” as “a great gift from God to the Church.”

When the Rite of Ordination began, the Lord consecrated the three elect, called forth and each answered “Present.” From the St. Joseph side of the church, loud applause erupted and spread throughout the cathedral, as the faithful expressed their joyful gratitude and affirmation of those about to be ordained to the holy priesthood. When first discovering God’s call, years ago, Father Garrow spoke with Msgr. Heintz. “I felt unworthy. And he told me, ‘God is calling and choosing you and He will make you a priest. You will be inserted into the life of these three men...’”

New career ministry helps those seeking jobs

Organizers plan to take the program online to accommodate more people

By Lauren Caggiano

Fort Wayne — A new ministry at St. Vincent de Paul in Fort Wayne is focused on catering to the needs of local jobseekers.

There is a spiritual component of job seeking — something co-organizer Molly Roman wanted to address with the ministry. Roman moved back to Fort Wayne after being away for several years and wanted to find a way to give back while building on her experience in the business world. So she approached Father Dan Scheidt at St. Vincent’s with her idea and was able to gain some momentum. She met with several volunteers who were interested in helping — many of which were in Human Resources or management. The end result is the Career Ministry program.

The group has met several times and has taken a variety of formats. For example, in May they had a speaker who led an exercise based on two books. And in February they hosted mock interview sessions. Volunteers helped critique jobseekers’ answers. They’ve seen a great interest when speakers have been part of the program. They’ve had as many as 20 attendees at some sessions.

According to Roman, regardless of the format, everyone receives career coaching and resume review. The intent is to be a positive, nurturing and supportive environment. Anyone is invited, regardless of faith or religious background. They approach job seeking in a holistic way.

“Our goal in this ministry is to really give people help and hope,” she said. “We look at the person and not at the resume.”

“Discouragement can block progress and Roman and her team want to remove any barriers to success. Speaking of success, Roman said she hopes the ministry can connect jobseekers with employers in a variety of industries. She said she would love to recruit more volunteers, especially those with hiring experience. The more the merrier, the more people they can help.

Parishioner Lizzy Kee is one jobseeker who has benefited from this ministry. She currently works two part-time jobs, but is looking for something full-time.

“I went (to the program) one evening, had an enjoyable time, and learned some tips to help me with my resume and future interviews,” she said. “Molly asked for my resume so she could forward it to potential employers. I interviewed with one man a few weeks later as a result.”

Fellow parishioner John Taylor speaks highly of the ministry and volunteers. He said he found the team to be talented and experienced — offering “useful tips and advice for career seeking skills, resume building, interviewing skills, etc.”

He also acknowledged the spiritual aspect. The ministry is a source of comfort in times of uncertainty for him. Life changed pretty dramatically in a short amount of time. He shared, Taylor was working a sales job which required significant travel; he was sometimes on the road for days at a time.

“I knew things had to change for me to be a better husband and to eventually be a great father. It was no longer about me, it was about us,” he said.

“We wanted to start a family right away, and I’m happy to share that we had our first child this month.”

At the end of October, his position with John Paul Mitchell Systems was eliminated, and he began actively seeking new opportunities. The career ministry was a vehicle for that search.

“(It) certainly helps you discover what you can do to move in the direction you want to go,” he said about the ministry.

“Each time I attended I was also reminded of how important our faith is, and to seek strength from the Lord in prayer.”

Roman hopes to help many more people who also have a need for career guidance. For the busy summer months, the organizers plan to take the program online to accommodate more people.

The programing will consist of one-on-one coaching (by appointment only) and a three-part webinar series: Utilizing Faith, Hope and Love to Achieve Job Search Success.

“We will break down faith, hope and love into structured frameworks and exercises to give you tools and clarity to reduce your stress and drive you toward success,” Roman said.

To sign up for the summer webinar series, or to schedule a one-on-one coaching appointment (by phone or in person), simply email career.ministry@staintv.org with your request.

Live networking events will resume in September.

Anyone interested in the ministry is invited to check out the Facebook and LinkedIn groups “Career Ministry at St. Vincent de Paul Catholic Church” for updates, job postings and networking opportunities.

Maria McCoy named Westview High School Valedictorian

By Bonnie Elbersen

Wolcottville — Maria McCoy was recently named valedictorian of her graduating class at Westview High School, Topeka. She is a member of Blessed Sacrament Parish in Albion. Maria plans to attend Purdue University, where she will pursue a degree and, later, a career in biomedical engineering.

In addition to her rigorous course work, she found time to letter in basketball and volleyball. She was a member of the National Honor Society, National Art Honor Society, Spanish Club, Student Council and the prom committee.

Some of her treasured memories of high school will be time spent with her friends, playing basketball and cheering on school teams in the Warriordome and the field house.

Maria treasures, as well, the opportunity she had to attend ND Vocations with its theme of saints’ gifts that changed the world. In doing so, she came to the realization that everyone has similar gifts that, if used as God intended, can make profound changes in their everyday world. And with her many talents, Maria will surely make an impact on her world in years to come.
We are proud of Mother Teresa,
Albanians say of future saint

TIRANA, Albania (CNS) — Blessed Teresa of Kolkata, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1979 and will become a saint Sept. 4, was "loved in Albania" for her years of charity work in some of the poorest parts of India and around the world, Anila Kika, a government economist, told Catholic News Service in an interview on a downtown Tirana street. The fact that the nun was originally Albanian made this love — and pride — for her even stronger among Albania's people-believers and nonbelievers alike, said Kika, an Orthodox Christian. "We all went out to greet her," when Mother Teresa visited Albania in 1991, said Kika. "All Albania ... we are proud of Mother Teresa." Born to an ethnic Albanian family in Skopje, in what is now part of Macedonia, Mother Teresa went to India in 1929 as a Sister of Loreto and became an Indian citizen in 1947. She founded the Missionaries of Charity in 1950. Shortly after she died in 1997, St. John Paul II waived the usual five-year waiting period and allowed the opening of the process to declare her saintliness. The date chosen for her canonization is the eve of the 19th anniversary of her death and the date previously established at the Vatican for the conclusion of the Year of Mercy, a pilgrimage of people like her, who are engaged in works of mercy.

First Amendment, Gospel a 'double mandate' for Catholic press, Erlandson says

ST. LOUIS (CNS) — Catholic communicators "have a double mandate," the First Amendment of the Constitution and the Gospel, Bishop John England Award June 2 from the Catholic Press Association of the United States and Canada. "These are perilous times," he said in his acceptance remarks. "We are looking at competing ideological agendas that too often are incompatible with the Gospel and that too often threaten the weakest among us — both born and unborn — the undocumented, the terminally ill, the poor and neglected." Catholic communicators' vocation "is to be their voice," Erlandson said, "Our vocation is to be the voice of the church. That is our responsibility and our privilege." Our Sunday Visitor, based in Huntington, Indiana, was founded 104 years ago "to be a voice for the church and the rights of Catholics," he said, adding that he is "proud of any role I have played in this legacy."

Life is short; start forgiving, making amends, pope tells priests

VATICAN CITY (CNS) — Mercy recognizes that life is short and that so much good needs to be done that there is no time to waste in making amends, Pope Francis told priests. "That is why it is so important to forgive completely" and let go of paralyzing self-pity so mercy can get "its hands dirty" and make reparation for the wrongs committed, he said in a retreat for clergy. Mercy does not overlook the harm caused by sin, "rather it takes away evil's power over the future. It takes away its power over life." To help priests and seminarians better understand the proper role mercy must play in their lives and ministry, Pope Francis led thousands of men on a spiritual retreat in Rome. The aim, he said, was for priests to be ready to receive mercy in order to show it even more. Over the course of the day June 2, the pope led three separate meditations — each nearly an hour long — in three of Rome's four basilicas: St. John Lateran, St. Mary Major and St. Paul Outside the Walls. Live video links let clergy follow the readings and reflections from different locations. Introducing how his Ignatian-inspired spiritual exercises would work, the Jesuit pope apologized for "the family endorsement." He said guiding personal prayer with Ignatian spirituality allows people "to feel and savor the things of God" deep within themselves. Action and conversion are spurred, he said, by first feeling and being moved by what God is saying or showing.

Bishop says 'Brexit' could lead to loss of funds for aid agencies

MANCHESTER, England (CNS) — European funding for Catholic aid agencies based in the U.K. could be withdrawn if the British people reject the status quo in the June 23 referendum. "If we lose a second vote, it can be withdrawn," the Scottish Catholic International Aid Fund, which would lose grants following a "Brexit" victory in a referendum in late June, said an English bishop. Auxiliary Bishop William Kenney of Birmingham said groups such as CAFOD, the overseas aid agency of the Catholic Church in England and Wales, and SCIAF, the Scottish Catholic International Aid Fund, would lose grants following a "Brexit" victory in a referendum June 23. "Caritas Europa, to the best of my knowledge, would not comment on a neutral position on the referendum," he said by first feeling and being moved by what God is saying or showing.

Admonish the sinner

Admonishing the sinner is certainly not easy to do. It takes the virtue of prudence to find just the right moment and just the right words, and saying them in a way that clearly affirms the human dignity of the person you are admonishing, even as they challenge him or her to fulfill his or her highest potential.

Tolton Society marks renewed interest with pilgrimage

SOUTH BEND — The Father Augustus Tolton bus pilgrimage to Chicago was sponsored by the Tolton Society of St. Augustine Parish. The diverse delegation of 43 also included parishes from Sacred Heart and St. Pius X in Granger as well as Bethlehem Missionary Baptist. Pilgrims enjoyed a buffet soul food lunch at Pearl’s Restaurant in the historic Brownsville area of Chicago.

The pilgrimage was enhanced by knowledgeable tour guides Vanessa White of Chicago Theological Union and Deacon Gerard Jordan of Pennsylvania. Traveling by Cardinal bus, the group walked in the steps of servant of God Father Augustus Tolton, stopping to pray at each historic site on the itinerary. The guides modeled the joy and love of Father Tolton for all despite the sufferings he endured from slavery, racist priests, from the physical and spiritual challenges of his ministry and from poor health — he died at the young age of 43.

Our Lady of Hungary celebrates a century of faith, fellowship

BY JODI MARLIN

One hundred years after its founding, founding and aspect of Our Lady of Hungary Catholic parish is different than it was in the days of the mists, or immigration, of former European Hungarians to the South Bend area. However, although English- and Spanish-language Masses have replaced Hungarian-language worship services, the deeply rooted neighborhood parish remains a warm, embracing community that holds fast to its legacy of active expressions of faith.

The community of Our Lady of Hungary first took form in 1916 as a mission church of St. Stephen’s Parish. Rev. Lawrence Horvath, St. Stephen’s pastor, built a church for Our Lady of Hungary on Catalpa Street near Prairie Avenue. Rev. Paul Miller, a Notre Dame priest, traveled to the far side of the city to celebrate masses and administer the Sacraments. The current name of the parish, Our Lady of Hungary, was adopted later in honor of the missionaries’ homeland.

In December of 1921 the Right Reverend Herman Alerding, Bishop of Fort Wayne, appointed Rev. George Gyory as pastor of the mission and charged him with developing it into a parish. Rev. Charles Scholl, a non-Hungarian priest, was appointed to assist. The parish moved once more, in 1923, in order to make room for the expanding Studebaker car company founded. Land was acquired on Calvert Street, and the church was moved on rollers to the new location.

Father John Sabo, who had become an assistant since 1930, succeeded Father Gyory when he retired due to ill health. Father Sabo became pastor on Jan. 26, 1935. He was later named a Dame priest, traveling to the members’ homeland.

Built during the winter of 1916-17, Our Lady of Hungary began as a mission of St. Stephen’s Hungarian parish in South Bend. Here, a Holy Day is celebrated at the original church.

at the same location, for a larger church building that stands today. Its stately Romanesque Rival Style utilizes a cruciform plan. The rounded arches seen in the church’s doors, windows and the arcades along the nave are a defining aspect of Romanesque architecture. The most striking interior features are the altar triptych and the murals adorning the walls of the chancel and transepts. Services in the newly dedicated church were held on Christmas 1949, even though the worship space was not yet complete.

The Hungarian community was very close-knit, and the church played a role of primary influence on the education and socialization of most families in the immediate area. Students felt more like brothers and sisters than classmates, in many cases. May crowns and 40 Hours devotions were met with anticipation, and the children attended Mass not weekly, but daily. Early Our Lady of Hungary parishioners were characterized by a deep loyalty to both God and country. A testament to those affections stands a short distance from the church, where in the same year the current church was dedicated The Purple Heart Memorial Tower outdoor altar was also constructed, in memory of those who died in the service of the United States armed forces.

Among the 1974 graduates of Our Lady of Hungarian Catholic School was an eighth grader by the name of Kevin Bauman. In 2011 Father Bauman returned to the parish — this time, as its shepherd. At that moment in the parish’s history the demographics were not in its favor. The Hungarian population had grown older, and now waned in numbers. Under Father Bauman’s bilingual leadership the parish also reached out to the local Mexican community, which represented the newest generation in the parish’s environs.

Today the Spanish-speaking community joins its Hungarian American counterpart in both liturgies and celebrations. Two English Masses and two Spanish Masses are celebrated each weekend, and the parish’s Rosary Society, Sacred Heart Society, St. Anne’s Society and the Men’s Knights of Columbus groups enjoy strong participation; as does the youth group, Legion of Mary and St. Vincent de Paul Society. Parish life is punctuated annually by the Our Lady of Hungary Parish Festival, featuring the aroma of traditional and Mexican fare. Alumni pack the closed streets to listen to sit back and enjoy the sounds of Hungarian and Mexican musical groups.

The Most Reverend Father Michael Bloom, SVC, archbishop and papal nuncio to Uganda, Africa, and a former student and parishioner of Our Lady of Hungary, inaugurated the parish’s centennial year on Jan. 10 with a Mass concelebrated by Father Thomas and the parish. On June 26, Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades will be present to the community and preside over a culminating observance of its faith-filled history.

The bilingual anniversary Mass will be celebrated by Bishop Rhoades and Father Bauman at noon. A dinner reception will be served immediately following the Mass, at 2 p.m., in the school auditorium.

Eric Sundberg, music director, retires

BY MARK WEBER

When Eric Sundberg was a junior high student in Battle Creek, Michigan, he planned to study architecture and engineering but at the same time he had a song in his heart and a guitar in his hand, teaching himself, increasing his talent, unaware that he was headed for a career in music.

That discovery occurred in Germany where he was an Army clerk and spent many hours entertaining with his guitar. Sundberg’s love for music became so strong that he now knew that he wanted to be a full-time musician but also knew that he needed a musical education.

So in 1972 after his Army duty, he enrolled in Kellogg Community College in Battle Creek and then switched to Western Michigan University as a music major studying composition, conducting, keyboard theory and more guitar technique. It was here that music began to pay off when during a guitar lesson, his instructor said, “Eric, I’ve been accepted in med school, so you have to take over my guitar students.” Eric was shocked and protested that he knew nothing about teaching. “But you’re my best student.”

replied the professor, and with that Eric began giving private lessons and has continued for 40 years.

After graduation, Sundberg went back in the Army as a bandsman, finding ideal duty in Panama as a percussionist in an Army band performing formal concerts, parades, marches, retirement events and more in every country in South and Central America.

In Venezuela, Eric Sundberg heard the high notes when he met his wife to be, Glenis. They married there and eventually had four sons.

Back at the base in Panama, Eric spent a lot of time with the Catholic chaplain, serving Mass, playing church music, developing a particular interest in that niche.

After Panama, Eric and Glenis, now with two sons, were stationed at Fort Sheridan, Illinois and living in Chicago. They decided to leave Army life so Eric could pursue a career in church music.

To do this, Eric sent resumes to dioceses in the Midwest and received an interesting response from Ed Throm, music director at the Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne. Through Ed Throm’s efforts, Eric received an invitation to audition for Father Terry Place, pastor of St. John the Baptist Parish in New Haven.

He came, he played, he stayed…and has found spiritual fulfillment, personal enrichment through work he loves, plus a special attachment to families and the enjoyment of teaching children of the children he taught. His special attachment to families; being with them in their deepest moments — weddings, funerals, recitals; describes a unique feeling within Eric Sundberg’s heart and soul that will be unmatched regardless of new interests found in retirement.
Hallowed Moments

About six months ago, I had a particularly unforgettable day in the office. The best part of being a doctor for me is the interaction I have with patients and their families. Very special things seem to happen behind that closed office door. It is likely that the one-on-one interaction with patients and our oath of confidentiality helps provide them with the courage and confidence to share their stories. In fact, sometimes I am asked to allow residents, medical students, or nurses present in training to shadow me for a day so I can provide teaching. I know it is part of my calling to do this, but I also know that there is then very little chance that one of those hallowed moments will occur when other medical personnel follow me into the room. On this particular day I had two unforgettable encounters.

One of them was a 94-year-old patient that I have seen for years. He had developed severe aortic valve stenosis (severe narrowing of the valve that opens as blood is pumped out of the heart). He is quite an amazing 94-year-old specimen, walking with confidence into the examining room. On this particular day I told him that if he had 100 people with aortic stenosis of his severity, the majority of those people would be dead in 1 year. I told him that if he wanted to try to live on we might be able to offer him a TAVR (Trans-Aortic Valve Replacement). I wrote an article about this procedure, published on the elderly, not too long ago right here. To date, the oldest patient we have ever had was 93 years old. If he had been willing to talk to the TAVR team and see if they would consider him, but it is still considered a major procedure. There would be serious risks involved (even more so at age 94) including at least a 2-3% chance of death and a 5% chance of stroke. He had been discharged from the subject and began talking about his wife and the wonderful marriage they had had for over 70 years. In fact, he told me he did not want to try to extend his life with any heroic measures. I listened some more and became confident that not pursuing a possible operation was the right decision for him. We were both at peace as he left the office.

A few patients later, I saw an 81-year-old man with early dementia who was accompanied by a very loving daughter-in-law. I have followed this man for many years. Although he has dementia and significant short-term memory loss, he remains fairly insightful and can still manage things with a little guidance from his family. He has an abdominal aortic aneurysm (AAA) that we have been following for a few years, and it had grown to the size it could very well rupture in the next year. It was time to have that honest discussion and decide on a plan of action. I then discussed with him the risks and the benefits of having it fixed. He did not want to go through the pain or the expense of having surgery. He explained to me that he had lost his wife a few years earlier, and without her companionship, he did not want to try to extend his life. He also still had the insight that with prolonging his life, many years would become very worrisome. He explained to me that his wife was getting serious dementia, and his family would have to experience this.

The power of forgiveness

THE SUNDAY GOSPEL

MSGR. OWEN F. CAMPION

Eleventh Sunday in Ordinary Time

Luke 7:36-8:3

The first reading for this weekend’s liturgy is from the Second Book of Samuel. Scholars refer to First and Second Samuel as historical books. Historical books in the Bible do not exactly describe the description of history books today, not because they are untrustworthy or make-believe, but because the purpose of the book is to tell a religious story. For the authors of these works, as well as for the prophets, nothing was more important in life than being true to God.

In this reading, Nathan, the prophet, confronts David, the king of Israel, with his relationship with Bathsheba, the wife of Uriah, the Hittite leader. Since Bathsheba was married, the relationship was an adultery and a sin. Nathan knew the sin had been detected, and only one thing was worse, namely adultery with a pagan. Such unions weakened the commitment of Israel to the one, true God. Nevertheless, when David admits the error of his ways, even in the presence of the prophet, Nathan assures him that God forgives him. The Epistle to the Galatians furnishes the second reading. This passage splendidly reveals what genuine Christian living is. “I live now not I, but Christ lives in me.” This statement is not familiar to, and beloved among, Christians, captures the intimacy of the bond between the Lord and true disciples. It is a bond created by a person’s commitment to faith. It is a bond that brings salvation to the disciple.

St. Luke’s Gospel provides the third reading. It too is familiar to Christians. It is the story of a “sinner” woman. The text does not describe this woman as a prostitute, but over the centuries Christians usually have assumed that she was a prostitute. Assuming that the woman was a prostitute only underestimates the depth of God’s love, shown in Christ forgiving the woman’s sins. This aspect of the story, namely God’s forgiveness, is the point of this passage.

Whether the woman was a prostitute or not, we see in this passage God’s forgiveness, in Christ’s mercy, is so great and unrequiting that those who repented and sinner’s forgiveness was extended.

The presence of the Apostles verifies their future role in the development of Christianity. The presence of the Apostles shows the outreach of Jesus. Women, while not Apostles, hardly would have been admitted to the company of male figures so important to the unfolding of salvation had they been regarded as inferior. Second, these readings teach that the mercy of God unrequitingly is given those who humbly and sincerely ask for God’s forgiveness of their sins.

The Gospel does not give us the exact details of the sin of the woman who met Jesus. However, the sin committed by David in his liaison with the wife of Uriah, the Hittite, is clear. Together, the picture is vivid. The women, as well as David, were guilty of grave sin.

Yet, mercifully, God forgave them. The key for them, and now for us, is to give self totally to Christ, in trust and love.

Mary in our increasingly secular world

The month of May has been dedicated to the Virgin Mary for centuries—so long, in fact, that the precise origin of this Catholic devotion is lost in the mists of time. Still, it is a fitting devotion during what is arguably the most beautiful and colorful month of the year in most of the Northern Hemisphere. Living as we do at The Catholic University of America, with the Basilica of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the center of our campus, our students, faculty and staff have constant reminders of the Marian devotions I grow up with. It’s natural to wonder whether very many of today’s young Catholics learn them as we once did.

When I was a boy at St. Joseph School in my hometown, we had May crownings and prayed the rosary throughout the month. We, The Angelus at lunchtime. We sang Marian hymns (“Hail Holy Queen,” “Immaculate Mary,” “O Pious Virgin,” “Flowers of the Rarest”) at daily and all-school Masses. Today many parochial schools (like my own) have closed. Those that are open have very few students.

That’s not the only cultural change we have seen. Faith is a less visible feature of public life. It is crowded into private spaces, churches and homes. And as we find profane ways of talking about our affairs, the sacred has come a less palpable presence.

We incline more and more to picture God as the kind of God’s forgiveness, given in Christ’s mercy, is so great and unrequiting that those who repented and sinner’s forgiveness was extended.

The presence of the Apostles verifies their future role in the development of Christianity. The presence of the Apostles shows the outreach of Jesus. Women, while not Apostles, hardly would have been admitted to the company of male figures so important to the unfolding of salvation had they been regarded as inferior. Second, these readings teach that the mercy of God unrequitingly is given those who humbly and sincerely ask for God’s forgiveness of their sins.

The Gospel does not give us the exact details of the sin of the woman who met Jesus. However, the sin committed by David in his liaison with the wife of Uriah, the Hittite, is clear. Together, the picture is vivid. The women, as well as David, were guilty of grave sin.

Yet, mercifully, God forgave them. The key for them, and now for us, is to give self totally to Christ, in trust and love.
Kung-pao diplomacy?

Cardinal Pietro Parolin, Secretary of State of the Holy See, recently told an Italian journal that relations between the Vatican and the People’s Republic of China “are living a positive phase, as there have been signals from both sides that there is a wish to keep on talking in order to find together solutions to the problems of the presence of the Catholic Church in that huge country.” The cardinal continued by saying that “perspectives are promising,” and expressed the hope that “the blosson will flourish and bear good fruits.”

The language was flowery-diplomatic, but the message seemed clear: discussions were proceeding with regard to the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Vatican and Beijing. Which is curious, in that the PRC is not getting on very well with just about anyone else these days. Its saber-rattling in the South China Sea has got Vietnam and the Philippines nervous. Anti-Japanese propaganda from Beijing sources has been ratcheted up. Indian efforts to improve relations with China have gone essentially nowhere.

Then there is that new law being pushed by President Xi Jinping, which would drastically hinder the work of Chinese nongovernmental organizations and foreign human rights and pro-democracy agencies trying to aid their compatriots in China. And as if all that weren’t enough, President Xi’s regime has been cracking down on dissidents, including Christians who don’t kowtow to the party-regime’s demand to control everything that looks like civil society.

So why, one wonders, is the same PRC government that’s law was sure the family would be supportive of this decision as well. I believe both of these men made the right decision considering their advanced age and circumstances. Sometimes it is appropriate to hang on to life for as long as you can, and other times it’s best to surrender to your Creator. Both of these men have placed their lives in the hands of God. They might live a good number of years yet, and as of this publication, they were still very much alive. As it says in Deuteronomy 32:39 “Learn then that I, I alone, am God, and there is no God beside me. It is I who bring both death and life, I who inflict wounds and heal them, and from my hand there is no rescue.”

Blessed Jolenta of Poland

Feast Day June 12

The daughter of King Bela IV of Hungary and granddaughter of the emperor of Constantinople, this medieval princess was raised by her elder sister, St. Kunigunde, queen of Poland. Their family tree included other saints: Hedwig, Elizabeth of Hungary and Margaret of Hungary. Jolenta married a Polish duke whose charitable works earned him the popular name “Boleslaus the Pious.” After his death in 1279 and the marriage of two daughters, Jolenta, Kunigunde, also now widowed, and Jolenta’s youngest daughter entered a Poor Clares convent. Jolenta later became abbess of a convent she had founded with her husband. Also known as Helen of Poland and Yolanda of Poland, Jolenta was beatified in 1827. Mary is enshrined in Turin next to St. John Bosco, founder of the Salesians men’s order.

St. Jude repeats as girls’ champion, Patrick Finley leads St. Charles Boys’ team to victory

BY RON BUSCH

FORT WAYNE — The 2016 CYO City Track and Field Meet featured numerous repeat winners from last year’s meet. Last year’s girls’ champion St. Jude was once again finished on top in 2016. Rachel Landstoffer of St. Jude notched 3 first place finishes: in high jump (a repeat from last year), the 4X200 meter relay, and the 100 meter hurdles — setting a new CYO record. Other student-athletes with at least three first place finishes included Libby Bierbaum of St. John the Baptist, Fort Wayne. Libby scored blue ribbons in discus, shot-put, and the 4X100 meter relay. Dora Javins of St. John the Baptist, Fort Wayne, led all girls’ competitors with four firsts. On the boys’ side of the ledger Patrick Finley of St. Charles, dominated with 2 new CYO records on his way to four first place finishes this year. As reported last week, Finley set records in both the 100 meter dash and the 400 meter run. Finley also demonstrated his athleticism by claiming victory in the high jump. This made all three victories repeats of blue ribbons Patrick won last year. He also laid claim to being the only three event winner in boys’ competition this year. Team-mates testified “that his track shoes were still smoking the morning after the meet.”

Immigration, citizenship training hosted by Catholic Charities

BY STEPHANIE A. PATKA

FORT WAYNE — On June 2, Catholic Charities hosted a training event called “Learning the Proper Steps of Immigration and Citizenship.” Focusing on those who work closely with immigrant populations, the fifth annual training session attracted more than 85 people from Elkhart, South Bend, Warsaw, Plymouth, Indianapolis and Auburn. Attendees included employees from many local social service agencies, representatives of Catholic Charities’ legal aid and immigration programs, as well as pro- fessionals, law enforcement, diocesan staff, priests and many other individuals.

Catholic Charities hosted this engaging event to raise community awareness and understanding of immigration issues in the community and to offer a public platform for individuals to have their questions addressed by professionals in the field.

Luz Ostrognai, BIA Accredited Representative and Immigration Supervisor at Catholic Charities stated, “Immigration is a complex topic and it is important that immigrants and refugees understand their rights and responsibilities and have safe, qualified professionals available to assist them in processing paperwork.” Attendees learned about the History of Immigration to the United States, citizenship process and an overview of some humanitarian immigration relief options including the Violence Against Women Act (VAWA) and other visa options for individuals migrating for their own safety. Bishop Rhoades provided opening remarks along with Catholic Charities CEO, Gloria Whitcraft. Expert presenters included Cecilia Depalubos of the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services in Indianapolis; Barbara Szweda, Immigration Attorney at Catholic Charities; and Susan Schreiver, Senior Attorney at Catholic Legal Immigration Network, Inc. These specialists provided in-depth presentations in their areas of expertise. The afternoon closed with a panel discussion open to audience questions.

For Catholic Charities, this was an opportunity to give pertinent information to other organizations in order to advocate for immigrants and refugees about their rights and responsibilities. Additionally it was an educational tool for other organizations on how to remove barriers that prevent our immigrant brothers and sisters from becoming full members of their communities.

The mission of Catholic Charities is “to serve those in need as Christ would have us do.” Development Director Liz Flaherty commented, “Our faith teaches us the rights of migrants, the importance of keeping families together, and the dignity of every human person. Through this training, Catholic Charities enables more individuals and organizations in our communities to be aware of the legal options available for immigrants and refugees and to provide reliable assistance for vulnerable individuals in applying for legal residency or citizenship in the United States.”

Father Richard Hire to enjoy retirement at Lake Wawasee

BY BONNIE ELBERSON

SYRACUSE — Father Richard Hire, pastor at St. Martin de Porres Church for nearly a decade, is looking forward to retirement on Lake Wawasee. A Fort Wayne native and member of the Hire’s Auto Parts family, Father Hire attended St. Peter Catholic Community and elementary school in the city as a youngster. He notes that his family was German and St. Peter’s attracted those of German heritage, while “all the Irish kids went to St. Patrick.” He is the oldest of nine children and many of his siblings remain in the Fort Wayne area.

Confident in his pursuit of a priestly vocation, Father Hire entered seminary studies after completing eighth grade. He attended Our Lady of the Lake Seminary on Lake Wawasee’s north shore, then continued at Mount St. Mary’s Seminary in Cincinnati. He was ordained by then-Bishop Leo Pursley at Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception in Fort Wayne on May 30, 1970.

Father Hire said both sides of the family were very religious and an uncle on his mom’s side was a priest, which influenced his decision to join the priesthood.

His first assignment was assistant pastor at St. Charles in Fort Wayne, then he became principal at Huntington Catholic High School. He was diocesan director of religious education and for one year also pastor at St. Peter’s in Fort Wayne. Father Hire was religious education director at St. Patrick in Fort Wayne and then was pastor at St. Thomas in Elkhart where he stayed for “quite a while.” From St. Thomas he went to St. John the Baptist in New Haven and then Queen of Peace in Mishawaka before moving to St. Martin de Porres in Syracuse.

A one-time world traveler, Father Hire is content to put travel plans aside since “they’re shooting planes out of the sky” and stay closer to home in retirement. He will continue to provide assistance for parishes when needed, he says.

When he was able to travel he liked to visit destinations of biblical and religious importance. He’s traveled to Australia, New Zealand, South America, and most of Europe.

Father Hire wrote a column for Today’s Catholic following the travels of St. Paul. He said showing people the various religious sites throughout the world “showed the accuracy of the Bible and our faith ... seeing it with your own eyes makes it real and not like a fairy tale.”

A reception is planned for Sunday, June 12, following the 11 a.m. Mass at St. Martin’s so that parishioners and friends may wish him good luck. He hopes to continue lake activities while in retirement at a Bay Point condominium which is family-owned. “My family wanted me to retire because of my age,” he says, and he will happily enjoy the beauty of late evening sunsets across the water.

FORT WAYNE — On May 31, 2016, three men entered St. Andrews Church on the Feast of the Visitation of the Blessed Virgin Mary to make their Solemn Profession of Perpetual Vows for the Franciscan Friars Minor. The candidates that professed their vows are Brother Francis Mary of Our Lady, Refuge of Sinners, Brother Seraphin Maria of Our Lady of Divine Mercy and Brother Bonaventure of Our Lady, Spouse of St. Joseph.

The vows were received by Bishop Kevin C. Rhoades. A Profession of Final Vows witnesses a public profession to live the consecrated life, in this case, within the fraternity of the Franciscan Friars Minor.

During the Mass, each candidate approached Bishop Rhoades and requested to make their profession of vows in which they promise to live after the manner of the Holy Gospel, living by the constitutions of the Franciscan Friars Minor and live in Totus Tuus Consecration to the Immaculate, in obedience, without property and in chastity. In his homily, Bishop stated that consecration and mission always go together. “Mary’s consecration was for the greatest mission in the history of the world: to bring Christ into the world. She said “yes” to the Father’s will, opened herself to the Holy Spirit, and conceived the Son of God in her womb.” In a similar way, Brother Seraphin, Brother Francis, and Brother Bonaventure, with deep faith in God, say “yes” to God’s call to consecrated life in the Church. Bishop Rhoades called the three brothers to live out their consecration in service to the Gospel, bringing Christ to the world through their witness, service in charity with special attention to the poor, those on the margins of society, the suffering and those in varied states of affliction.
